U. S. Warns Russians Against Flying Planes In Berlin Corridors

Americans Also Reject Inspection For Automobiles Leaving Capital

Berlin, July 10 (U.P.).—The United States warned the Russians today that their planes will be flying at their own risk if they insist on carrying out planned "instrument maneuvers" along the western Allies' air corridors to Berlin, which are crowded with American and British transports carrying supplies to the blockaded city.

Simultaneously, an authoritative American spokesman said the United States will not knuckle under to a new Soviet order claiming the right to inspect automobiles leaving this blockaded city.

The new American "get-tough" tactics came within 24 hours after publication of western protests to the Kremlin, demanding the Soviet Union cease its "intolerable" starvation siege of Berlin.

The Russians announced yesterday they planned daily instrument training flights along the air corridor to Berlin "near airfields and at logical places" without notifying the Berlin air safety center.

American officials said the Russian move would endanger the lives of Allied pilots and might be designed to force a halt in the mass flights of food planes to Berlin.

In another move threatening the air shuttle service, the Russians protested to American and British officials against "systematic violation of the most elementary air security rules."

The protest, made public by the Russian-licensed German news agency ADN, was carried in similar letters dispatched July 9 to Lieut. Gen. George P. Hays, deputy American military governor, and Gen. Nevill Brownjohn, the British deputy.

The letters, signed by Lieutenant General Lukjantschenko, chief of staff of the Soviet military administration, protested to the British against alleged British violations and to the Americans against alleged American violations.

Of the new Soviet order claiming the right to inspect automobiles the American spokesman said: "By international agreement we have the right of free access to

New Soviet Order Put to the Test

Frankfurt, Germany, July 10 (U.P.).—The United Press decided today to test the new Soviet order.

A reporter drove to the Soviet liaison mission here with his passport and a Russian translation of American orders authorizing him to go to Berlin by "air and/or motor vehicles."

"Of course you can go to Berlin," the Russian liaison officer smiled.

"Just pick up your pass at our consulate."

"Where is that?"

"In Berlin."

Fears War if Berlin Is Lost

Churchill Says Red Leaders Quarrel Over Foreign Policy

Woodford, England, July 10 (U.P.).—Winston Churchill said today the "13 men in the Kremlin" apparently have fallen out over Russia's foreign policy, and warned of a possible shooting war, if the Allies let the Soviet have Berlin.

Winston Churchill

Churchill said the Communist Party's disinheritance of Yugoslavia, coming simultaneously with the Berlin blockade, indicates Premier Josef Stalin and his 12 top Communist leaders in Moscow are in disagreement over their policies abroad.

"There is no rational process by which we can understand the 'quarrel' with Tito (Premier-Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia) at the same time the Berlin crisis is forced to a head," Churchill told 4000 cheering constituents.

The Conservative leader praised Laborite Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin's "firm stand" in refusing to yield to the Russians in Berlin.

"We are met here in an anxious hour," he declared. ". . . If we yield upon this grave issue, we should destroy the best chance now open to us of escaping a third world war.

"It must never be forgotten that with Russia we are dealing not with a great nation that can express free will, but with 13 men in the Kremlin, who made themselves masters of the brave Russian people, and who rule them with far more dictatorship than ever shown by any Russian Czar since the days of Ivan the Terrible.

"No one can tell what these 13 holocausts in the Kremlin will do. They do not reason as we do in the Western world. They declare openly they have no moral standards as we understand them.

"Their prime interest is to preserve personal power over hundreds of millions of people of many different races, whom they rule with an iron rod.

"We cannot tell what internal stresses are at work in this grim oligarchy. It would seem to me they must be very severe at present.

"The safest course for us and

Long Struggle Over Berlin Held Certain

Russia May Lift Blockade Under Some Conditions

By The Associated Press

The United States, Britain and France appeared certain yesterday to be in for a long, costly and dangerous struggle to maintain themselves in Berlin if Russia rejects their demand to lift the blockade of the city.

Both Washington and London expect a prompt answer from Moscow. Officials in the western capitals were reported sticking close to their telephones this weekend in anticipation of a reply.

Officials here continued hopeful that the Russians might relax their Berlin stranglehold somewhat but from the German capital itself came evidence which could indicate a rejection of the western power demand.

Notes Restricted to Berlin

The Russian controlled German news agency told Berliners that the notes which Washington, London and Paris released Friday night were confined only to the Berlin situation. It said they did not refer to the recent position on Germany taken by the Russian and other eastern European Foreign Ministers in a conference at Warsaw.

Apparently this meant that in the absence of any new instructions from the Kremlin or any warning that new instructions should be expected, the purveyors of Soviet propaganda were sticking to basic Russian policy on Berlin and assuming that it would remain unchanged.

The aims of this policy, according to the opinions of both Washington and London officials, are two:

1. The Moscow plan is to use the squeeze on the western powers in Berlin to try to force them to hold another meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers. This would reopen the whole issue of western German unity against which Moscow has been making a bitter and determined fight.

2. If the first objective can't be achieved and if Germany and Europe are to be split, the aim is to force the western nations out of

4 More Red Parties Snub Tito Session

Communist Groups Decline Invitation to Belgrade Congress

London, July 10 (AP).—Following Russia's cue, four European Communist Parties announced today they are refusing to attend Yugoslavia's Communist Party Congress.

Marshal Tito and his Yugoslav Reds are in disgrace, suspended by the nine-nation Communist Information Bureau, because they insist on equality among Europe's Communist organizations and not just a place in the queue behind Stalin's party.

The Czechoslovak, French, Italian and Hungarian Communists all disclosed today they will not be guests at the Yugoslav meeting which begins July 21. The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug announced Monday that all Communist parties had been invited.

Soviet Mission in Albania

Russia revealed its "No" Wednesday.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported today that a Russian military mission has arrived on Albanian soil. Albania warned Yugoslavia this week she was taking "strong measures" to guard her borders against "hostile elements."

Tass, quoting the Albanian telegraph agency, said the mission, headed by Colonel General Grishin, Russian war hero, arrived in Tirana Thursday "to participate in national military festivities."

Tanjug distributed a long article here scheduled to appear today in Borba, Yugoslav Communist paper in Belgrade.

The article, by Moshe Piyade, defends Tito's leadership against what it calls "untruth and slanders." It says the other Cominform members lost "all sense of usual morals, not to speak of Communist morals."

Showdown Near

The hard-faced attitude of the Red neighbors who earlier hailed Tito as "brother" indicated a nearing showdown on the two interpretations of communism which already have shaken the Red world harder than anything since

'No More Corregidors'

Mediterranean Fleet Is U. S. 'Policeman,' Radford Says

Chautauqua, N. Y., July 10 (AP).—There will be no more Corregidors if war should break out in Europe, America's Vice Chief of Naval Operations declared today.

Vice Adm. Arthur W. Radford said that in event of sudden hostilities, the Mediterranean Fleet would let America reinforce and supply its troops and civilians or also evacuate them.

"Never again should we have to abandon our men as was the case at Corregidor," the admiral said in an address prepared for the Chautauqua Institution's Diamond Jubilee celebration.

Radford spoke just a day after the Navy's announcement in Washington that two ships of the Mediterranean Fleet—escort carrier Palau and the cargo vessel Marquette—had successfully evacuated American military and United Nations personnel from Palestine.

The major portion of this fleet—the U. S. Sixth Task Fleet commanded by Vice Admiral Forrest P. Sherman—is now concentrated in the eastern Mediterranean.

Radford, calling the Navy a "precision instrument of diplomacy to help maintain the peace," said foreigners realize the full strength of American might will not be used unless there has been a previous political catastrophe.

"However, they have a different impression of ships which are cap-

Town Paves Streets, Then Hunts Manholes

Ann Arbor, Mich., July 10 (AP).—This college town has lost its manholes. So it's trying to find them again.

A man has been hired to wander about the streets with a mine detector in search of them.

City officials explained that the streets recently received a new coating of asphalt. All the manhole covers were covered up.

Mexico Gets Note From U. S. About Press Criticism

Mexico City, July 10 (AP).—U. S. Ambassador Walter Thurston today personally handed to Foreign Secretary Torres Bodet a note expressing regret at Mexican newspaper comment on presence of Americans at the scene of a plane crash.

The note spoke of the expressed resentment of newspapers at actions of U. S. personnel and the presence of seven armed U. S. Air Force men at the scene of a plane wreck July 2 in which eight Americans and eight Mexicans were killed.

A crowd demonstrated at the U. S. Embassy last night. A second-story window was broken by a stone and mud was thrown at the building.

The Ambassador, in his note, said the U. S. planes and Air Force squad of seven came to aid in finding the plane on Arizaba Peak, and with the hope of rescuing any survivors. He said the planes and men came after consultation with Tomas de Leon, Mexican civil aeronautics representative at Brownsville, Texas.

Jews Wrest Lydda Field From Arabs

Airport Captured In Surprise Foray; Sniper Fires Upon U. S. Consul's Car

Cairo, July 10 (AP).—Jewish troops stormed and captured Lydda Airport, a major prize of the Palestine war, today, and the Arabs announced they would not agree to a new 10-day truce.

Abdul Rahman Azzam Pasha, secretary-general of the Arab League, said the Arab countries could not accept the proposal for another cease-fire made by Count Folke Bernadotte, the United Nations mediator. He said the Arabs could not even agree to a three-day truce extension.

The Israeli government accepted the 10-day extension on condition the Arabs would do likewise.

The Arab League, while refusing to heed the U. N. mediator's plea for a new Palestine truce, told the United Nations in a message yesterday that Count Folke Bernadotte should continue his Holy Land peace efforts. Story on Page 5.

Surprise Raid on Field

The Jewish army said its military operations were continuing satisfactorily and announced that Lydda Airfield had been captured from the Arabs in a surprise raid early today. Israeli spokesmen indicated their forces had held the air base against an Arab counterattack this afternoon.

Arab and Jewish planes were thrown into the growing fight. Jewish sources said Israeli bombers attacked the village of Kuneitra, 12 miles across the Syrian border, which was reported to be one of the main Syrian supply bases for an attempted drive into western Galilee.

The Jews also said Israeli fighters had shot down a Syrian bomber near Mishmar Hayarden, an Arab-held village south of Lake Huia.

In Jerusalem, a furious attack by Jewish mortars struck at Christian convents and a hospital on the Way of Sorrows, where Christ carried his cross. A Jewish mortar shell killed one Armenian woman, and wounded another when it hit the Armenian convent of St. James near the Zion Gate.

U. S. Consul Shot At

United States Consul General John J. MacDonald, whose predecessor was killed by a sniper, was fired on today. A hidden gunner put a bullet through his car, but the consul was not hurt.

Consul General Thomas C. Wasson and U. S. Navy Radioman Herbert M. Walker, attached to the consulate, were killed by a sniper

Last Opposition to Truman Collapses; 1944 Civil Rights Plank Backed 'In Principle'

Platform Group, In Preliminaries, Agrees to Support Its General Lines

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, July 10.—A five-man subcommittee, working in strict secrecy, agreed tonight on "the principle" of the 1944 Democratic civil rights plank amid open threats of a convention floor fight in the sizzling intersectional issue.

The so-called "secret five," meeting in a hotel hideout, talked over the party's civil rights split and agreed the best way to stem it is by holding to the general lines of the 1944 Democratic stand.

Nothing in Writing

Nothing was reduced to writing, however, and the recommendations of the closely-knit unit must still run two resolutions committee hurdles before anything reaches the convention floor.

Notice of a floor fight, unless the party takes a strengthened civil rights stand, was served by Mayor Hubert Humphrey of Minneapolis. Humphrey, member of an 18-man drafting group that gets the next crack at the platform, claimed a majority in that group for a stronger plank but conceded this might be upset in the full resolutions committee.

"There will be a minority report of at least one unless the plank carries the basic Truman civil rights points," predicted the liberal Minnesotan.

Prospect of Floor Battle

Southern members, for their part threatened a floor fight if the plank goes beyond the party's 1944 stand or fails to make some conciliatory States' rights gesture to the South.

Between the extremes, Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath, United States Senator from Rhode Island, continued to press for the generalized 1944 declaration, but conceded there is a prospect of a floor battle even over that.

McGrath said the plank provided a base for Mr. Truman's 10-point civil rights recommendations to Congress. He said he still felt a restatement of it "would reduce floor discussion to a minimum."

"The only way to handle it is to allow everyone to express what they think on the floor, and then vote," he told a press conference.

There was grumbling meanwhile from some of those members of the 18-man drafting unit who were not included on the five-man inner

Douglas Says He's Not a Candidate

Barkley's Friends Boom Him As Truman's Running Mate

Sen. Alben W. Barkley — Gov. Mon C. Wallgren — Senator Scott Lucas

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, July 10.—A 1948 Democratic ticket of Truman and Barkley was being talked about in some usually well-informed circles tonight.

U. S. Senator Alben W. Barkley is 70, which makes him six years older than President Truman. However, he is a robust and widely respected party wheelhorse. Moreover, he would be acceptable both to Northern liberals and to Southern conservatives who have been fighting Mr. Truman because of his civil-rights program.

Actually, the Democratic vice presidential nomination is wide open.

President Truman, who is assured of nomination for a full four-year term, has not made up his mind about a running mate.

Mr. Truman, The Washington Post was told on good authority, is waiting for some reaction from the delegates gathering here for the Democratic National Convention, hoping that sentiment will crystallize for some man for the No. 2 place on the ticket.

The "boom" for Senator Barkley was set off late this afternoon by Leslie Biffle, secretary of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee. He made the prediction—speaking for himself—that the Kentucky law-maker would be Mr. Truman's running mate.

Later, Senator Brien McMahon of Connecticut, himself a vice presidential possibility, said the mention of Barkley "strikes a very warm spot in my heart."

Senator Spessard Holland of Florida said, apropos the Barkley suggestion, "It would suit me fine."

Only Fading Dixie Die-Hards and ADA Bloc Stand in Way Of 1-Ballot Victory

(More Politics, News and Pictures Pages 2, 3 and 4)

By J. R. Wiggins
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, July 10.—Democratic delegates, all set to nominate Truman on the first ballot, polished off the rest of the opposition today.

All that was left of the "stop-Truman" forces tonight was a knot of die-hard Southern Democrats who plan a States-rights caucus at 4 p. m. Sunday and a cluster of ADA New Dealers that Leon Henderson is still trying to rally behind Associate Justice William Orville Douglas. The Southerners have no plans beyond oratory and rededication to principles and the New Dealers no longer have even a candidate.

Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) did not even offer his resolution asking President Truman to withdraw when the National Committee met at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel this morning. Chairman J. Howard McGrath made his retreat as uncomfortable as possible. He invited any proposed resolutions. Then he observed that Senator Johnston had intended to offer a resolution. He called on the Senator for his resolution. Johnston glumly acknowledged he had no resolution to offer.

Californians in Angry Mood

California's big delegation, which National Committeeman James Roosevelt had tried to put in the anti-Truman column, came to town today in an angry mood. After two hours of wrangling the delegation tabled a resolution to call for the resignation of James Roosevelt and avoided another vote to further commit to Truman the delegation which already is bound to Truman under the primary law.

State caucuses of several Southern delegations tomorrow may see some muttering, particularly on civil rights and State rights issues, but they are not likely to alter the outlook for the earliest possible first-ballot nomination of President Truman.

Alabamans to Caucus

The Alabama delegation will caucus at 2 p. m. This session will be important to the convention arrangements if not vital to the outcome. The delegation is so instructed that it cannot vote for President Truman. One faction, headed by Andy Ellis, would like to have the Alabamans walk out of the convention. Another headed by Senator Lister Hill, is opposed to this. Truman supporters have hoped that the delegation might refrain from voting.

Tonight 10 delegates of the Hill group decided at a meeting to place the name of Senator Richard B. Russell of Georgia in nomination when Alabama, first State on the roll, is called at the nominating session. The nominating speech will be made by either Hill or Roy D. McCord of Gadsden.

The Texas delegation also will caucus at 2 p. m. Sunday.

Kentucky will caucus Sunday or

Baby Killed Under Auto Of Her Uncle

18-Month-Old Girl Crushed Beneath Car Being Backed Up

It had been uphill all the way for tiny Marjorie Murphy, 18-month-old daughter of John Joseph Murphy.

In her brief span of life she'd been in and out of the hospital six times because of a disorder to her digestive tract. It's only been in the past four months that she had shown improvement.

And then yesterday, in terrible swiftness, tragedy struck down the child while she was at play. She was crushed to death beneath the front wheel of a backing auto driven by her uncle, James S. Dinnis, jr. The accident occurred perhaps 20 feet from the Murphy door, at No. 8 Port Green sw.

Daughter of Meatcutter

John Joseph Murphy, 30, a meatcutter, sat in the kitchen of his home, head buried in his hands. There wasn't anything to say, or do. His wife, Grace, also 30, sat beside him, eyes straight ahead, body taut, nerves under rigid control.

The police had been there and gone, and now it was 2:30 p. m., four hours after the tragedy.

"She was the best little baby you ever seen," the father said quietly, his slow words breaking the silence. His wife, remembering, smiled sadly.

"She'd been in the hospital six times—she only weighed 17 pounds now," Murphy went on. "She was just starting to get around."

How did it happen?

Trusty Doing Life Escapes From Lorton

Carnell, Who Killed Owner of Bus Line, Walks Off Grounds

A trusty serving a life term for killing a Washington bus line owner escaped from the Lorton Reformatory yesterday after serving 17 years.

The inmate, William J. Carnell, 54, walked away from his work in the landscape division of the reformatory about 5 p. m., Donald C. Clemmer, director of District Corrections Department, said. Two pairs of bloodhounds were put on the trail immediately.

Carnell was serving a life sentence for the second degree murder of Louis Bush, 60-year-old president and owner of the Gray Lines Motor Tours, on October 6, 1930.

The shooting occurred in the rear of Bush's home at 3534 Fulton st. nw., during an attempted holdup just after Bush had parked his car in his garage. Bush described his assailant to police before he died.

Carnell, in his defense, contended that the death weapon was held by Bush when it was fired. Bush had wrested it from his grasp during a tussle, he said.

Carnell was confined in Lorton January 10, 1931. He had been a trusty for the past three years, Clemmer said.

Carnell's is the "first escape or walkout from Lorton in two years," Clemmer said.

At the time of his escape Carnell was wearing a blue shirt and blue denim trousers. He was described as 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing 135 pounds, very tanned, with brown eyes and graying hair.

The prisoner had been "quite worried" about a heart condition, Clemmer said.

Seven Persons Saved

4 Drown in Nearby Waters, 3 When Rowboats Capsize

Four persons were reported drowned in the District area yesterday, among them a Washington couple and an Arlington man.

John Robertson and his wife, Jeannie, of 1836 Potomac ave. se., were drowned when their 20-foot rowboat capsized off Breezy Point in Calvert County, Md., about 6:15 p. m., Maryland State Police reported.

Two other occupants of the boat were rescued, police said. Robertson was identified as an engineman for the Pennsylvania Railroad on the New York-Washington run.

In a similar accident, also at Breezy Point at about the same time, Martin Costella, 37, of the George Pickett Homes, Columbia pike and S. Court House rd., Arlington, was drowned, while five companions escaped, police reported.

In Montgomery County, volunteer firemen from three departments dragged the Tridelphia Lake above Brighton Dam last night for the body of an unidentified man believed lost. The drowning was reported about 8:45 p. m. to the Silver Spring Fire Board, but no details were available.

Meanwhile, continued absence of another Washington man led to the belief that he also may have been drowned Thursday at Breezy Point.

Police said Lawrence L. East, 64, 733 6th st. nw., was reported to have rented a boat that day which was later found by fishermen a mile off shore. A hat, pair of glasses and a partially filled whisky bottle were found in the otherwise empty boat, police said.

'Deplored' by Directors

District Bar to Investigate Tamm's Interim Appointment

A committee of the District Bar Association will be named shortly to investigate the legality of the interim appointment of Edward Allen Tamm as associate justice of District Court.

The decision was made by the association's directors at a meeting Friday night in the office of F. Joseph Donohue, attorney.

The directors adopted a resolution which "deplores the recent appointment" of Tamm "after he had previously failed of confirmation by the United States Senate."

The association president, Lowry N. Coe, was directed to appoint a committee to "investigate questions which this recess appointment poses." He said this would include investigation "of the question whether this congresional recess is within the meaning of that specified in the Constitution."

Tamm, former assistant to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, was sworn in as associate justice on June 28. The recess appointment was made June 22, after the Senate had failed to confirm an earlier nomination.

The appointment was opposed by the District Bar Association and also by the American Bar Association's special committee on judiciary and the Federation of Citizens Associations. It was supported by Senator H. Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) and several Justice Department officials.

Army Ambulance Driver Fined for 'Emergency' Run

An "emergency" run of an Army ambulance down Alabama ave. se. Friday night proved too fast and no emergency yesterday in Municipal Court.

Motorcycle Patrolman Arthur R. Newcomb testified he had to chase the ambulance at 65 miles an hour for a mile. Then the driver, Pvt. Leroy D. Crosby, 20, of Andrews Field exclaimed that delay might prove dangerous to his patient.

"Wait a minute," said Newcomb, "didn't I see the 'patient' up here in the front seat while I was chasing you?"

The policeman said when he looked into the rear of the ambulance the patient, who was not identified, got up, stepped out of the ambulance and lit a cigarette.

That ended the emergency, as far as Newcomb was concerned. Later he checked with Andrews Field authorities and learned that Private Crosby's patient had been to Walter Reed Hospital for X-rays of a possible leg injury.

Judge Walter J. Casey fined Private Crosby $15 for unreasonable speed.

Aid to Truman at Chicago in 1944 Started McGrath on Way to Party Chairmanship

Introducing Harry S. Truman as "the next President of the United States" is nothing new for Democratic National Chairman James Howard McGrath.

At a Democratic rally in Pawtucket, R. I., four years ago, McGrath presented Senator Harry S. Truman, vice presidential candidate, "as the next President of the United States."

McGrath's slip of the tongue did him no harm, however. Neither did the Democratic convention in Chicago a short time before.

There in the lobby of the Stevens Hotel McGrath ran into Senator Truman and asked him if he were a candidate for Vice President. Mr. Truman replied he was trying to find out himself what his status was. McGrath told him that if his hat went into the ring Rhode Island was his.

J. HOWARD McGRATH
Convention's 'emcee'

McGrath Made Seconding Speech

When Franklin D. Roosevelt's finger pointed at the Missouri Senator for his running mate, McGrath was asked, and made, a seconding speech.

Later, as McGrath walked among the howling delegates in the humid Chicago Stadium, Senator Truman reached out from an aisle seat and said to him, "Son, I will never forget you."

President Truman had ben in the White House but six months when he nominated McGrath for Solicitor General of the United States. McGrath, serving his third term as Governor of Rhode Island, resigned to accept.

A year later he resigned again, to run successfully for Senator. The next year he took on the additional job of national chairman of the party.

In the Democratic Party, frequently described as a coalition rather than a party, gregariousness is a special assets. If memberships are an indication, McGrath in his smooth, nonbackslapping way is gregarious indeed. He belongs to at least 29 clubs, professional associations, fraternal orders and charitable organizations. Their listing occupies half his space in Who's Who.

They include such organizations as the Rhode Island Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, New England Association of Chiefs of Police, University Glee Club of Providence, Friendly Society of St. Patrick and the Foresters.

The Foresters played a considerable part in McGrath's early life. His father, James J. McGrath, was a paid secretary of the Foresters, a fraternal organization selling insurance. The senior McGrath traveled about New England selling insurance "24 hours a day." The son, now 44, frequently traveled with him, learning the art of winning people and influencing friends that later became so useful.

At 16 McGrath, who could outorate his father, decided to go into politics, and before he was able to vote was active in the political machine of United States Senator Peter Goelet Gerry.

Curiously enough McGrath and Gael Sullivan lived in the same block in those early East Providence days and attended the same Catholic church and schools. Later the paths of the two—who never seem to have had much fondness for each other—separated, only to come together again in Washington with Sullivan as the party's executive director.

McGrath was 27 when he became city solicitor of Central Falls, R. I., serving until 1935, when he became United States District Attorney, an office he left five years later for the governorship.

In addition to holding public office and toiling for the party, the hard-working, coldly determined Irishman has managed to accumulate a fortune that he recently estimated at between $100,000 and $200,000, and nearer the first figure than the second. A sizable part of it was made in real estate deals, for which McGrath has an aptitude.

McGrath graduated from Providence College in 1926 and Boston University in 1929. That same year he married a youthful sweetheart, Estelle A. Cadorette. The couple, whose fathers had been friends and fellow Foresters, have a 10-year-old son, David. In Washington they live at 2717 Chesapeake st. nw.

Party Pledge Asked as Price Of Va. Seats

Richmond, Va., July 10 (AP).—A group of Virginia Democrats opposed to the present leadership of the party in Virginia will appear before the credentials committee of the Democratic National Convention Monday afternoon to protest seating of the Virginia delegation unless the delegates individually subscribe to a party loyalty pledge.

Martin A. Hutchinson, Richmond attorney and a leader of the anti-organization wing of the party, will head the group, which will include Col. Francis Pickens Miller, of Charlottesville, and Henry H. Fowler, of Alexandria. Hutchinson also invited Mayor Horace H. Edwards of Richmond to join them but Edwards was out of the city today and his views could not be obtained.

Chairman Mary Norton of the credentials committee agreed to hear the protest after Hutchinson had wired her that "vital and important questions" relative to their participation should be "determined by the Democratic Party at this time."

"The Virginia convention, at which delegates were elected, adopted a formal platform enunciating the doctrine 'that the national Democratic Party is merely a federation of State parties and that each such State party has the right and authority to determine its own course of action'" Hutchinson told Mrs. Norton in his telegram.

"The said convention also by formal resolution empowered the Democratic State Central Committee of Virginia to reconvene the State convention at a later date for the unexpressed but apparent purpose of repudiating the actions of the national convention, if such actions be not in accord with the views and wishes of our so-called party leaders here in Virginia. The aforesaid suggested action may be taken under a recently enacted law by the Virginia Legislature, which act is known as the 'Tuck anti-Truman law.'

"We most respectfully protest the right of Virginia's delegates, under these conditions, to participate in the national convention unless they are individually willing to sign and subscribe to a loyalty pledge similar to that found in the Virginia Democratic Party plan."

The State party plan provides that "no person shall be nominated for or elected to any office or party honor by any Democratic convention unless (if requested by any member of the Democratic Party) he shall subscribe to a similar pledge" to that which local committees may exact of their delegates to conventions.

This pledge is: "I . . . do state upon my honor that I am a member of the Democratic Party; that I supported all the nominees of that party in the last preceding election, in which I participated and in which the Democratic nominee or nominees had opposition; and I hereby promise on my honor to support all of the nominees of said party at the next ensuing general election."

Edwards, long identified with the dominant Democratic faction in Virginia, retired as State chairman at the convention here July 2 and in a speech told the delegates they should abide by the decisions of the national convention or stay away from Philadelphia and secede from the party. Simultaneously, in a press release, he announced his "irrevocable" candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor in 1949.

political leader said at one point that Barkley was his choice.

Just before this, Arvey, in a television broadcast, had indorsed Justice William O. Douglas for the second place on the ticket. Told that Douglas had declared that he would not leave the Supreme Court bench, Arvey pointed to Senator Barkley, who was standing nearby speaking for the newsreels, and said:

"Then that man would get my vote. It is a pity he was not nominated for President four years ago."

Later Arvey made still a further statement—this time to the effect that the Illinois delegation was for Douglas for vice president and had no other candidate.

Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said that Douglas had written to him some time ago, asking him to use his influence to see that his name was not put in nomination.

Justice Douglas himself, in a statement at La Grande, Ore., said he does not plan to quit the high tribunal for either the Democratic Presidential or Vice Presidential nominations.

"I Am Not a Candidate"

"I am not a candidate, have not been a candidate and do not plan to be a candidate," Douglas said. "I do not plan to resign from the Supreme Court."

Justice Douglas said he planned to make a statement next week releasing the Oregon delegates who are pledged to vote for him for Vice President. The delegation became his in the Oregon primary when 5635 voters gave him a write-in vote on the ballots.

Asked in Oregon whether he would have anything further to say on the matter, Justice Douglas made the laconic remark, "Perhaps."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming, long an avowed candidate for the Vice Presidency, disclosed today that his name would be placed in nomination by Gov. Lester C. Hunt of his home State.

Former Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago said that Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois would make a "dynamic" vice presidential candidate, but wouldn't say whether the Illinois delegation would place Lucas' name in nomination.

Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City told a reporter he thought Gov. Mon Wallgren of Washington might be the choice. He referred to Wallgren's recent White House visit and his close personal friendship with Mr. Truman.

Also still being mentioned for second place were:

Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas; Senator Millard Tydings of Maryland; Gov. William P. Lane, jr., of Maryland; W. Averell Harriman, roving Ambassador of the Marshall Plan; Senator Francis J. Myers of Pennsylvania; Secretary of State George C. Marshall and Representative John W. McCormack of Massachusetts.

O'Conor to Seek Pledge of Party On Loan to U. N.

Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.) said last night he would propose a plank in the Democratic Party platform pledging support of a 65 million dollar United States loan for construction of United Nations headquarters in New York.

Legislation authorizing the loan passed the Senate last month but was not acted on by the House.

O'Conor is a member of a Senate subcommittee on relations with international organizations. He said in a statement that "if we are to maintain America's prestige in the United Nations, we must meticulously fulfill the commitments made by our officially designated representatives."

He said it was of utmost importance that the U. N. headquarters be established in this country.

circle. One said he thought the group was "kind of packed."

Told of the rumblings, Resolutions Chairman Francis J. Myers (Pa.) said he "couldn't appoint everybody, but I'd be glad to swap my place."

Myers said the blueprint group in any case will not recommend a complete platform.

"There is no inclination to toss something out and tell them to ratify it," he said. "The idea is to suggest language for the subcommittee and the full committee to bite into."

Reports persisted that Mr. Truman's personal version of the 1948 platform has already reached Philadelphia, but Myers denied this. He said various members of the Cabinet, however, were invited to submit memoranda on matters within their departments and this material is before the group. Asked is the White House "cleared" the Cabinet data, he said he did not know.

Chairman McGrath said the President will be consulted on the proposed platform, adding: "If it comes into my hands I will see that he knows what's in it."

Appointments to the so-called "secret five" blueprint group meanwhile were completed with the designation of Mrs. Florence M. Lynch of Iowa to work with it. Previously Myers, who heads it, enlisted these others: Senator Scott Lucas (Ill.), Solicitor General Philip S. Perlman (Md.), and former Gov. Dan Moody (Tex.). All but Moody, who balks at the President's civil rights program, are strong supporters of the Truman administration.

McGrath told reporters he hopes the platform calls flatly for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act. There has been talk of the party taking a less specific stand. A majority of congressional Democrats voted to override Mr. Truman's Taft-Hartley veto.

New support for clearcut repeal of the labor law came from the California delegation caucus. The delegation voted also for a Federal aid to education plank, support for the Israel government, public housing features of the Taft-Wagner-Ellender bill, and the President's civil rights program.

McGrath said there is a "secondary" chance of a scrap on the tidelands oil issue, but the civil rights split remains the only real floor threat.

Asked if he favored yielding to Southern demands for a States rights offset to the 1944 civil rights plank, McGrath told his press conference:

"I would have no objection to a States rights plank if it did not nullify the force and effect of our civil rights stand."

A reporter asked if that was possible. McGrath said he could "conceive" of such a States rights stand:

The 40-word 1944 civil rights plank, which the five-man drafting unit is pushing as a compromise, reads:

"We believe that racial and religious minorities have the right to live, develop, and vote equally with all citizens and share the rights that are guaranteed by our Constitution. Congress should exert its full constitutional powers to protect these rights."

Most of the Southerners would take it, some Dixie die-hards want to strike out the last sentence.

But spokesmen for 21 national Negro organizations told the committee it was "unsatisfactory" to them, and liberal wing Democrats, led by Mayor Humphrey, backed them up.

Humphrey told reporters the plank must include at least four of the basic points in the report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights before he and several other members of the committee would support it.

Humphrey listed these four "basic" points: fair employment practices legislation, abolition of the poll tax, antilynching legislation and a ban on racial segregation in the armed forces. He said they need not be mentioned by name so long as the plank makes unmistakably clear what it means.

The Minneapolis Mayor said a fight will be made in the Resolutions Committee for all 10 of the President's points but he considers the four a "minimum."

The platform timetable calls for completion of the five-man blueprint late tomorrow, submission to the 18-man drafting unit tomorrow night and action by the full committee Monday. Chairman Myers said he hopes to get the platform to the convention floor the following day.

O'Dwyer Wants Truman 'Rights' Plan Backed

New York, July 10 (AP).—Mayor William O'Dwyer told President Truman and Democratic leaders today that the President's civil rights program "must be backed to the hilt."

O'Dwyer also said in a telegram that the Taft-Hartley law" must be repealed." He called for a "courageous stand" on taxes, price control and housing, and asked for financial aid to the new State of Israel.

The Mayor's telegram was addressed specifically to Mr. Truman, Senator Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, Democratic national chairman; Senator Francis P. Myers of Pennsylvania and Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois.

O'Dwyer called for "an effective, sustained and extended Marshall Plan without strings for all areas that need it," and a "determined effort to establish a strong United Nations."

The Mayor yesterday announced his support of President Truman for the Democratic nomination. Until then, he was a leader of coalition forces seeking a candidate other than Mr. Truman.

In his telegram today, as part of the program he outlined for the party, O'Dwyer said, "We must give generous financial aid to Israel."

"We must modify the arms embargo to permit this beleaguered nation to defend itself against aggression," he added.

On domestic policy, he said Mr. Truman's civil rights program "must be backed to the hilt. We can no longer compromise with bigotry, discrimination and inequality."

7 States Plan Joint Action To Push (Any) Truman Foe

Philadelphia, July 10 (AP).—Southern Democratic leaders laid tentative plans today to nominate jointly an opponent to President Truman in the party's convention opening here Monday.

A committee was named to select a possible candidate to offer at a caucus of anti-Truman delegates Sunday.

Leaders told newsmen privately that they have no hopes of shutting off Mr. Truman's nomination. But they said a rally behind an opponent would "lend weight to our protest."

Claims 170 Votes

These spokesmen said they were certain they could deliver a minimum of 170 votes out of 238 in nine States to any opponent upon whom Southerners might agree.

The Southerners, representing seven States, also named a committee to draft a States' rights plank to be offered if the majority report of the convention's platform committee does not suit them.

A third committee was named to draft plans for a possible Southern Democratic convention at Birmingham.

Some Southern delegations have threatened to walk out here if the platform adopted by the convention includes indorsement of President Truman's civil rights program. Some have threatened to bolt if Mr. Truman is nominated.

States represented at today's meeting were: Mississippi, South Carolina, Alabama, Louisiana, Florida, Arkansas and Texas.

Committeemen Named

Named to look over the field of possible candidates upon whom Southerners might agree and directed to report to Sunday's caucus were:

Governors Laney of Arkansas; Thurmond, South Carolina; Wright, Mississippi, and Tuck, Virginia; and Palmer Bradley, Texas; Frank Upchurch, Florida, and W. W. Wright, Mississippi.

Selected to seek drafting of a States' right plank agreeable to the South were: Walter Sellers, Mississippi; George Warren, South Carolina; J. M. Bonner, Alabama; W. H. Tolbert, Louisiana; Miss Hortense K. Wells, Florida, and Senator McClellan (D., Ark.).

Selected for arranging the possible Dixie convention at Birmingham were:

Governors Laney, Wright, Thurmond and Tuck, and Herman Pressler, Texas; G. W. Godwin, Mississippi; J. D. Emmrich, Mississippi; Robert Goodwin, Alabama, and C. E. Sheffard, Florida.

Last Opposition To Truman Fades

Monday morning. The State's delegates who have 26 votes are strong for Senator Alben W. Barkley and came here hoping they might get a break that would permit them to put the Senate majority leader forward as a presidential candidate. They will decide on how far to push their campaign for Barkley at their caucus. They are not opposed to President Truman, however, and have not been in the "anti-Truman" bloc.

California's caucus was the only event here so far in the old tradition of fighting Democratic conventions. The meeting was scheduled for 2 p. m. The 54 delegates and their alternates crowded into a small parlor on the fourth floor of the Ben Franklin Hotel.

John F. Shelley, delegation chairman, called the delegates to order, cleared out all the press but California reporters and prepared to settle a dispute that has divided the delegation for weeks and kept it quarrelling all the way across the country on the road to Philadelphia. In spite of the primary law committing the delegation to President Truman, James Roosevelt, formerly state chairman and now national committeeman, led the Eisenhower "drive." He has been under repeated attack.

Jimmy Gets Big Hand

When Jimmy shouldered his way into the meeting, however, he got a big hand from the delegates.

The brick-bats were not long in coming through. Delegate John McEnery made an impassioned attack on Roosevelt's leadership. He said he had once admired Roosevelt's politics and loved him for his principles but that he had "learned almost to despise him."

"He is a hypocrite," McEnery shouted, so loud that his voice was plainly audible in hotel corridors. "He is a hypocrite beyond all doubt, because he went to San Francisco and all over the State trying to wreck President Truman and the Democratic Party."

McEnery alleged that a caucus of the Democratic delegates, meeting under the State primary law, in session at San Luis Obispo, had committed the delegates to three propositions: (1) To pay their own way to Philadelphia; (2) to support President Truman at Philadelphia; (3) to return to their homes and work for President Truman's election.

Calls For Roosevelt Resignation

McEnery shouted that the Roosevelt faction had tied 800,000 California liberal Democrats to the reactionary South and the Kelly-Nash machine and tried to commit them against President Truman.

This, McEnery said, was a "damnable disgrace that we cannot live with unless we put the record straight."

To put it straight he moved that, "this delegation ask James Roosevelt to submit his resignation to this group."

Patrick McDonough, Oakland attorney, backed up McEnery. He said there was no question about the delegation's obligation to support President Truman.

Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas reminded the caucus that the members had made a pledge to Mr. Truman that they could not "lightly disregard."

Chairman Shelley pleaded against a "seething, boiling" delegation attitude. He warned that the pary could not be effective nationally unless it was effective in the State. He said he disagreed with what Roosevelt had done. But he wished to have the delegates forget personalities and personal differences and get together and vote for the best man for President and Vice President.

A vote was urged. Then a point of order was made against the taking of the vote. There was some debate as to the manner of voting alternates.

Censure Resolution Tabled

A motion to table the resolution of censure then was offered and seconded. Roll of the delegates was called. The motion carried, 40 to 7.

Then it was moved that the delegation go on record for the nomination of President Truman. After a debate of the degree to which the delegates already were bound, the mover and seconder of this motion withdrew it.

The eldest son of President Roosevelt sat silently through the furore over his leadership. He did not vote on the motion to table or participate in the debate on his management of party affairs.

The anti-Truman caucus scheduled for tonight was called off by Col. Jacob Arvey of Chicago and James Roosevelt, in a statement released at 6:55 p. m. They said that as far as they were concerned the scheduled meeting was off.

"Truman Victory Kit"

The Missouri delegation tried to stage a noise demonstration for President Truman late this afternoon. Pretty girls from the Missouri headquarters passed out manila envelopes bearing the slogan: "Here's Your Truman Victory Kit." Inside was a Truman button a tally sheet, the President's picture, an automatic pencil, a cigarette lighter and two whistles and four thimbles. The whistles didn't make much noise.

Minnesota Democrats for Truman will hold a caucus at 8 p. m. Sunday. This faction of the party in Minnesota got a Truman Administration indorsement out of the Minnesota State Democratic Convention, but could not get an instructed delegation.

The biggest noise of this convention so far, however, still was being made by a jeep converted into an Eisenhower sound-wagon. It alternately played the Eisenhower song and carried the exhortations of a barker to delegates and visitors at the entrance to the Bellevue-Stratford.

The delegates, for the most part, braced themselves for the inevitable, in calm and quiet resignation to a first ballot nomination of President Truman.

Lack of Confidence Evident

Missing from this convention is both the confidence and assurance of victory that has pervaded Democratic gatherings since 1932 and the spirit and fight that marked the party conventions during years of Republican rule. It is, so far, the most dispirited party gathering in a generation. Party managers frankly are looking for something to liven it up.

President Truman's acceptance speech plans may be influenced by this consideration. The President, it was learned today, has been giving some thought to making the pre-Roosevelt sort of acceptance address at the Truman hometown Independence, Mo. Some of his advisers now wish to have him come to Philadelphia and put some spirit into the party. He has not yet made a final decision.

Chairman McGrath told a press conference this afternoon that it was not "beyond the range of possibility" that the convention may complete its work on Wednesday night. He was still contemplating a Thursday session, he added.

McGrath said the chance of Wednesday night wind-up would depend on two things: (1) The time it takes to adopt the platform and (2) the number of vice presidential nominations presented to the convention.

There is nothing in the Democratic Party's commitment to Philadelphia to require it to remain in session for the scheduled four days of the convention.

South Carolina Bloc Seated Over Protest

Philadelphia, July 10 (AP).—A protest against the seating of the South Carolina Democratic delegation to the National Convention was thrown out today by the National Democratic Committee.

The South Carolina Progressive (Negro) Democratic Party tried unsuccessfully to contest the delegation's credentials. It contended that Negroes had not participated in the precinct meetings at which delegates were chosen to the county and State conventions.

The Progressive organization, headed by John H. McCray, Columbia Negro newspaper editor, was not represented at the committee meeting.

Midwestern Leaders Line Up for Truman

Philadelphia, July 10 (AP).—Midwestern Democratic leaders from 13 States today lined up solidly for President Truman.

Twelve of them put in a plug for Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming for the Vice Presidency.

The action came at an open caucus of the "Midwest conference." It includes Democratic National Committee members and State party heads of the farm belt.

James C. Quigley, Nebraska national committeeman and chairman of the Midwest bloc, told reporters the two moves are not binding on the 13 delegations. But he noted that the States have 244 convention votes or about one fifth the total.

Approved unanimously was a resolution to "reaffirm expressions of confidence in President Truman and urging his nomination and election."

Only Iowa voted "no" on a second resolution "to commend" the nomination of O'Mahoney as Vice President.

Iowa has 20 votes and other States listed as represented in the farm bloc and their votes are: Colorado 12, Kansas 16, Michigan 42, Minnesota 26, Missouri 34, Montana 12, Nebraska 12, North Dakota 8, Oklahoma 24, South Dakota 8, Wisconsin 24, and Wyoming 6.

Tracy S. McCracken, Wyoming national committeeman, who said he is a Presbyterian, told the conference that O'Mahoney's Roman Catholic religion "may be an asset this year especially, since he would help win the Catholic vote in New York, Chicago, Massachusetts and Rhode Island." In those areas, he said, Mr. Truman could use some help.

ILO Stresses International Collaboration

San Francisco, July 10 (AP).—The thirty-first international labor conference closed today and Edward Phelan, director-general, declared it had "responded to the challenge of the times." It had been in session since June 17.

"The conference has been an outstanding success," said the retiring head of the ILO, which is devoted to social progress. "It has shown that international collaboration can succeed."

Justin Godart of France, president of the conference for the second time, expressed his faith in the organization. He, too, is retiring from the work of the agency, which is associated with the United Nations.

Godart said that adoption of an international treaty on the freedom of association "will justify calling this conference the session on freedom of association."

The conference brought together delegates and advisers from 51 nations.

Progressive Party Organized By Wallace Supporters Here

Wallace-Taylor supporters here founded the Progressive Party of the District of Columbia yesterday, adopted a platform denouncing monopoly and upholding civil liberties, and elected officers and delegates to their national convention.

More than 200 were present in the afternoon to elect Dr. Clark Foreman, president of the Southern Conference of Human Welfare, chairman of the local Progressive Party. The morning session of the all-day convention at the Hotel 2400 had attracted about 70.

In the keynote speech by Dr. John T. E. Camper of Baltimore, Wallace Party candidtae for Representative from the Fourth Maryland District, both major parties were denounced and President Truman was charged with not meaning what he said about civil rights.

"If Truman meant one word of what he said," Camper declared, "he could have forced Capital Transit to hire Negro workers during the war, he could have appointed Charles Houston as Commissioner of Washington, D. C., and he could have, by executive order, wiped out discrimination in the Federal Government service."

Executive vice chairman elected to serve with Dr. Foreman were Harry C. Lambertson, attorney, 3309 Cleveland ave. nw., and Dr. Joseph Johnson, dean of medicine of Howard University. Both were cochairmen of the local convention until the afternoon election.

J. Daniel Weitzman, operator of the Dupont Theater, was elected treasurer of the group, which also named two national committeemen. They are Dr. Johnson and Mrs. Eugenia Hyde.

The local party platform followed the positions taken by Henry A. Wallace on national and foreign issues, including a demand for peace and an end to the "cold war" with Russia, and a rejection of the Marshall Plan and the peacetime draft.

Local planks included home rule and congressional representation, all-out war against racial discrimination and segregation, "cessation of police brutality," housing, appointment of public commissioners "more responsive to the interests of the consumers" and a bonus for D. C. veterans.

Gen. Holdridge Has' Platform, No Delegates

By Howard Dutkin
Post Reporter

A West Pointer opposed to universal military training!

A presidential candidate without a single delegate!

That is the position of Brig. Gen. Herbert Holdridge (retired), seeker after the Democratic presidential nomination, who is finding it difficult even to get gallery seats for his followers at the Philadelphia convention.

Holdridge

The General, who lives at 2409 37th st. nw., was once a supporter of Socialist Norman Thomas. Now he has his own platform, borrowing liberally from greenbackism, socialism and the Holy Bible.

Economic problems, he believes, can be solved by a system of Nation-wide cooperatives with ownership of industrial plants vested in "the people who operate them."

The general believes that world and domestic peace can be assured and racial strife eliminated by the commandment: "Love thy neighbor."

Holdridge's cooperative plan calls for Congress to issue "a sum of money for peace equal to the cost of World War II." This money is to be backed solely by the total wealth of the United States rather than by gold, he said.

Under his plan the general feels individuals owning stock in private corporations would be required to turn their holdings into Government banks, which would pay the par value. Those who own more than $100,000 worth would be paid on the installment plan at $5000 a year. This scheme would hold true also for those owning insurance policies and savings accounts.

Under the Holdridge plan everyone would be guaranteed a minimum salary of $3000 yearly. He also would have a fourth branch of government, adding Economic to Executive, Legislative, and Judicial.

A 1917 graduate of West Point, the general served in various administrative posts in this country during both World Wars.

As plans and training officer, attached to the Adjutant General's Office here, during the last war, he founded and became commandant of the Adjutant General's School, Fort Washington, Md.

He sees the present draft program as "Maginot Line mentality" and as a means "the military" is using to "get a grip" on the country.

"All is confusion in the Democratic ranks," Holdridge remarked happily before he left for Philadelphia Thursday. "Things are shaping up for us. When I'm in the White House, drop up and see me."

Smithies Going to ECA From Budget Bureau

Arthur Smithies was appointed director of the new fiscal and trade policy division in the Economic Cooperation Administration yesterday.

For the last two years Smithies has been chief of the economics branch of the Budget Bureau. He previously taught economics at the University of Michigan.

Serious Shortage Of Trained Men Foreseen in 1960

Nashville, Tenn., July 10 (AP).—Serious shortages of trained personnel face the Nation within 10 years unless present barriers to education are removed, Dr. Aaron J. Brumbaugh of Washington, told the Institute of Race Relations today.

Dr. Brumbaugh, vice president of the American Council on Education and member of the President's Commission on Higher Education, described the three principal barriers as finance, physical plant and "inequalities due to racial and religious discrimination."

By 1960, he said, there will be a shortage in the medical field alone of 53,000 doctors that cannot be met under present conditions.

He said the number of students in colleges ought to be nearly doubled to meet the needs of 1960.

Halleck Challenges Truman on Congress

By the United Press

House Majority Leader Halleck claimed last night that the Eightieth Congress, which President Truman calls the second worst in history, actually snatched the Nation back from the brink of disaster.

Halleck said the GOP-controlled Congress, despite obstruction "every step of the way" by Mr. Truman, cleaned up most of the debris left by 14 years of Democratic "misrule," opening the door to prosperity and happiness.

His detailed defense of the record of the Eightieth Congress was vigorous rebuttal to Mr. Truman's attacks on Congress during his recent swing through the West. The President first said the Congress was the worst in history. Later he amended the remark. One Conceded, was worse.

Halleck said Congress freed business from ruinous controls, balanced the budget, cut taxes and the national debt, helped both labor and management, upped veterans' benefits, and bolstered national defense.

It freed the building industry of "stifling rules, regulations and directives," he said, and cleared the way for the biggest home building boom of all time.

Halleck said Congress rejected President Truman's "disastrous" policies in reclamation and flood control, and appropriated more money for these vital functions than ever before in history.

U. S. Likely to Run in the Red After Two Years in Black

Prospects are that President Truman will advise the country late this month that the Government is going to run in the red this year after two years solidly in the black.

Informed officials said yesterday the Government spending figure for the fiscal year which began July 1 will jump to about 42 billion dollars when the present revision of January budget estimates is completed. The President's January estimate was $39,700,000,000.

Meanwhile, the $4,600,000,000 tax cut—which Mr. Truman is expected to blame chiefly for throwing the Government in the red—should cut the revenue estimate down a little below 40 billion dollars. The January forecast was $44,500,000,000.

Actual Government spending thus would exceed income by more than two billion dollars between now and next June 30—a period including five months of the presidential term at which both Mr. Truman and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican nominee, are aiming.

Technically, however, a bookkeeping switch ordered by Congress would convert that apparent deficit into not only a "balanced budget" but also a nearly one-billion-dollar surplus of receipts over spending.

Congress directed that three billion dollars to be spent on foreign aid this year be charged to the fiscal year that ended this June 30—before the money was spent—and not counted again this year when the money is paid out.

The congressional bookkeeping system pared the record surplus for last fiscal year to an apparent $5,419,000,000 from what Secretary of Treasury Snyder called a "true" surplus of $8,419,000,000.

By reverse action, it would "improve" the book showing for this year, knocking down the President's prospective 42-billion-dollar figure on actual outlay to 39 billion dollars and turning a threatened deficit into a surplus.

Byrd Would Cut U. S. Workers

By the United Press

Senator Byrd (D., Va.) said last night the Federal Government should fire 630,000 civilian workers—three of every 10 on its payroll.

He said this could be done without reducing Government efficiency, and would mean a saving of two billion dollars a year.

Byrd, a leading congressional exponent of Government economy, suggested the 30 per cent cut to halt a steady rise in the number of Federal employes.

Since January, he declared, new workers have been added to the Government payroll at the rate of nearly 500 a day.

In the current fiscal year, he said, there will be an average of 2,112,000 employes on the Federal rolls.

His proposed 30 per cent cut would mean dismissal of 630,000 persons. But even so, Byrd said, the remaining 1,482,000 would be half a million more than in 1939.

"It would appear," he said, "that 500,000 additional civilian employes should be sufficient to meet new postwar requirements, including the new military expansion."

Marquee Mule Exhales Smoke Wrong Way; Republican Sugar Goes Into Democrats' Java

By a Post Reporter

Philadelphia, July 10.—Since June 12, the marquee of the Bellevue-Stratford has had a succession of animal tenants.

First it was the GOP Elephant, a resplendent rubber creation of Macy parade derivation. The elephant added infinite jests to the Republican meeting by collapsing from time to time.

The next creature to stand astride the marquee was an elk. This noble creature was faintly reminiscent of the bull moose of the old Progressive party of Theodore Roosevelt.

He gave way to the Democratic donkey—the papier-mache creation that now adorns the top of the marquee. The donkey is a toothy Missouri mule type with ears that flap forward and back. He has fire in his nostrils (simulated by electric light bulbs) and he breathes smoke. He is an angry looking cuss in the best image of the cartoons of Thomas Nast who created all the animal caricatures that have become American party symbols.

Donkey Had a Rival

At first the paper donkey had a rival. At the side entrance of the Bellevue Stratford, atop the Walnut st. marquee, an inflated donkey held forth. But the balloon donkey was not as angular as a donkey ought to be. The inflated balloon technique is better fitted to portraying elephants. So the rubber donkey had to go.

The paper donkey had some preliminary trouble. The smoke that he now belches out of his nostrils in angry gusts was at first mistakenly inclined to emerge from the other end of the animal. Sweating mechanics got this repaired in a hurry.

Appearance of the new Wallace party's animal symbol is being eagerly awaited.

The bunting and decorations that welcomed Republicans to Philadelphia June 21 is contriving to pay a triple debt. With a fine avoidance of discrimination it heralded the arrival of first the Republicans, then the Elks and now the Democrats. No doubt it will remain to welcome the Wallace delegates.

Republican Sugar Served

Many of the Democrats at this convention are having to swallow things they don't like. The list includes Republican sugar. Someone must have overestimated the Republican sweet tooth. The individual sugar lumps being served the Democrats still bear the label: "Welcome, Republican National Convention."

A dejected Democrats watching the gathering delegates in the Bellevue-Stratford Friday night observed gloomily: "We're just as repulsive looking as the Republicans were."

"You have to be a cab driver to know the heartaches there are in this business," an unhappy hacker told his Democratic fare. "First it was the Republicans—who didn't tip well. Then it was the Elks whose worst crime was a three-hour parade that tied up traffic. Now it's the Democrats."

Friends of Mike Straus who cannot qualify for his job as reclamation commissioner under new legislation requiring engineering experience for the post, think Mike has the answer. He has been urged to take an extension course in engineering to complete some work he did on related subjects.

Paul McNutt, whose abortive presidential campaign for the 1940 nomination folded even earlier than the drives for Mr. Truman's rivals, is just an onlooker at the 1948 convention.

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) arrived Saturday morning, with the atomic energy plank "in his pocket."

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) is busily working his favorite sentence in the Bellvue-Stratford lobby. The line is ". . . always glad to see anyone from Texas."

Conundrum of the convention bars: "What's the difference between a delinquent Elk and a deserting Democrat?"

Dewey Plans To End 1948 As Governor

Pawling, N. Y., July 10 (U.P.)—Thomas E. Dewey intends to stay on as New York's Governor for the remainder of 1948, even if he is elected President in November, it was learned tonight.

The Republican presidential candidate, rounding out the first week of a month's vacation on his Quaker Hills farm, has privately turned down suggestions that he resign as Governor if he is elected.

Some of those advocating he quit his State job feel Dewey should give his lieutenant governor, Joe R. Hanley, an opportunity to familiarize himself with executive duties.

During the fall, the New York Governor's chief job is preparing the State budget, and his legislative program. Budget hearings start in October.

Others favoring early departure from the State scene believe Dewey should travel abroad as President-elect to gather firsthand information on the foreign situation.

Dewey, however, made his position clear on this suggestion several days ago when he said:

"I prefer to handle foreign problems through the regular diplomatic channels. Every time a President of the United States goes abroad to make foreign policy, we lose our shirts."

One of 500 Frenchmen Reported Buried Alive

Paris, July 10 (U.P.)—One out of every 500 Frenchmen pronounced dead actually is buried alive, Dr. Jean Huet told a meeting of General Council of Seine Department last night.

He estimated that 80 persons are buried alive each year in Seine Department alone. Huet, a member of the Seine Council, introduced a bill "to organize the prevention of premature burials."

O'Mahoney Warns Big Steel Of Reaction to Any Price Hike

By the United Press

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) told Big Steel last night that any new price increase would bring "outraged indignation" from Congress and the public.

He said in a statement there is "reason to believe" that the "real purpose" of United States Steel's decision to abandon the controversial "multiple basing point" price system is "to seek an opportunity to raise steel prices again in the present seller's market and attribute the increased cost to the decision of the Supreme Court and the Federal Trade Commission."

This, he said, would be a "characteristic monopolistic move."

President Benjamin Fairless announced Wednesday that United States Steel would drop the multiple basing point system in light of a recent Supreme Court ruling outlawing a similar practice in the cement industry.

The Federal Trade Commission contends such pricing systems stifle competition. Under the multiple basing point practice, major producers fix different prices in different areas. United States Steel said the system is justified to meet competition from smaller producers nearer the consumer.

O'Mahoney, a Democratic vice presidential possibility, often has criticized steel price policies in particular and monopolies in general. He was chairman of the prewar Temporary National Economic Committee, which recommended that the "basing point" system be outlawed by Congress.

In his Wednesday announcement, Fairless said the change in pricing policies might result in higher steel prices to some customers.

Suspects Law Change Aim

To this, O'Mahoney said, "I fear United States Steel is merely trying to lay the basis for a demand that Congress change the antitrust laws under which the Supreme Court found that 'a multiple basing point delivered price system for the purpose of suppressing competition' is prohibited."

The Wyoming Democrat said a "good faith abandonment of the collusive basing point system" would offer many "specific advantages to the public."

"Steel producers, owing to the present abnormally high demand for steel, are in a poistion to charge what the traffic will bear," O'Mahoney said.

"It is not inconceivable that at the very same time they abandon the basing point system they actually will raise their mill prices in order to reap the fullest possible advantage of the present seller's market."

2 in Georgia Governor Row Begin It Again

Atlanta, Ga., July 10 (U.P.)—M. E. Thompson and Herman Talmadge, principals in Georgia's celebrated double-governor row of January, 1947, today began their political fight all over again—this time over the second half of the same gubernatorial term.

Both have qualified as candidates for the last two years of the term of the late Eugene Talmadge, Herman's father, who died after his election but before he could be inaugurated.

Young Talmadge opened his campaign today with a speech and old-fashioned barbecus-rally at Douglas, Ga. At the same time, Thompson launched his drive to remain in the Governor's chair with a big rally at Millen, Ga.

Thompson has held office as Acting Governor during the first half of the term by virtue of a State Supreme Court decision. He seeks to retain office for the remaining two years of the term.

The court ruled that Thompson, who had been elected lieutenant-governor, should take over the office until the people could elect a governor in the next general election. That comes up in November, but the September primary will actually choose the winner in solidly Democratic Georgia.

Teachers Named For '48 Exchange Duty in Britain

The Office of Education yesterday announced the names of 100 American elementary and secondary school teachers from 27 States who will participate in the 1948-49 exchange program with British teachers.

The Americans will leave New York July 24, arriving in Great Britain August 1. The British teachers will reach the United States August 19 and 20.

New Overtime Payment Rules Are Set Up

By the United Press

Wage-Hour Administrator William R. McComb yesterday set up new standards governing premium overtime payments. They become effective September 15.

McComb said the ruling was made in view of the Supreme Court's recent decision in the longshoremen's overtime pay suit. The court upheld claims by the longshoremen that premium payments for working on weekends and at night should be included in their base pay on which overtime rates are figured.

McComb's attorney said the new ruling would require "only slight changes" in labor contracts affected by the Supreme Court decision.

McComb said he had received hundreds of inquiries requesting a detailed rule.

"In view of the court decision," he said, "the act requires the inclusion in an employe's regular rate of premium payments for work on Saturdays, Sundays, holidays, or at night, as such, which are made without regard to the number of hours or days previously worked by the employe in the day or work week.

"In addition, such premium payments may not be offset against the statutory overtime compensation due for work in excess of 40 hours in the work week.

"However, if the payment for Saturday, Sunday, holiday or night work in contingent upon the employe's having previously worked a specified number of hours or days according to a bona fide standard, such premium payments will be regarded as true overtime premiums which need not be included in the regular rate and may be against the statutory overtime compensation due under the act."

McComb said that in enforcing the Supreme Court decision, he will look "not only at the terms of the applicable contract, but also at the actual practice of the parties under the contract."

Carolina Polio Toll on Upswing

Raleigh, N. C., July 10 (U.P.)—Officials of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis today urged local chapters to lump their antipolio funds into one joint fund as the number of victims in North Carolina this year increased to 485.

Dr. J. W. R. Norton, State health officer, said the outbreak was on the upswing.

State Epidemic Coordinator Philip S. Randolph of Chapel Hill wrote Foundation officers in the State's 100 counties for "an initial contribution of 50 per cent of your cash and bond balance." His action laid the way for a Statewide battle against the Nation's worst infantile paralysis outbreak this year.

Guns Bark Again In Palestine

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

WAR FRONT—As the war was renewed in Palestine, Jews claimed a victory near Isdud (A), while to the south, Arabs had the initiative at Negba, Beit Affa and Kfar Darom. Lydda Airport (B) reportedly was captured by Israeli forces. Arab legions resumed shelling the new City of Jerusalem (C) consulate, wede killed by sniper fire in the first weeks of the battle for Jerusalem. Both died May 23.

The first word that the Jews had accepted the 10-day truce plan came at Lake Success when Israel informed the United Nations it would agree, provided the Arabs agreed.

Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok in Tel Aviv sent word to Secretary-General Trygve Lie that orders would be issued to the Israeli forces as soon as Israel is notified that the Arabs have accepted it and issued cease-fire orders.

Bernadotte at Rome

Bernadotte, en route to Lake Success, stopped briefly at Rome and said:

"The war is not on fully yet" in Palestine. He said Arab-Jewish clashes yesterday were "incidents." He expressed belief that "the Arabs do not really want to fight."

Bernadotte said he does not consider his mission finished and he is not pessimistic.

The Jews also reported the capture of several Arab villages near Lydda airport. One was the former German settlement of Wilhelma, founded about 50 years ago commemorating Kaiser Wilhelm's visit to Palestine.

Air raid sirens sounded in the Jewish capital of Tel Aviv four times this morning. Some small bombs were dropped by unidentified Spitfires but no casualties were reported.

Lydda Airport is a strategic prize. British forces left Lydda when they gave up their mandate May 15. The Arabs moved in. The field is less than 15 miles southeast of Tel Aviv, just on the U. N.-proposed border between Jewish and Arab territory.

The airport and its hangars were found relatively undamaged, an Israeli spokesman said.

Elsewhere, the Jewish settlement of Negba, south of Isdud, was the target of an air and artillery attack. Jews pulled out of the isolated settlement of Kfar Darom, the Tel Aviv spokesman said. The Egyptians claimed the capture of Kfar Darom last night.

The Jewish government spokesman said Jewish troops killed 300 Egyptians and captured 200 in a battle near Isdud, 25 miles south of Tel Aviv. The Egyptian defense ministry said last night that 325 Jewish soldiers were killed yesterday in the coastal plain area below Isdud.

Lake Success, July 10 (AP).—The United Nations received a new Arab message today declaring Count Folke Bernadotte should continue his Palestine peace efforts.

The U. N. also received acceptance from Israel of a new 10-day truce in the holy land if the Arabs would agree.

Another Israeli note gave evidence to back up earlier Jewish charges Egypt had violated the truce which expired yesterday.

Arab Communication

The latest Arab communication came from Abdel Rahman Azzam Pasha, secretary-general of the Arab League. It did not mention the U. N. mediator's request for a 10-day truce, but again expressed the opposition of the Arabs to any truce under "present conditions."

Azzam Pasha maintained that the Arabs had lived up to the terms of the four-week truce "to the last minute," but declared the truce "is under present conditions unworkable and one-sided." For this reason, he said, the Arabs felt they would do themselves great harm to renew the truce automatically.

"Lasting Solution"

Azzam Pasha then added:

"Count Bernadotte, however, can still have some useful work to do in trying to find a just and lasting solution to the Palestine problem. The Arab states and the people of Palestine have expressed definitely their willingness to cooperate to the utmost and with the best goodwill with the U. N. mediator in finding this solution."

Meanwhile, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok pressed the Security Council for some indication of what action it would take against what he called "open defiance of its authority" by the Arab governments.

It appeared, however, that the Council probably will not meet before Tuesday. Bernadotte was en route here from his headquarters on the Greek island of Rhodes to make a personal report to the Council. He is expected Monday.

other Western democracies is to pursue as we are doing a plain, fair and straightforward policy based on our undoubted rights and on those Instincts of humanity which forced us either to leave the Germans of Berlin, who have courageously stood with us, to Soviet vengeance, or to let them all be starved to death . . ."

At this point Churchill had words of praise for Foreign Secretary Bevin, one of his chief political adversaries:

". . . We support Mr. Bevin in his foreign policy. Although it is got perhaps very skillful, it is at any rate based on sound lines . . . I recognize fully that the British government, like that of the United States, has followed a course of action based on combining all forces against Communist intrigue and Russian imperialism."

Berlin. That does not mean we will allow ourselves to be subjected to Russian inspections. We will never agree to that."

The inspection order was published last night by the news agency ADN, but it has not yet been received by Western Allied officials.

Air-Lift Continues

Traffic out of Berlin so far is moving normally, but inbound traffic was stalled as it has been for the past three weeks. There was yet no sign the blockade is to be lifted.

Mass flights of food and fuel planes into this beleaguered city continued, despite rain and fog.

Since June 22, when the great air-lift started, 14,718 tons of food and fuel have been transported to Berlin by plane. American figures showed that 2400 American planes have carried 8178 tons of freight. An undisclosed number of British planes brought in an estimated 6000 tons.

American authorities said in order to save air space for food and fuel, military and civilian personnel and their dependents will not be permitted to travel on U. S. Air Force planes out of Berlin, unless they are on official duty. The British acted similarly earlier in the week. Authorities said anyone on leave or vacation may make use of the limited facilities of commercial airlines.

Big 3 Held Facing Long Berlin Struggle

Berlin and make it the capital of the new "all-German" government under Russian sponsorship.

Problem Just Starting

The major point which the three western nations sought to make in their notes to the Kremlin was that they would not be compelled to leave the city by any threats, menacing actions or pressures. Officials here in the diplomatic as in the military branches of the Government concede that the proclamation of a decision to remain in the German capital is only the beginning of a problem.

As Secretary of State Marshall told the Kremlin in his note, there are 2,400,000 Germans in the western zone, and if the Soviets will not let supplies reach them by normal transportation methods then the western powers will have to do their best to overcome the Russian barriers. At present they are using mass air transport, though it appears to be highly uncertain whether they could maintain in winter time the minimum flow required to keep the west Berlin population from starving and freezing and to keep power and water facilities operating.

These points have not been stressed in official American statements. But they are almost certainly elements which would be heavily weighed by the Soviets in their study of reaction toward the demands of the western powers.

Russia May Lift Berlin Blockade, Is Opinion

London, July 10 (AP).—Russia may agree to the Western powers' demand that the blockade of Berlin be lifted, but with stiff, perhaps unacceptable conditions attached.

That was the private opinion of Western diplomats here today as they weighed possible courses Russia could take in replying to the sharp protests which the United States, Britain and France made public last night.

It was regarded as possible that Russia may counter with an agreement to suspend at least temporarily its ban on road, rail and barge traffic into western Berlin, provided:

1. The Western powers agree to a new meeting soon of the Big Four foreign ministers to discuss the problems of Germany as a whole.

2. The Western powers halt, pending the outcome of such a meeting, their plans for creating a separate western German government.

Diplomats here said it would be hard to theorize what the Western powers would do if Russia demands a Big Four foreign ministers meeting as the price of raising the blockade.

Britain May Further Cut Her Imports

Ipswich, England, July 10 (U.P.)—Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps said tonight Britain may have to cut further her imports, which already have fallen to the minimum considered necessary to sustain the nation's life and industry.

A reduction might be necessary, he told a Labor Party rally, even with the Marshall Plan aid due to pour into Britain.

"If the terms of trade move against us still further, that is, if the level of our import prices goes up further compared to the level of our export prices, we shall undoubtedly have to do so," he said.

He said British production already is 10 per cent above prewar and exports are 35 per cent greater than they were before the war.

He warned there is no certainty the United States Congress will continue Marshall Plan aid next year.

"They will quite naturally be looking to see at the end of this year how far their aid has achieved the aims set for it," Cripps said. "We must justify our use of it by our continued progress, by showing that it has had, so far as we are concerned, the stimulating effect which was hoped."

ECA Aid List Skips Britain, Late on Pact

By the United Press

Britain, the No. 1 beneficiary of U. S. foreign aid, got left out of the latest allotments because Parliament failed to ratify in time the required agreement with the United States.

This was disclosed last night when Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman released a list of aid authorizations for the week ended July 7. Britain was not included.

Authorizations for the week totaled $26,167,550 for Marshall Plan countries, western Germany and China. That boosted the foreign aid outlay to date to $788,914,690.

Britain gave final approval to the agreement—which sets out conditions for continuation of U. S. aid—last Monday, two days after the deadline set by Congress. An ECA spokesman said the delay in ratifying the ECA terms knocked Britain off the list of new authorizations.

But Britain's tardiness will cause no permanent setback to the British recovery program. British quotas can be made up in future authorizations, the spokesman said.

Togliatti Calls ERP Plan for World Rule

Rome, July 10 (U.P.)—Communist boss Palmiro Togliatti told Parliament today that the European recovery program is a United States plan to dominate the world and warned that if Italy is "involved in an imperialistic war, the answer will be revolution."

Supporters of the government shouted in reply, "You are trying to intimidate us."

Togliatti, speaking for an hour and a half in today's ERP debate, charged the Marshall Plan is "permeated with the foreign policy of the United States and . . . has nothing either political or economic which would" help Italy's national interests.

"Either American imperialists must halt this race to break the world into two blocs or the destiny of mankind cannot be foreseen," Togliatti declared. "This twentieth century is not an American century. It must be a century of international collaboration."

Moscow Gets Blame for Chinese War

Nanking, July 10 (U.P.)—A group of Chinese legislators said today that the world has been misled into believing China is engaged in a civil war. The Chinese actually are battling against Communist aggression directed by Moscow, they said.

A resolution adopted by 137 legislators demanded that the Nationalist government correct this misunderstanding abroad.

The petitioners asked the government to list Russian violations of Sino-Soviet agreements. They further asked that the government open immediate negotiations with Moscow regarding the alleged violations.

Should such negotiations fail, the case must be presented to the United Nations, the report said.

The legislators' demands were made only a day after Vice President Li Tsung-jen declared at Peiping that all of China's agreements with the Soviet Union were nullified long ago by repeated Russian violations of their terms.

Honan Reds Are Seen Scattered, Not Destroyed

Nanking, July 10 (AP).—Progovernment reports today credited the national armies with victory over the Communists on the Honan plains of central China, but the indications were that the enemy had been merely scattered—not destroyed.

More than 100 government warplanes were reported continuing to hammer at the Communist armies of Liu Po-Cheng and Chen Yi over a wide but unspecified area.

Marine Band Celebrates 150th Anniversary

The Washington Post

The United States Marine Corps Band last night celebrated its 150 years of music bound up with American history.

Beginning with "Semper Fidelis"—the composition of a famous former Marine Band leader, John Philip Sousa—the band carried its history in music and pageant through to the present, concluding with "The Marines' Hymn" and the national anthem.

More than 5000 attended the program at the Sylvan Theater on the Washington Monument grounds. The event commemorated the authorization of the band by Congress July 11, 1798.

Gen. Clifton B. Cates, Commandant of the Corps, high ranking officers of the Marine and other armed services, government officials, and military and naval attaches of foreign governments were among those present to hear the "Band of Presidents."

Major William F. Santelmann, band leader since 1940 and son of William F. Santelmann, who led the band from 1898 to 1927, directed the 87-piece band, which gave its first public concert in Washington in 1801.

Among features of the program was the playing of two long forgotten compositions, "Jefferson's March" and "Madison's March." They were first played by the band at the inauguration of President Madison.

A long-abandoned military musical instrument also was heard: fifes. Marine "musics" played them in a pageant scene depicting recruits for the corps being drummed up at Tun Tavern in Philadelphia in 1775.

In addition to bandsmen, dancers from American University and members of the Marine Women's Reserve participated in the program. One of the final numbers on the program was the "Para-Marines" song, presented by the drum and bugle corps of the Washington Marine Barracks.

Earlier in the day the band gave a nationally broadcast radio anniversary program in which Actor Edward Arnold participated.

Union Shop Voted By 90% at Ford

Detroit, July 10 (AP).—Employes of the Ford Motor Co. have voted 90 per cent in favor of a union shop, it was announced today after the largest National Labor Relations Board election of its kind.

There were 98,989 employes eligible to vote. Of these 88,943 favored the union shop, while only 1214 voted against it. However, those who did not vote at all were counted against the proposal.

In seven States, Ford workers were not permitted to vote because of State laws forbidding the union shop.

Grain Prices Drop Sharply As Bumper Crops Are Forecast

Chicago, July 10 (U.P.)—Grain prices skidded on the Chicago Board of Trade today because experts predicted that bumper corn and wheat crops will soon end the world food shortage.

United States Department of Agriculture forecasts of a near-record wheat crop and the biggest corn crop in history forced the prices downward. Corn tumbled below $2 a bushel.

Grain traders said bumper crops would mean the end of the world food shortage and an eventual decline in United States meat prices.

But there was no sign of lower meat prices. Livestock and wholesale meat were selling for the highest prices ever. Agriculture Department officials said only a "stiff consumer boycott" could head off the upward spiral.

The Department of Agriculture estimated this year's corn crop at 3,328,862,000 bushels and the combined spring and winter wheat crops at 1,241,451,000 bushels.

If the forecasts prove true, traders said there was no doubt that the short supply which has characterized American agriculture for the last several years will disappear this fall. They said that if production meets expectations, the country may find itself with an unwieldly surplus.

18-Month-Old Girl Dies Under Uncle's Car

father, James S. Dinnis, sr., and his brother, Frank Leo Dinnis, who reside at the Port Green address. Ahead of them was a day at the beach.

But let the mother pick up the story:

"She was playing next door—she likes to climb up people's steps and then they let her in.

"She'd been in the neighbor's house a few minutes when the door opened and she came out. 'Grace, I'm letting her out now,' the neighbor said.

"I was standing in the door, watching my little 3-year-old girl, Jackie, who was crying because she wanted to go to the beach, too.

"The little girl—I didn't see her—dodged into the car."

Events moved swiftly then. Dinnis, sr., got out of the car, picked up the child, handed her over to Mrs. Murphy. Then they took her to a doctor.

"We hadn't got a block away but she was dead. I just knew it," Mrs. Murphy said, fighting to keep control. At the doctor's office, the physician could find no pulse. She was gone. A heart stimulant did no good.

Late yesterday afternoon, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of accidental death. The child's death will not be listed as a D. C. traffic fatality because it happened on private property.

The Murphys have three other children: Dennis, 6; Sandra, 4; and Jackie, 3. They have been married 10 years.

Two additional children were injured in other traffic accidents here.

Mae Helen Chaplan, 5, of 2650 Nichols ave. se., suffered head cuts when struck about noon by a car driven by Clarence E. Phelps, jr., 39, of 5610 Oxon Hill rd., Oxon Hill, Md. The accident occurred when the child ran into the street near her home. She was admitted to Gallinger Hospital for observation.

Six-year-old Henry Hellere, 605 31st st. se., received face cuts and bruises when he ran into a car while crossing the street near Minnesota ave. and Nelson pl. se. Police said Mrs. Betty C. Bulles, 2812 Texas ave. se., drove the car.

9 Men, Women Arrested in Vice Cleanup

Police Pvt. Frank N. Manthos, who is becoming a one-man vice squad, went on the prowl early yesterday in the vicinity of Franklin Park and arrested four men on charges of soliciting prostitution.

It was Private Manthos' second night's work investigating citizens' complaints of being accosted by sex perverts in downtown Washington. The two-day haul consisted of five men and four women.

Only one of Manthos' cases was disposed of in Municipal Court. Judge George D. Neilsen fined Robert L. Horsley, 35, of 4020 Arkansas ave. nw., $100 for soliciting prostitution.

The other cases, involving the same charge, are:

Joseph E. Bersey, 26, of 1271 New Hampshire ave. nw., held under $300 bond for trial July 16.

Raymond F. Ayers, 30, 1417 Rhode Island ave. nw., $300 bond for trial July 29.

Edward G. Pultz, 29, of 1213 I st. nw., $300 bond for trial July 23.

Chicago Papers Ask Arbitration

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—The Chicago Newspaper Publishers Association today told their striking printers that further negotiations "would serve no good purpose." The publishers urged that all remaining issues be submitted to "final and binding arbitration."

The publishers made the proposal in a letter to John J. Pilch, president of Local 16, AFL International Typographical Union.

They contended the union had failed to place their final offer for a settlement on the strike before the membership for "a straightforward vote on its own merits."

D. C. Man Posts Bond on Laurel Officer's Charge

Edward A. Sheehy, principal clerk in the accounts payable section of The Washington Post, was released early yesterday under $250 bond for jury trial on charges of assault on a track policeman at the Laurel, Md., raceway Friday night.

Justice of the Peace J. Taslup, of Waterloo, Md., set the bond after Sheehy requested trial by jury on the charge preferred by the special policeman, Edgar H. Alban. Alban said he was punched by Sheehy in an argument after he ordered Sheehy to leave a box seat for which he had no ticket.

After the alleged assault, Alban said, he showed Sheehy his special police baddge and haled him before the justice of the peace. The jury trial, at an unspecified date, was set for Howard County Circuit Court, in Ellicott City, Md.

D.C. Area Traffic Accidents Show Decrease During June

Traffic accidents, injuries and deaths in Greater Washington decreased in June as compared with May.

All three categories showed increases, however, at the halfway mark of this year as against the first six months of 1947.

Fatalities dropped from 15 in May to 12 last month, but the death toll was still above the June, 1947, total of nine. Last month's total of 1361 accidents was 73 fewer than in May, and the 546 persons injured in June were 90 fewer than in the preceding month.

Six-Month Figures

For the six months ending June 30 this year, 78 persons were killed, 3227 were injured, and there were 8342 traffic accidents in Greater Washington. The 1947 totals for the same period showed 77 dead, 2892 injured, 6906 accidents.

Four persons were traffic fatalities in the District last month, the same number as in June of 1947, but four less than were killed in May of this year. Nearly 100 fewer injuries were recorded last month as compared with May. There were 143 fewer accidents in June than the preceding month.

The city of Alexandria and Montgomery County had no traffic deaths during June, the fourth fatality-free month in a row for Alexandria and the second for Montgomery County. The county had 12 deaths in the first six months of 1947; this year it has had but two—best record of any section within Greater Washington.

Fairfax County Fatalities

Fairfax County, with one fatality last month, brought its 1948 six-month total to 14. At this time last year five persons had been killed in that county.

The figures, as compiled from the records, show:

France Tries Vainly to End Civil Strike

Paris, July 10 (U.P.).—A nation-wide strike of French financial workers spread to other government departments today and the Cabinet met for the second time in 24 hours to seek a means of ending the crippling stoppages, called over demands for pay adjustments.

The cabinet worked out a pay reclassification system at an emergency all-night session, but Ministers' hopes that it would lure the 60,000 financial workers back to work faded when other civil employes got on the strike bandwagon.

The financial workers' strike already has halted most government fiscal activities. Fifteen hundred workers in the economics division of the Ministry of Finance and Economic Affairs struck today. Their walkout was expected to halt customs examinations and threaten the distribution of wine.

Customs officers, who had been operating a limited service, voted 100 per cent to walk out. Postal workers called meetings to discuss their strike, scheduled to begin Sunday night.

At Marseille, a port strike was spreading. Six more vessels were immobilized when their sailors quit. A total of 25 ships lay idle.

The French Council of the Republic, upper chamber of the legislature, voted 207 to 84 to approve ratification of the European recovery program accord with the United States. Communist legislators voted against the agreement, which already had been approved by the Assembly.

Belgrade Reds Snubbed Again

Stalin ousted Trotzky a quarter century ago.

Albania's reaction to the Cominform charges of Tito's heresy from the true faith of communism was to break off economic relations with Yugoslavia. Obviously, the Albanian party will not send delegates to the Yugoslav Congress.

Palmiro Togliatti's Italian Communist Party—the biggest in the world outside Russia—emphasized the Cominform line. The party's newspaper noted that since the Cominform's criticism, the Yugoslavs have done nothing "to recognize their errors like good Communists and to correct them."

Communist headquarters in Russian-blockaded Berlin said they didn't even know of any invitation to them to attend.

The Russian line that the party quarrel must not interfere with other international affairs was followed today by Bulgaria.

The Bulgarians announced they have officially accepted an invitation to a Danube River shipping conference in the Yugoslav capital beginning July 30—nine days after the Communist Congress.

Russia and the other Big Four powers initiated the Danubian conference.

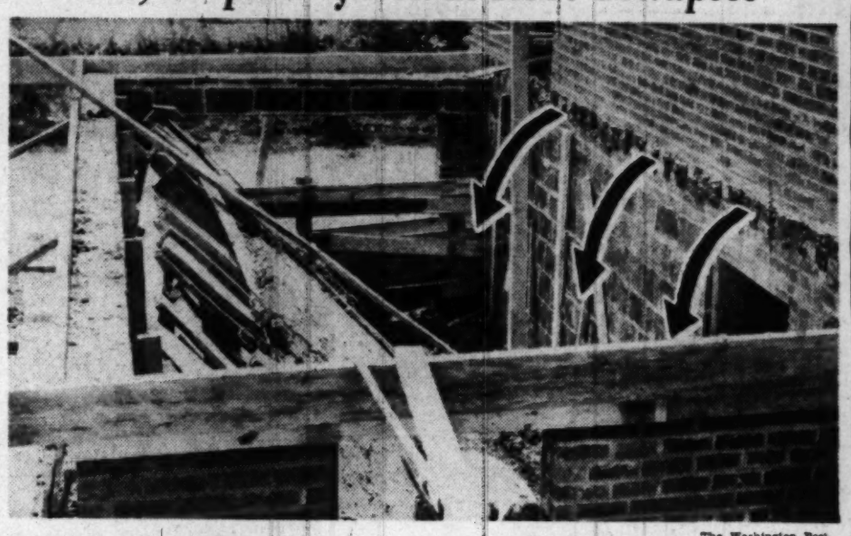
Builder, Helper Injured as Roof Collapses



The Washington Post

PHOTO-DIAGRAM—Arrows indicate where concrete roof of a garage broke away from supports. The roof was to be the floor of a porch of a house under construction at 2637 Bangor st. se. A contractor and his helper, working in the garage, were injured

A building contractor and his helper were seriously injured yesterday morning when a freshly poured concrete roof of a garage under which they were working collapsed and pinned them under supporting beams.

George W. Absher, 58, of 3301 Alabama ave. se., who is also president of the Hillcrest Citizens Association, and his assistant, Richard Groce, 50, of 455 Delaware ave. sw., received compound leg fractures.

The mishap occurred in the attached garage of a house Absher is building at 3637 Bangor st. se.

The victims were freed from the debris of cement, wooden beams and concrete forms by neighbors who saw the roof collapse and heard yells for help from another helper who was going to the garage when the roof collapsed.

Alfred M. Feist, of 3641 Bangor st. se., a machinist mate at the Naval Gun Factory, said he removed cement from Absher, whom he found first, while another neighbor, Charles King, of 3649 Bangor st. se., went to call for help. Feist said Absher was conscious when he was found and he directed his assistant and the neighbors in freeing him and Groce.

Feist added that the two men were taken out of the garage in about 10 minutes, before the Rescue Squad arrived.

The injured men were taken to Casualty Hospital, where their condition was described as serious. Last night both were in a "state of shock" and internal injuries had not been diagnosed, hospital officials reported.

Press Freedom Assured at Danube Parley

By The Associated Press

The State Department said yesterday that news and radio correspondents covering the international conference at Belgrade concerning navigation on the Danube River have been assured full freedom from censorship in reporting developments.

The department said the Yugoslav government, host for the conference, provided the no-censorship assurance in invitations to participating nations. The invitations were extended by Yugoslavia on behalf of the United States, Great Britain, France and Russia.

Besides these five nations, others participating will be: Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Romania, Bulgaria and the Ukraine. Austria also has been invited to send representatives.

The State Department is assisting in arrangements for news and picture coverage by U. S. wire services, newspapers, radio, magazines and news photographic agencies. The department said in an announcement:

While full details of conference arrangements have not yet been completed telegraphic facilities are available at Belgrade to Rome, Paris, London and the United States. Land lines are available for live broadcasting via Switzerland for relay to the United States. Tentative arrangements provide for courier planes to service the delegations and will be available to handle mail copy and photographs. Regular mail service to Trieste is available daily.

The department will assist correspondents in obtaining passports, visas, transportation and hotel accommodations in Belgrade. Since the time is short and accommodations are limited it is necessary that an absolute deadline of July 23 must be imposed in affording this assistance.

Red Rulers Of No. Korea Set Election

Seoul, Korea (Sunday) July 11 (U.P.).—The Communist puppet rulers of North Korea, in a bold move against United Nations plans for the country, today announced elections will be held August 25 in the northern zone to select a legislature that will claim jurisdiction over all Korea.

The election was ordered by the Third People's Council in the Russian-occupied area, acting under a Soviet-type constitution it approved May 1. The constitution provides for a legislature elected by secret ballot.

The legislature in turn will select a 15-man presidium which can convene the legislature—and presumably close it—and act with extraordinary powers when the legislature is not meeting.

The announcement said the constitution's jurisdiction will be limited to northern Korea until "such time as it can be enforced in all Korea."

Greeks Ask More Aid to Fight Rebels

Athens, July 10 (AP).—The Greek government made fresh demands today for United States military assistance as the Grammos Mountain operation against the guerillas bogged down.

Premier Themistokles Sophoulis told newsmen, after a defense council meeting attended by high American officials, that the government had submitted a "memorandum" listing military needs.

One source said the government was asking funds to increase the Greek army by 40,000 and bombers for the airforce.

Attending the meeting were William H. Draper, United States Undersecretary of the Army; Dwight P. Griswold, chief of the American mission to aid Greece; Lieut. Gen. James Alward van Fleet, head of the United States military mission, and Lieut Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, chief of plans and operations of the United States General Staff.

Greeks Lose 170 In Rebel Battles

Athens, July 10 (U.P.).—Six officers and 164 soldiers of the Greek army have been killed in the Grammos Mountain offensive, it was announced officially today.

The government claimed the guerillas suffered 1512 known casualties and probably 3500 more. The general staff said this total was 40 per cent of the rebel strength.

This figure thereby revised the previous estimate of strength of the Grammos guerilla forces. The government had said 7000 were in the battle. Now their estimate is 12,000.

Major Campaign Issue: Rising Costs

Philadelphia, July 10.—As Democrats filed into this city to nominate a candidate to oppose Thomas E. Dewey, a major campaign issue was in the making: The high—and getting higher—cost of living, even now at an all-time peak.

Livingston

The third round of wage increases is quickly and unquietly filtering through the economy. The Lehigh Coal & Navigation Co. has just raised the price of family-sized anthracite at the mines from $11.50 to $12.60 per ton—or 10 per cent—a direct result of the $1-a-day increase in moners' wages.

Goodyear Tire & Rubber and B. F. Goodrich have raised tire and tube prices 4½ per cent to 7½ per cent, following the lead of U. S. Rubber. Kaiser-Frazer Corp. has lifted prices on three models by $23 to $169, thus following Ford, Chrysler, Studebaker, Packard, Hudson and Nash. The Office of Alien Property, which has taken over controlling stock in American Bemberg Corp. and North American Rayon Corp., finally permitted them to raise prices 10 per cent, the amount previously adopted by the industry.

Even farm prices, despite reports of more abundant grain supplies in this country, Soviet Russia and Europe, are advancing. One load of hogs topped $29.75 a hundredweight, a new high for the year and only 75 cents below the September high. High-grade steers edged up to $40, close to last January's record peak of $41.25.

As an over-all consequence, the Bureau of Labor Statistics index of wholesale commodity prices has climbed above where it was just before the break in commodity markets in February. Industrial and food prices are slightly higher than they were before the decline; farm prices slightly below.

This gives the Democratic Party a war cry. And if the price pinch gets worse in coming months, it could change some votes—depending upon how the candidates capitalize on it. Dewey will charge that the Truman Administration was responsible, and the Democrats will insist that the Republicans didn't give them the authority needed to keep down prices.

Steel Times Its Surrender

Chief price factor immediately ahead is steel. The strike in the captive coal mines forced banking of blast furnaces in and around Pittsburgh, which will intensify the scramble for steel by makers of autos, refrigerators, railroad equipment, and so on.

Thus, the United States Steel Corp. timed well its decision to surrender to the pressures of the Federal Trade Commission and abandon the basing-point system of fixing prices. Steel users will be discombobulated, annoyed, but—in a seller's market—acquiescent. All day Wednesday, after President Benjamin Fairless made the announcement, the corporation's phones were ringing. Callers demanded: "Why didn't the corporation fight?" Others asked more gently: "What does it mean?" The action was taken on advice of counsel, and only after long study of the Supreme Court decision ordering cement companies to abandon basing points.

Competitive relations, both inside and outside the steel industry, will change. Whereas, formerly all consumers of steel in a particular locality paid the same price, now they're quite apt to pay different prices—depending on (a) the company they buy from and (b) the freight haul.

Example: Numerous companies compete for sales in the Detroit market. Great Lakes Steel is right there. Formerly, U. S. Steel, say, would meet Great Lakes' price. Under the new system, U. S. Steel will sell in Detroit f.o.b. Chicago. The consumer will have to absorb the $8 a ton freight rate from Chicago to Detroit. So if Great Lakes and U. S. quote the same f.o.b. price, then U. S. Steel's laydown cost in Detroit on hot-rolled sheets might run to 15 per cent more than Great Lakes'.

Some Exceptions Sure

Today sellers of steel can get away with such differentials. But when steel is more plentiful, buyers will flock to producers closest to them. The consumer farthest from a steel mill will have high raw material costs. But some exceptions, especially in big markets, are bound to be made. Both sellers and buyers will demand them.

In any case, the price structure of the steel industry is due for upheaval. You can't upset practices of 50 years without confusion. In the process, it's likely that U. S. Steel will advance prices and thus make way for a third-round increase in wages. The steel industry cannot well hold back from its workers what the automobile, rubber, coal and electrical industries have granted.

As yet, the rise in prices—the high cost of living—has not cut into sales of consumers' durable goods, such as autos, refrigerators and the like. When people haven't ready cash, they borrow, as the rise in instalment sales credit since the end of the war shows (see chart). That the total isn't higher than prewar is because goods, particularly autos, haven't been made fast enough.

New Location For American Security Unit

American Security & Trust Co. will move its Northwest Branch to 15th and M st. nw., effective Wednesday, President Daniel W. Bell announced yesterday. The branch has been located for 25 years in the Security Storage Building at 1140 15th st. nw.

"We decided to move to larger quarters so that our many customers in the neighborhood could enjoy banking in attractive, modern, air-conditioned surroundings," Bell explained.

Richard E. Harris, assistant treasurer, will be manager of the branch which will offer deposit and withdrawal facilities, checking accounts and loan privileges.

APPOINTMENTS: More committee chairmen appointments were announced yesterday by Charles F. Suter, president of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association, as follows: Albert L. Neveux, jr., finance; John D. Marsh, past president; William B. Rumple, nominating; Louis Grayson and Charles K. Reid, veterans affairs (co-chairmen); Lawrence Reeves, sales congress; Vernon W. Holleman, Wilner Memorial Award; Charles K. Reid, training council; Chester Jones, ways and means.

REGIONAL TRADE: Trade levels in the Fifth Federal Reserve District, after seasonal adjustment, were generally lower in May than in April, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond will say in its forthcoming review of business. Farm income in the first four months of 1948 was 7 per cent less than in the corresponding period of 1947. Operations in textile mills show a declining tendency as a result of the elimination of the large backlog of orders built up after the war.

ODD LOTS: The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway has issued a new time table which it says is "as easy to read as a child's primer." Interspersed among the schedules are advertisements of its services and of attractions on its lines . . . Thirty-five de luxe passenger cars built by the American Car and Foundry Co. have been placed in service by the Missouri Pacific and Texas & Pacific Railroads.

CPAs TO CONVENE: President Benjamin F. Regardie will head the delegation representing the District of Columbia Institute of Certified Public Accountants which is leaving Washington this weekend for the annual Middle Atlantic States Accounting Conference at Myrtle Beach, S. C. The conference is scheduled for July 12-14.

Besides President and Mrs. Regardie, the group will include Mr. and Mrs. John M. Stoy, Mr. and Mrs. Rusco Crowell, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Bard, Mr. and Mrs. E. Franklin Odor, Mr. and Mrs. Burnell H. DeVos, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Malone, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Lee and Mr. and Mrs. James H. Rees.

EARNINGS: Western Union Telegraph Co. reports a net loss of $321,839 for May compared with $1,373,540 net income last year. Net loss for the first five months of 1948 totaled $909,623 against net income of $5,249,273 last year. Operations in May resulted in a deficit owing to lower revenues and a wage increase of eight cents an hour, effective April 1, the company said. The 1947 results reflected the unsual volume arising from the telephone strike.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—The grain market took a Government forecast for an unprecedented wheat, corn and oats crop without too much excitement today. Corn had some shaky moments and mostly finished lower, but oats were down only slightly and wheat ended with a steady undertone.

With a record-breaking corn crop predicted, the nearby deliveries of this grain met the biggest selling. July corn sank to the lowest level since early March, while September corn sank to a new low since the mid-February price break. Losses were reduced before the close.

The new crop corn deliveries, already selling at wide discounts under July and September, gave a respectable show of resistance to selling. May actually ended higher than yesterday after slumping during the first hour's activity.

Wheat closed ¼ lower to ⅝ higher, July 2.29⅜; corn was 3⅜ lower to ⅜ higher, July 1.99@1.99¼; oats were unchanged to ⅜ lower, July 88⅜@88⅝, and soybeans were 3 to 3½ lower, July 4.00. All grain contracts were under last year's prices at this time.

A forecast for the second largest wheat crop on record did not undermine wheat. There was a good reason—prices were just about at the Government loan level for cash wheat here. The loan is 2.29 for No. 1 hard wheat. September and May reached that point while July sank below it. December remained above through all the session.

There is no Government loan on futures and they could sink below that level. Traders pointed out they have done so in past years. However, the market has consistently met good support around the 2.28 and 2.29 point.

A corn crop of 3,328,862,000 bushels, as forecast by the Agriculture Department, would break all records. Traders were prepared for an optimistic report, but not quite that optimistic. Because the forecast was expected to bring out more corn from the old crop, it was July and September which dropped the most.

The range follows:

Pittsburgh's Rank in Steel Threatened

Pittsburgh, July 8 (AP).—The newly announced pricing policy of U. S. Steel Corp. is expected to seriously threaten Pittsburgh's claim to being the world's steel capital.

President Benjamin F. Fairless of "Big Steel" said his firm's announced intention to abandon its practice of absorbing freight charges "couldn't help" but be a blow to steel activity in Pittsburgh district mills.

"Nobody's going to make steel to pile up on the river banks if they can't sell it," Fairless explained to a news conference.

In the future, U. S. Steel will announce prices for steel products at the mill or shopping point. Formerly, U. S. Steel subsidiaries quoted delivered prices low enough to equal the delivered prices of competitors located near prospective customers. Bethlehem Steel Co. has made the same change.

Output Exceeds Consumption

Fairless said that while Pittsburgh was favorably located as far as assembly of raw materials was concerned its was in an unfavorable position for shipping steel to big consuming centers. He added:

"Pittsburgh is going to be very badly hit by the change, since it produces more steel than is consumed nearby."

Fairless said conditions which may result when demand more nearly balances supply may lead his firm to locate any new plants in other locations. He said Pittsburgh's disadvantageous competitive position "obviously" rules out any future expansion in this area.

Other Centers Affected

He stated that while other big steel-producing centers, like Chicago and Birmingham, also would be affected by the abandonment of the basing point method of selling steel, they would not be hit so hard as Pittsburgh.

Fairless pointed out, as an example, that Bethlehem Steel's plant at Sparrows Point, Md., could supply Philadelphia fabricators with steel sheets more cheaply than Pittsburgh mills because of freight costs. Similarly, he said, Detroit auto plants can be more easily supplied by water from Chicago mills.

Gas Price Rise Seen Likely In Near Future

Houston, Tex., July 10 (AP).—Before the year is out motorists may be digging deeper into their pockets for gasoline money.

Said a high ranking official of a major company last week: "Price increases by the end of the year are inevitable."

The reason? Prolonged continuation of the struggle for balance between supply and demand.

Accompanying this struggle is continuation of practices by some purchasers of paying a premium in excess of the prevailing posted crude oil prices.

Oil companies, both large and small, in the Texas area in recent weeks have announced several price "adjustments" for crude postings in specified fields. The hike generally has hit around 2 cents per barrel.

West Texas independent producers last week petitioned purchasers to wipe out a differential in prices between west Texas crude and other areas in the State.

Present West Texas postings average around 13 cents lower than in other southwest areas.

Crude oil production is on a decline for the first time in nearly two months, but gasoline processing figures have hit a new high for the second consecutive week.

N.J. Standard Asks Home Consumers To Enlarge Tanks

New York, July 10 (AP).—Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) today urged homeowners to install larger fuel tanks and fill present ones during this slack summer season.

The company offered "to furnish and install the larger tanks at reasonable cost for regular heating oil customers."

The Jersey Standard's publication, the Lamp, pointed out that the average oil-heated house can store only 275 gallons of fuel oil equal to about 14 per cent of the amount needed for winter heating. Customers are being urged to install 500- and 1000-gallon tanks.

The company said local suppliers could then move oil out of bulk storage space in the slack season, so that refineries could make and ship greater quantities to the bulk plants. In this way the country could enter the winter season with much larger supplies on hand.

Chain Store Sales

Walgreen Co. yesterday reported June sales of $13,201,259, a 7.6 per cent increase over the $12,264,035 for a year ago. Six months sales totaled $77,702,800, an increase of 5.9 per cent over the $73,341,693 for the first half of 1947. May sales showed a 4.7 per cent increase over the previous May.

Bond Stores, Inc., reported June sales of $6,595,331 compared with $6,412,860 last year, an increase of 2.8 per cent. Sales in the first half of 1948 aggregated $38,416,641, a decrease of 1.4 per cent from the total of $38,948,115 for the corresponding period of 1947.

GE Not Resuming Jap Production

New York, July 10 (AP). — The "economic climate" in Japan is not yet ripe for General Electric International Co. to resume its prewar associations with Japanese manufacturing interests, W. L. Herod, president of the firm, reported after a three-month tour of the Far East.

Among unfavorable factors, Herod cited inflationary trends with prices 65 to 100 times those of prewar in terms of yen, lack of peace treaty, and uncertainties over decentralization of industry and the extent of reparations.

D. C. Woman, 86, Charges Son Kept Realty Deal Proceeds

An 86-year-old woman charged in a District Court civil suit yesterday that she was left "with five cents" when her son induced her to sell her real estate and failed to give her the proceeds.

Justice David A. Pine signed a temporary restraining order to stop the son, Walter Bose, 59, of 1810 Randolph st. ne., from using $1832.57 and a $10,000 note secured by a deed of trust on the property at 1923 North Capitol st.

According to the injunction suit brought by the mother, Mrs. Laura Bose, of 1732 Webster st. nw., the North Capitol st. property was left her by her deceased husband many years ago.

The suit, filed through Attorney Burnita S. Matthews, says that Mrs. Bose has developed poor vision, a faulty memory and is hard of hearing. Because of her condition, the suit relates, she regularly indorsed the rent checks of her property over to the son, and entrusted him to use the money for her care.

Last year, according to the suit, Walter Bose attended to the sale of the property and obtanied her indorsement on the down-payment check and the note on the representation that he would deposit the funds for her. But last month, the suit states, the son married and the mother has not received the proceeds of the sale. As a result, she is without means of supporting herself, it was stated.

A hearing is scheduled for 10 a. m. July 20 in District Court.

SLIGHTLY EMBARRASSED—Eleven-year-old Sue Crowley, 2201 Lanier dr., Silver Spring, Md., is flabbergasted because her Border terrier, Philoberg Honesty, was adjudged "best dog" yesterday in the dog show sponsored by a group of Silver Spring children for the benefit of Children's Hospital. Sue was chairman of the show committee. Claude Williams (left), operator of Ashton Kennels, and Albert Stabler, jr., of Spencerville, look over Philoberg. Williams and Stabler, dog experts, had agreed to devote the morning to judging the entries

Children's Hospital was nearly $9 richer yesterday and a group of Silver Spring children had a good time.

The children staged a dog show at the home of E. Jackson Emrich, 9410 3d ave., Silver Spring, Md., the proceeds going to the hospital.

Occasionally there was a growl, but generally the canine contestants behaved well. There were plenty of entries until the "ugliest dog" class was announced. The ring remained empty while the youngsters became engaged in prettying their dogs. The class was passed over.

Sue Crowley, 11, 2021 Lanier dr., Silver Spring, who was chairman, blushed when the judges picked her dog, Philoberg Honesty, a Border terrier, as best dog in the show. Other winners were: Smallest dog, Barbara Jones; prettiest dog, Bartram Stiffler; best mannered, Mrs. C. M. Derryberry's dog, handled by Bill Gallagher; best jumper, Bob Pierce; dog with largest tail, Dick Gallagher.

Claude Williams, owner of the Ashton Kennels, and Albert Stabler, jr., of Spencerville, both dog fanciers and trainers, and Mrs. C. M. Derryberry of Silver Spring were judges.

Food Riots in Peru Return Martial Law

Lima, Peru, July 10 (AP).—The government tonight reimposed virtual martial law as the result of minor riots at food markets in Lima and Miraflores.

A statement said the riots were caused by "agitators whose political affiliation is well known."

Martial law was lifted only a few days ago after the government had put down an attempted revolution in southeastern Peru.

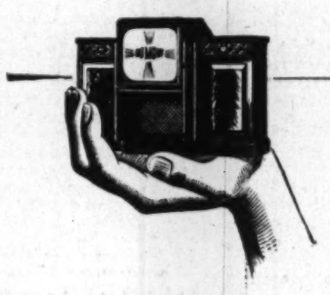
IT'S YOUR SET... BUT OUR REPUTATION



Here's why your Du Mont dealer may tell you you'll have to wait a week, or two, or even three, for delivery of your Du Mont television receiver.

THAT DU MONT RECEIVER you are eagerly waiting for is in the factory right now. Perhaps at this very moment a skilled craftsman is soldering one of its thousands of tiny connections. He is taking time to do it right.

Do you want him to hurry? It's your set.

Or perhaps your set is now on the test line.

That test line is really rough!

They put a set through all its normal paces; and then they abuse it. They deliberately try to bring out flaws and weaknesses. They torture its most delicate nerve centers and watch the screen to see if the picture flinches.

Let's say there's a capacitor in there that doesn't act quite right when the overload goes up to three times its rated capacity. Probably wouldn't make any trouble — not for years anyway. But then again, it might.

What do you want that inspector to do?

Shall he stamp it "OK" and ship it out to you?

Or shall he mark it "Reject. Replace Capacitor C-21-E and re-test"?

It's your set, mister! Will you wait another day or two to have it right? You don't have to make that decision. We made it. The set goes back. It's your set — but it's our reputation!

The reason your dealer must keep you waiting is that so many people want Du Monts. And the reason they all want Du Monts is that Du Mont has a fine reputation. A reputation for delivering the brightest, clearest steadiest picture even where conditions are poor. A reputation for trouble-free performance. A reputation for long life.

Maybe you hadn't thought about long life; but you know Du Mont built the first home receivers clear back in 1939 and those old-timers are still running fine.

That Du Mont receiver you are waiting for is going to bring a lot of enjoyment into your home. It's going to play a very important role in your life from now on.

We're sorry we can't promise you immediate delivery. But we do promise that when you get your Du Mont receiver, it will be as nearly perfect as human skill, and patience, and seventeen years of television experience can make it.

You'll soon forget the short wait; but ten years from now we hope you'll be telling the boys, "That old Du Mont of mine still pulls in such a swell picture I wouldn't swap it for a new one."

You won't be sorry then you waited for a Du Mont.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Pay Increase Goes Into Effect Today For 175,000 Here

PAY RAISE: It goes into effect as of today for most of the 175,000 classified employes in and nearby this city. It's a flat $330 for classified, and also employes in the legislative and judicial branches. Because of the delayed paydays, employes won't see the raise until they get their bi-weekly checks early in August.

DIFFERENTIAL: The idea of a pay differential for Federal workers based on the cost of living is being given serious study. It's a safe bet that you'll be hearing a lot about it in the months to come. At least two agencies have the problem under study.

A differential based on the cost of living would benefit Federal workers in this city, which has the highest living costs in the Nation. In some Southern and Midwest areas, it might be possible to cut Federal salaries a bit if the cost of living formula was used to determine wages.

The philosophy behind the differential argument is this: The Classification Act was set up to pay Federal workers similar salaries for similar work. That's a sound principle. Actually, however, it doesn't work out that way in practice. A dollar here, for example, doesn't buy as much as it does in some areas of the South and Midwest. So, the number of dollars one is paid is not as important as how much those dollars will buy.

COMMERCE-STATE: A long and smoldering feud between these two major departments on foreign economic policy is about to be settled. This is the story:

Commerce officials have accused State of grabbing and duplicating some of their duties in the foreign economic field. In return, State has accused Commerce of not doing its job.

Several months ago the warring factions were brought face to face at the Budget Bureau. It was agreed that an independent committee should be set up to study and recommend a solution. Budget hired Roy Dangerfield, vice president of the University of Oklahoma, to make the study.

The Dangerfield committee has completed its work, and its recommendations are a victory for Commerce, although both departments were rapped in the report. These are among the recommendations:

That State is to merge its international resources division and its petroleum division; that State should not assign foreign policy specialists to commodity work in any office; that State should consult with Commerce officials throughout the planning stages of general commercial treaties; that State should not undertake research studies in the field of financial and economic development; that it should merge its financial affairs division with its investment and economic development division, and that inquiries from American businessmen on foreign trade matters are to be referred to the Commerce Department.

The report took a crack at Commerce's Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. It suggested that its staff officers be reduced and that the savings be used to hire top-flight operating people, especially in the commodities division of the Office of International Trade. It also said that the OIT should notify State of its decisions and clearances.

It was conceded that State must have a staff in the conomic field to integrate Commerce's views with those of other departments, so it can arrive at a unified foreign policy. State doesn't like the report but it will put it into effect anyway. Commerce has informed the Budget Bureau that it will accept the report without argument.

ARMY PER DIEMS: After standing on its dignity for several days the Army has finally consented to make public its new rates of pay for its per diem employes in and nearby this city. The average increase for the 3900 Army and Air Force per diems is a bit higher than Navy's 9 cents an hour. Navy last fall gave its 13,000 per diems a 6-cent increase which the Army didn't meet at that time.

Army and Air Force has five rates of pay for its per diems. The following are for the middle, or third rate:

Laborers, from 93 cents to $1.05 an hour; trades helpers, from $1.03 to $1.16; maintenance painters, from $1.24 to $1.37; carpenters, $1.27 to $1.41; auto mechanics, $1.38 to $1.52; machinist, $1.44 to $1.59, and tool, die and gauge maker, $1.59 to $1.75.

Like Navy, Army and Air Force officials hope to get the new rates into effect this week.

NAVY JOBS: The Naval Ordnance Laboratory at nearby White Oak, Md. has these openings:

P-1 through P-6 mechanical engineers; P-1 through P-5 electrical engineers; P-1 through P-6 electronics engineers; P-5 chemical engineers; P-2 through P-5 physicists; CAF-3 and 4 stenos; CAF-3 typists; CAF-2 phone operators for night duty; SP-6 engineering aides; 60-day jobs for SP-5 engineering draftsmen, and openings for men with at least four years of experience as refrigeration and air conditioning mechanics, auto mechanics, electricians, raido mechanics, machinists and plumbers.

If interested, contact the NOL personnel office, or call Shepherd 7100, extension 388 for further information.

Alexandria Jury Report Disregarded

Officials Evince Little Interest in Health and Other Reforms Demanded

Alexandria officials showed little inclination yesterday to take action on wide-ranging recommendations for civic improvement made Friday by a Corporation Court grand jury.

There were promises that a couple of points would be presented for possible action. Some felt that even though a grand jury's recommendation for legislation have no more legal standing than those of an individual citizen, such a report might have some practical effect.

Reaction from most city councilmen, however, was: "This is old stuff that we are working on now; if the grand jury wanted the council to act, why didn't it come to the council instead of going to the Corporation Court?"

Recommendations Made

The report, presented to Judge William P. Woolls, urged elimination of privies, inspection of rooming houses, elimination of unsanitary housing, stiffer sentences for drunks, setting up of a police trial board, a pension plan for police and firemen, and a separate office in police headquarters for traffic violators.

Of the recommendation to set up a police and firemen's pension plan, Councilman Everett A. Hellmuth said he has been working on such a plan for all city employes, and hopes to have it completed next month.

About the recommendation to authorize the police court judge to commit chronic alcoholics to clinics for treatment, Councilman R. Samuel Luckett said he didn't think you could force the cure on a drunkard.

No Comment by Judge

Police Court Judge James R. Duncan had no comment on charges he is too easy on drunks. Duncan has previously stated he thinks chronic drunks should be treated as medical cases.

Of the charges of unsanitary conditions and recommendations for action, Councilman John W. Tulloch said: "The State Department of Health is investigating the local health department. Let's wait for their report." He thought the jurors were sincere in their work, but observed that "if they were so public spirited they should have presented these matters to the city council."

Said another councilman: "The report contained a little of everything and not much of anything."

For Police Trial Board

But Armistead L. Boothe, Alexandria's delegate to the General Assembly, said he would present legislation at the next session to set up a police trial board in the city.

Councilman Luckett said he will offer a motion to the city council that rooming houses be subject to inspection by the health department.

As an example of the need for such legislation, the grand jury cited a rooming house at Oronoco and Henry sts., where it was stated 20 persons live in a ramshackle house where the only toilet doesn't work.

The jury also recommended the city act to prevent people from living in garages such as those at 526 and 528 North Alfred st., where families lack lights, water or toilets.

Shooting and Cutting

Two weeks ago, two men were shot, one fatally, at the latter address. This same grand jury had earlier indicted another man from the address on a cutting charge. Juror Irvin M. Hufford pointed to these cases as illustrating how living conditions cause crime.

Mrs. Martha Pfeiffer, president of the Alexandria League of Women Voters whose report last month on shortcomings in the city's public health program set off the State investigation of the health department, felt that "as far as the jury's report touched on health conditions, it was good. I hope the recommendations will be followed through. But it did not include the whole health picture."

The present grand jury will go out of existence this month, but members were determined their work would have results. Said Ernest L. Mankin: "I have just started." And Hufford added that "if no action is taken we can always ask to appear before a future grand jury."

Retired Salesman Found Dead With Wound in Head

A 60-year-old salesman was found dead with a bullet wound in his head last night in his trailer home in the rear of 5014 Iroquis st., Berwyn, Md.

Prince Georges County police identified him as Raymond Anderson Prettyman. A .22-calibre rifle was found by his side, Corpl. Roland Sweitzer said.

The salesman was found in the trailer by Albert Jackson, 5014 Iroquis st., who investigated when he saw Prettyman's newspaper still outside the trailer. Prettyman had suffered heart trouble, he said, and he thought he might have had an attack.

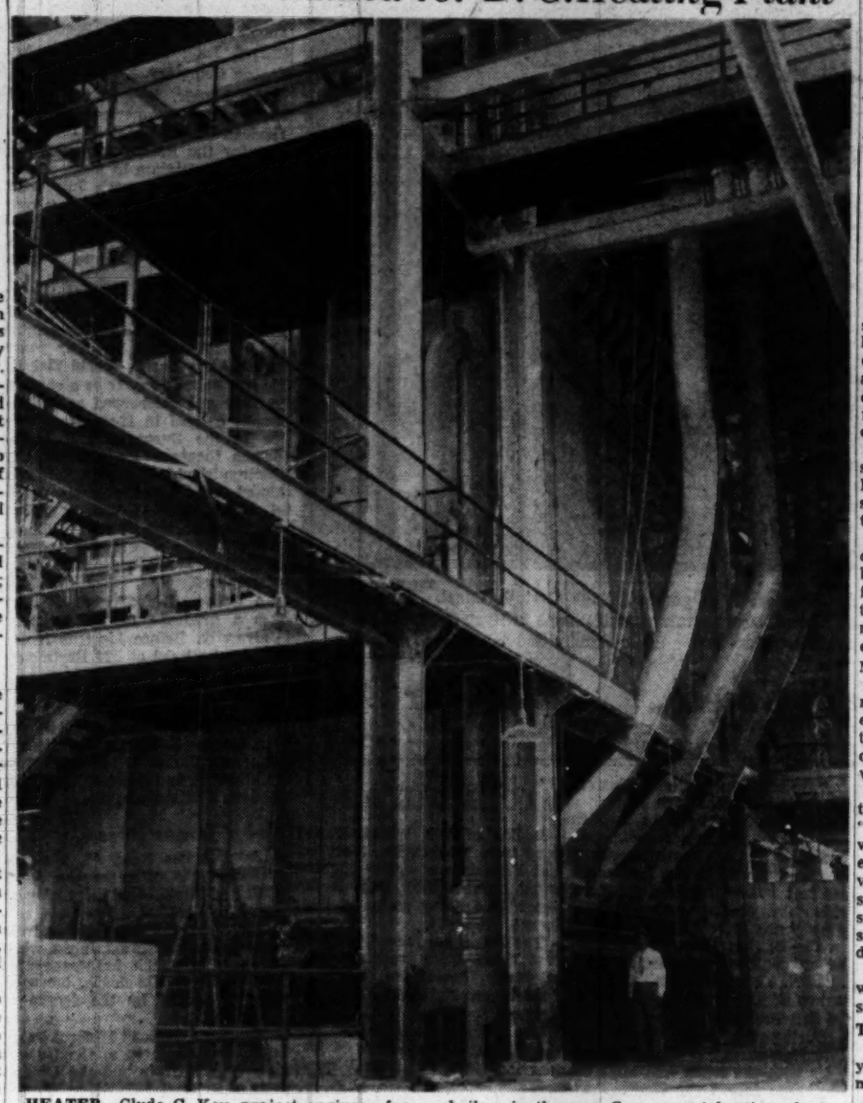
2-Week Test Planned for D. C. Heating Plant



HEATER—Clyde C. Key, project engineer for the PBA, is dwarfed by one of the two furnace boilers in the new Government heating plant, 29th and K sts. nw.

2-Week Test of $8 Million District Heating Unit Planned

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Sometime this week a mechanic at the new Government heating plant at 29th and K sts. will strike a match and light some kindling wood.

This commonplace act will be the start of a two-week test planned for the Public Buildings Administration's new eight-million-dollar west central heating plant which this winter will help to keep warm the Federal employes in some 125 public buildings.

While only two of the six giant boilers planned for the steam plant have been installed for the next heating season, they will be able to add 500,000 pounds of steam per hour to the output of the hard-working central heating plant at C st., between 12th and 14th sts. sw.

See Chance for Repairs

The 15-year-old Central plant, which has six similar boilers, has been going it alone up to now, at near-capacity during much of the last few years and at full capacity during last year's peak periods. Long-needed overhauls at this plant can be made after the new plant is in operation, probably by September. And in summer periods, one boiler at either installation will be sufficient to supply steam for hot water and cafeteria cooking, Deputy PBA Commissioner Charles A. Peters explained yesterday.

The two boilers, which tower from the basement to the fourth floor level, are 97 feet high, 34 feet wide and about 40 feet deep. Each will consume well over 100 tons of coal a day as it generates steam in 1400 tubes filled with preheated water in the boiler.

The coal to feed the boiler stokers—the first of which is expected early this week—will be dumped by trucks in a coal receiving building on the other side of K st. from the steam plant. Conveyor belts with a capacity of 150 tons an hour will take the fuel 500 feet through a tunnel under K st. to a yard next door to the plant. The yard will store some 15,000 tons.

More conveyor belts—operated by 150 horsepower electric motors with power from the plant's own turbo-generators — will take the fuel to a "breaker," which will crush it, and then up to the top of the building for distribution to the bunkers of each boiler.

Unburned Particles Trapped

Any unburned particles of coal dust, explained Clyde C. Key, project engineer for PBA, will be caught by high-voltage electrodes in the chimneys and knocked down into the boiler furnace.

As for the ashes from the huge boiler furnaces, they will be mixed with water and pumped through pipes running back through the same tunnel used to bring in the coal. The ashes will be precipitated at the coal receiving and ash disposal building south of K st., and carted away.

Through automatic equipment and centralized devices, one engineer will be able to control the work of the plant with a staff of 60 men under full six-boiler operation.

Construction of the plant, designed by W. E. Reynolds, PBA commissioner, began in 1941, was stopped during the war, and was resumed about 30 months ago by the Charles H. Tompkins Co. By the fall of 1949, the PBA expects to have four boilers operating.

Trial Board Plan Indorsed By Bar Groups

2 Associations Back Use of Civilian Lawyers To Hear City Cases

The District Bar Association and the Washington Bar Association have pledged support for the District Commissioners' plan to place civilian lawyers on police and fire trial boards.

The civilian lawyers would replace members of the city's legal staff and end the situation where fellow assistant corporation counsels serve as prosecutor and trial board member.

The board of directors of the District Bar Association Friday authorized Lowry N. Coe, president, to name a panel of lawyers. They acted on a request from Daniel B. Maher, special assistant corporation counsel assigned to plan the trial board reorganization.

Coe was directed to set up a 10-man panel of "experienced attorneys with judgment" for the non-paid assignments on the departmental trial boards. The directors acted unanimously considering the work "a civic duty," Kenneth N. Parkinson, treasurer, reported.

The executive committee of the Washington Bar Association, meeting Friday night, also authorized its president, Maurice R. Weeks, to appoint a 10-man panel.

Originally the civilian lawyers were to be paid, but when District officials reported a lack of funds for payments, Maher was directed to set up the program on a volunteer basis.

D. C. Aides Given Hope For Pay Hike

If Special Session Is Called, Problem Will Be Considered, Rep. Dirksen States

Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.), chairman of the House District Committee, yesterday held out a faint hope to disappointed District Government employes who didn't get the pay raises gained by their federally employed colleagues.

If there should be a special session of Congress between now and November, he said, "this matter should and will receive further attention."

And if action could be obtained on the raises, he added, "it would be possible to date back the effective date of the pay increase to equalize it with the increases made available to other Federal employes."

Not Up For Reelection

Representative Dirksen has announced he would not run for reelection this fall, and thus any action he might take as chairman of the House District Committee would be limited to this year.

Expressing "genuine distress" that the Eightieth Congress gave "modest pay increases for postal workers and Federal employes generally" without making similar provisions for District employes, Dirksen placed the blame for this squarely on the fact that a District sales tax bill was filibustered to death

The proposed District pay raises were dependent on passage of the sales tax, he explained.

Tax Bill Held Vital

"Without the sales tax," he said yesterday, "pay raises would have meant more debt."

For those District employes who feel a special session this year is a remote possibility, Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), fiscal expert on the Senate District Committee, declared last week he will try to place the District tax problem before the new Congress at the beginning of the 1949 session.

He, too, said he believed District workers are as much entitled to pay increases as anyone, but reiterated his stand that they should be dependent on a tax bill which would meet the additional costs.

Dirksen, who was leaving yesterday for a few days of rest "down the bay," said it was "regrettable indeed" that the "valiant endeavors" of Representative George J. Bates R., Mass.) and Senator Cain and attempts of the District Committees' chairmen, had failed to get the revenue measure passed.

Woman Charged With Taking $2200 In 'Pickup' Case

A 39-year-old woman was charged yesterday with stealing $2200 from a motorist in a "pickup" robbery.

She is Mrs. Maurice Clay, 1447 Newton st. nw. She pleaded innocent in Municipal Court and was held under $1000 bond for a hearing July 16.

The alleged robbery took place Thursday at 2:45 a. m. in the automobile of Leo Domin, 31, a salesman of 614 Randolph st. nw.

Domin reported that he picked up the woman in the 1300 block of 14th st. nw., and when he reached the 1500 block of 14th st. nw., she darted from the automobile and made her escape.

He then noted his wallet, containing $2200 in $100 bills was missing. Assistant United States Attorney Robert E. Short said that $1500 was recovered from Mrs. Clay.

Dirksen Makes Demand for D.C. Sex Crime Curbs

Calls for 'Strong Action' as Police Piece Out Story Of Girl's Slaying

House District Committee Chairman Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.) took official cognizance of the Carol Bardwell murder yesterday as police filled in gaps of the story told by her confessed slayer.

Carol, 11, was slashed to death June 27 in Rock Creek Park near 17th st. and Colorado ave. nw.

Eugene H. James, 31-year-old Baltimore janitor, has admitted that he killed Carol with a butcher knife and then returned to Baltimore, where he took the life of another 11-year-old, Marsha Brill, last Tuesday.

Dirksen, in a statement, demanded "strong remedial action" to prevent the repetition of such sex crimes in the District.

Dirksen said the "recurrence of heinous sex crimes" in the District is a matter requiring "immediate and sustained attention."

City "in Bad Light"

He said the recent crimes in this category place the Nation's Capital in a "bad light" throughout the country.

He suggested the addition of mounted police to patrol trails and paths in unfrequented park areas.

Inspector Floyd Truscott, acting superintendent of Metropolitan Police, had no comment to make on the Dirksen statement other than to remark that the parks are primarily the jurisdiction of park police.

However, Capt. Mark Raspberry, head of the park police, welcomed the suggestion of a mounted patrol and said he could easily use at least a dozen horses and at least 15 men properly trained to patrol parks in Washington.

Captain Raspberry said park police now have only two horses for patrol. One, he said, is kept in Fort Dupont Park, Anacostia, and the second in Rock Creek Park.

He said he would like to have a horse patrol along the C & O Canal from Georgetown to Chain Bridge.

Wants Six on Duty

"We should have at least two mounted men on duty," he said, "in each of three places, along the canal, in Rock Creek Park and in Fort Dupont Park, from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. and from 4 p. m. to midnight."

He said it would be even better if three men could be assigned to patrol duty in Rock Creek Park during the two shifts.

Captain Raspberry declared the park police have advocated such a plan for a number of years but have been consistently refused the necessary funds by the House District Committee, which is responsible for park police appropriations.

Although the park police come under the jurisdiction of the Department of Interior, their operating costs are included in the District budget.

Meanwhile, detective officials here said some lapses were to be expected in the confession of James because of his highly emotional state at the time of the slaying.

Arrival Put at 7:30 A. M.

The time of James' arrival in Washington on a freight car the day of the Bardwell slaying has been estimated at about 7:30 a. m. But Capt. Robert V. Murray, second on command of the detective bureau, conceded it might have been later.

"Here," said Murray, "is a man with no watch. He hadn't bought a ticket for a specific train. He was in no hurry to get anywhere. Time didn't mean a thing to him."

Police denied that the accused killer was not acquainted with Washington. When questioned in Baltimore he told Washington detectives he worked as a laborer here for about a month in 1939. He said he is acquainted with several sections of the city and has friends here.

The riddle of why Carol Bardwell's body was found 25 feet from her bicycle was not explained in the confession made by the Baltimore janitor, police admit.

Facts Held Obscured

Here again, they pointed out, James' perverted passion of the moment had obscured continuity and fact in the mind of the alleged killer.

They believe that when the strange Negro started for Carol she dropped her bicycle and fled. That he pursued her into the underbrush where her body was found and slashed her throat.

In his statement to Washington detectives, James said he slashed twice at the girl's throat, once on each side, at which time he experienced sexual gratification.

This is at slight variance with the autopsy report of Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, who said the child's throat had been slashed only once with a keen-bladed instrument.

However, Dr. MacDonald admitted yesterday it was possible that there were two slashes, merging to appear as a single slash. The two slashes could also explain why the girl's jugular vein but not her windpipe was severed.

Analysis at Baltimore

Originally police here said the clothes worn by James at the time of the killing would be sent here for examination. However, Murray said yesterday it had been decided to have the chemical analysis made by Baltimore police.

With things nearly back to normal in the detective bureau for the first time in two weeks, police went ahead preparing their report on the case for submission to the office of the United States Attorney the first of this week.

Inspector Robert S. Bryant, chief of detectives, said it was expected the evidence would be presented to the grand jury immediately for an indictment.

James has already been indicted in Baltimore for the murder of Marsha Brill, who was slain with the same butcher knife used to kill Carol Bardwell.

In Baltimore Jail

The janitor, who is now in the Baltimore City Jail, has also been indicted for the rape and robbery of a 38-year-old Baltimore housewife on June 15.

He will be arraigned Tuesday in Baltimore Criminal Court before Judge John T. Tucker.

J. Bernard Wells, State's attorney, said the arraignment will be to arrange for the appointment of counsel if James fails to employ his own attorney and to take the defendant's plea. Wells said a trial will be held as promptly as possible.

Even though Baltimore authorities are speeding court procedure in the case, Inspector Bryant said he hopes it will be possible to bring the man to Washington briefly so he can reenact his crime.

Background Probed

Both Baltimore and Washington police are continuing to probe into the background of the confessed killer of two young girls.

His criminal record shows 13 complaints by white women in northwest Baltimore who said he either attacked them with knives, attempted to assault them or robbed them.

Arrested in June, 1940, after this series of assaults and robberies, James was sentenced to a 10-year prison term. He was granted a Christmas commutation last December.

Actually, the commutation cut short the man's sentence only 12 days because of time off for good behavior.

James Calm Murder Day, Family Says

Baltimore, Md., July 10 (Spl.).—Eugene H. James, 31, confessed slayer of two 11-year-old girls, one here and in Washington, "was never one to talk much."

His mother, Mrs. Bessie James, told a reporter today that on July 6, the day Marsha Brill was slain in Baltimore, police visited the James home while her son was away.

She said when her son returned she asked him if he knew anything about it.

Questioned Son

Her son, she said, was calm and normal. She said he remarked, "I guess whoever's done it is half way to New York by now."

"I looked him straight in the eye," said the mother, "and told him the law'd been here and asked him if he'd done anything bad."

She said her son replied, "Mammie, you know I don't carry a knife."

Two of James' four married sisters were present and one of them, Mrs. Ruth Patterson, remarked, "He liked girls, but he never was one to talk much. Why, he sat through the Louis-Walcott fight without once saying a word."

Little Schooling

The mother said James' schooling ended in the third or fourth grade, and that for a time he attended a Catholic school.

She said he had attended Catholic Church since that time and frequently would argue about the catechism with his sister, who is a Baptist, like the rest of the family.

The mother and sisters said James had suffered from a "sick mind" since he was 18 or 19, when he was beaten unconscious by a man. Mrs. James said her husband, a bus driver, died nine years ago.

"He never did like school," said Mrs. Patterson, the sister, "but he liked to draw and listen to music—he even tried to write some music, and he liked to cook."

The family said they are confident that James is innocent of the two murders.

Marine Reserve Fliers Leave for 2-Week Training

One hundred and fifty-eight Washington men, members of the Anacostia Marine Air Reserve Unit, took off at 10 a. m. yesterday for two weeks of mock warfare at the Cherry Point, N. C., Marine Corps Air Station.

The group of 50 officers and 108 enlisted men included members of the Hell's Angels Marine Reserve fighter squadron which saw combat at Vella la Vella in the Solomons and on Guam. Sixteen Corsair fighters and five transports carried flyers and ground crews, and will participate in the maneuvers.

Command officer of the detachment is Lieut. Col. William H. Doolen, USMC, of 1009 N. Hudson st., Arlington.

Area News in Brief

Judge's Histrionics Clear Up a Case

Judge John P. McMahon played drunk in Municipal Court in order to give a fair trial to a man who could not hear, read, write or understand sign language.

The defendant, John Culver, 28, of 331½ M pl. sw., was charged with being intoxicated Friday. Court attaches tried to explain the charge to him, but all approaches, written or spoken, failed, even dactylology, finger-wordmaking used by deaf mutes.

Then Judge McMahon took over.

He raised his hand, thumb pointing to his mouth, in a long drinking gesture. Culver nodded his head and grunted assent.

The judge then raised first one, then two, three and four fingers at which point Culver again nodded.

Judge McMahon put the clincher on. He weaved in his chair and rolled his head like a man at the top of a toot.

Culver nodded happily.

Finally, the jurist lifted 10 fingers and said, "That means a $10 fine."

Culver nodded again—but not happily.

Food Condemned

Eight cases of food condemnations were taken to Municipal Court last week, the Health Department reported yesterday, resulting in fines and forfeitures of $350.

A total of 1696 establishments were checked and 17 condemnations of 53,803 pounds of foodstuffs were made.

Wedding Bills Wanted

The Rockville Fire Department has offered to foot the wedding bills of a pair of Montgomery County sweethearts who are getting married in August.

Only catch is that the couple must agree to be married publicly at the fire department's twelfth annual carnival, August 12 through 28, to be held off the Rockville pike at the east entrance to Rockville.

The fire department will contribute ring, license and clergyman, the bride's wedding gown and bedroom furniture—all free. Applicants should apply to Fire Chief W. Valentine (Cupid) Wilson.

Maryland Returns Up

Nearly 61,000 more income tax returns were filed on earnings of Maryland residents this year than in 1947, Maryland State Comptroller James J. Lacy announced yesterday.

The increase represents nearly 25 per cent over 1947, and the State's tax authorities "are not yet through counting, nor for that matter, through investigating the possibilities of uncovering those that have not yet filed," he stated.

Rep. Ellis Speaks

100 Attend Fort Stevens Battle Rites

Standing on the spot where Abraham Lincoln was under fire in the Civil War, Representative Hubert S. Ellis (R., W. Va.) last night declared this hour is no less critical than it was in Lincoln's time.

Speaking before nearly 100 persons at exercises commemorating the Battle of Fort Stevens on July 11 and 12, 1864, on the battlesite at 13th and Quackenbos sts. nw., he said the country's need is for "competent and courageous leadership."

Exorbitant taxation and "enormous" shipment of goods abroad, "without receiving anything in return," is exhausting the country's productive capacity, Representative Ellis said.

"The American people are being terribly impoverished," he declared. Heavy exports are "causing great suffering to the 20 millions of our people in the lower income brackets."

Miss E. Grace Brame, department president, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, placed a wreath at a stone marking the spot where Lincoln is said to have been fired upon by soldiers of Confederate Gen. Jubal Early.

The program, sixteenth annual observance of the battle, was sponsored by the Ladies of the GAR. Other speakers included Owen C. Holleran, commander of the D. C. Department of the American Legion, and James Walker, past commander.

Assault Cases Put Off

Cases against two men accused of indecent assaults were continued yesterday in Municipal Court.

The charge against Lloyd Kerlin, 40, of 3422 13th st. nw., will be tried by jury August 10. He is under $500 bond after his arrest Friday on complaint of a 24-year-old woman that he molested her while she was walking with her sister near 14th and Girard sts. nw.

John O'Neil, 24, of 1418 M st. nw., will be tried August 17. He is under $500 on a charge that he placed his hands indecently upon Detective Louis A. Fochette, a plainclothes police officer of the vice squad, Friday night in the lavatory of a downtown theater.

ATHENS BECKONS—Knute A. Johnston, a civil engineer with the Army, shows Mrs. Johnston and their daughter, Ramona, photographs of the Corinth Canal. Johnston returned to his home in Hyattsville, Md., to pick up his family and take them to Greece

Optimism High in Greece, Hyattsville Engineer Reports

An area engineer just returned from Greece reports optimism high in that Balkan country.

He is Knute A. Johnston, 5531 Gallatin st., Hyattsville, Md., home on a flying two-weeks visit to pack up his wife, 18-year-old daughter Ramona and 14-year-old son Norman to take them back to Athens.

Military gains by government troops against guerillas and the promise of ECA help have stabilized Greece, he said.

Americans are extremely popular and the murder of CBS Correspondent George Polk was deeply mourned, Johnston said.

Johnston, a civil engineer with the Army, has been on duty in Greece for nearly a year clearing the Corinth Canal and reconstructing bridges and docks destroyed during the occupation.

He left Athens July 5, a few hours after attending ceremonies marking the reopening of the Corinth Canal—vital link between the Gulf of Corinth and the Gulf of Saronic. King Paul cut the tape that let the first vessel through the waterway.

American engineers have moved with dispatch in clearing away the wreckage of war, Johnston said. He had special praise for his chief, Col. E. W. Griffith, Army engineer for the district, for restoring the canal in less than nine months. Germans had tunneled deep into the limestone hills flanking the canal and set off explosives blocking the canal with debris.

Johnston was born in Sweden and still talks with a Scandinavian accent. He has been traveling around the world since he was 14. He left home to take a job as a cabin boy. That was 40 years ago. Five years later he came ashore in the United States. He trained as an engineer at Hamilton College, N. Y., and the United States Army Engineers Specialist School in San Francisco.

During the First World War Johnston served as a warrant officer with the Army and after his discharge joined the Navy. Post-war Army assignments took him to the Philippines and to Siberia. During the most recent war he was assigned to harbor construction in Liberia.

A member of Sergt. Jasper Post, No. 13, American Legion, here, he also has joined Legion Post, No. 1, in Athens.

Policeman Shoots Man in Chase

A 25-year-old man was shot last night by Police Pvt. James A. Hansbrough after a chase following a reported theft.

Hansbrough said he shot William H. Cooper, 33 Defrees st. nw., when Cooper attempted to crawl through a window of a house in the 500 block of L st. after being ordered to descend from the window ledge.

O. C. Morris Rites Will Be Held Tuesday

Funeral services for Ornall C. Morris, 53, Department of Agriculture official and former Washington area resident, will be held Tuesday at 2 p. m. at Fort Myer Chapel. Interment will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Mr. Morris, budget and fiscal officer of the American Section, Mexican-United States Commission for the Eradication of Foot-and-Mouth Disease in Mexico, was killed in a plane crash July 2 in southeastern Mexico. He was one of 14 passengers on the plane chartered by the commission for a flight from Vera Cruz to Mexico City.

He had been in the employ of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture since 1922, except for four years in the Army during World War II. He was called to duty as a captain in 1942 and discharged as a lieutenant colonel in 1946 after service in the European and India-Burma theaters. He received the Distinguished Unit Badge, Soldier's Medal, Asiatic-Pacific Service Medal, World War II Victory Medal and the American Theater Ribbon.

Mr. Morris also was a veteran of World War I, attaining the grade of sergeant.

A native of Monroeton, Pa., he was a graduate of Southeastern University. Before his transfer to Mexico he lived at 509 Dartmouth ave., Silver Spring.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lola Fearnow Morris; three brothers, Fred C. Morris, Cheltenham, Pa., George E. Morris, Norristown, Pa., and Daniel W. Morris, Wayland, N. Y., and a sister, Mrs. R. B. Fisher, Cheltenham, Pa.

John James Ross

John James Ross, 43, a statistician in the office of the Army Chief of Staff, died yesetrday at Mt. Alto Hospital.

Mr. Ross was convalescing from severe burns suffered July 5 when a chair in which he was sitting caught fire. His death, however, was attributed by the family to overwork.

Mr. Ross, born in Mineral Point, Wis., was educated at the University of Wisconsin and the University of Pennsylvania. He served as a major in World War II and was cited for outstanding work in his department.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at St. Johns Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Gobel Ross, 3034 Q st. nw., and a sister, Mrs. Ivan P. Donaghey, Madison, Wis.

Mrs. Fuller Dies; Aide in Medical Office

Mrs. Hugh Fuller, 54, secretary in the office of the Surgeon General of the Army here, died yesterday in George Washington Hospital of cancer.

Mrs. Fuller

She had been seriously ill for one month and had been in the hospital a week.

Mrs. Fuller, whose address was 5142 MacArthur blvd. nw., had lived in the District since 1943, when her husband, Hugh Fuller, went to work for the Washington branch of the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Born in Crawford County, Ohio, she went to school in Galion, Ohio, and moved to Delaware, Ohio, as a young woman. As Alice Humiston, she was married there in 1923 to Fuller; she was treasurer of the Presbyterian Church in Delaware from 1923 till 1936.

In 1936 she moved to Cleveland and in 1941 to New York City, teaching medical vocabulary classes in schools for medical assistants in both cities.

Employed in the laboratories branch, preventive medicine, Office of the Surgeon General of the Army, Mrs. Fuller was at work on a revised vocabulary of medical terms for premedical students and nurses in training when she died.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by a niece and a nephew.

Funeral services and burial will be in Delaware, Ohio, Tuesday.

Miss S. Louise Harper

Requiem mass for Miss S. Louise Harper, 59, a doctor's technician and native Washingtonian who died Friday at Georgetown Hospital, will be said at 9 a. m. Monday at Our Lady of Victory Church, MacArthur blvd. and Reservoir rd. nw. Burial will be in Druid Ridge Cemetery, Baltimore.

Miss Harper, who was born and educated in the District but spent most of her adult years in Baltimore, died after an illness of 14 months, the last four at the hospital.

After returning here a year ago, she had made her home with a nephew, D. Kenneth Harbison, at 1811 47th pl. nw. She had been employed as a doctor's technician in Baltimore.

Besides her nephew, she is survived by a brother, C. Frank Harper of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. Lillian A. Harbison of the 47th pl. address.

Mrs. Ella C. Merritt

Funeral services for Mrs. Ella C. Merritt, 87, who died Friday at the National Homeopathic Hospital, will be held at the Gawler chapel, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw., Monday at 2:30 p. m. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Merritt, widow of Addis Dean Merritt, was born and educated in New Bedford, Mass. She made her home at 3900 Connecticut ave. nw.

Sutherland Rites Today; Burial Monday

Mrs. Mary E. Sutherland, 91, widow of William Dellie Sutherland who was the owner and operator of the Mount Pleasant Coal Co. here until his death in 1937, died yesterday at the Baptist Home, 3248 N st. nw., after an illness of about two months.

A native of Richmond, Va., Mrs. Sutherland was born January 23, 1857. She was the daughter of William H. Hardgrove and Mrs. Sallie E. Hardgrove. Mrs. Sutherland was educated in private schools in Richmond.

She was married in 1878 and moved to Washington about 1907, just a few years before her husband purchased the coal company.

Mrs. Sutherland was a member of the National Baptist Memorial Church, 16th st. and Columbia rd. nw., for about 35 years.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Mary B. Fitzgerald, and Miss Ruth Adelaide Sutherland, both of 3620 16th st. nw.; two brothers, George H. Sutherland of the 16th st. nw. address, and D. Trevilian Sutherland of Richmond; three grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held today at 5 p. m., at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be Monday at 2 p. m., in the Hollywood Cemetery in Richmond.

Mrs. E. H. Eichelberger

Mrs. Emma H. Eichelberger, a former District Health Department social worker and a practicing chiropractor, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital after she suffered a cerebral hemorrhage at the home of a friend Friday night.

A native of Fairfax, Va., Mrs. Eichelberger was a resident of Washington for about 40 years. She lived at 4701 Connecticut ave. nw.

Mrs. Eichelberger was a social worker in the District Health department's Venereal Disease Clinic for about 20 years before her retirement about a year ago. Following her retirement, she opened a chiropractic office at 1721 I st. nw.

Mrs. Eichelberger was the former Miss Emma H. Spaulding and the daughter of a Civil War veteran. Orphaned at an early age, she was raised by a family in Fairfax, Va. She attended chiropractors' colleges in Chicago. About 2 weeks ago she returned from Scranton, Pa., where she took a postgraduate course in chiropractics. Mrs. Eichelberger was divorced.

She was a member of the Order of the Eastern Star here.

Mrs. Eichelberger leaves several nephews and nieces.

In Memoriam

SOLLERS, LOUIS. In memory of LOUIS SOLLERS, who departed so suddenly one year ago today, July 11, 1947.
I have lost my soul's companion,
A life linked with my own;
And day by day I miss him more
As I walk through life alone.
My lips cannot tell how I miss him,
My heart cannot tell what to say;
God alone knows how I miss him
In a home that is lonesome today.
HIS WIFE.

SOLLERS, LOUIS. In memory of LOUIS SOLLERS, who departed so suddenly one year ago today, July 11, 1947.
Gone, dear Father, gone forever;
How we miss your smiling face;
But you left us to remember
None on earth can take your place.
A happy home we once enjoyed,
How sweet the memory still,
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill.
DAUGHTERS AND GRANDSON.

Superhighway to Fort Meade Graded About Third of Way

Grading is about "one-third completed" on a new superhighway between Washington and Fort Meade, Harold J. Spelman, division engineer for the Public Roads Administration in Arlington, said yesterday.

The new superhighway, to be known as the Washington-Baltimore Parkway, will begin at the District Line and extend 18 miles to a point near the northern limits of Fort Meade, Md.

It is designed to ease motorists past more than half of the accident-ridden Baltimore Pike, now the main intercity artery.

If further funds become available from Congress for the project, Spelman said, the Washington-Baltimore Parkway should be completed "in several years."

Described in Article

In an article written for the July issue of the magazine Civil Engineering, the engineer gave this description of the new highway:

It will begin at the District Line as a continuation of New York ave., run parallel and to the southeast of the Baltimore Pike across Good Luck rd., then east of Greenbelt, across the Prince Georges County line near Brook Bridge, then join Jessup rd. near the northern boundary of Fort Meade.

It will eventually be a six-lane, divided highway with a grass center strip varying from 15 to 400 feet—designed for speeds of 75 miles an hour.

It will have maximum curves of slightly more than two degrees, maximum grades of 3 per cent, and traffic lanes each 12 feet wide.

The parkway will have no grade crossings. Nine entrances or "interchanges," will be needed in the highway's 18¾ miles. Four of these will serve Bladensburg, Riverdale, and Cheverly, another the Laurel-Bowie State highway.

To Cross Two Rivers

Two railroads, two rivers, and five local roads will be crossed by the parkway. The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks, for example, will be carried over the highway at Annapolis Junction on a two-span, stone-faced bridge.

The Little Patuxent River will be crossed by two bridges, each of reinforced concrete with five spans.

According to Spelman, right-of-way proceedings on a total of 149 private tracts of land in the highway path have been completed in all but one case.

The private land acquired will cost the Government about $300,000, Spelman estimated. Included are about 832 acres of land. He said the approximate cost of right-of-way for the highway was $39,000 a mile.

D. C. Educators Named to Office At AFT Parley

Two Washington educators yesterday were named officers of the American Federation of Teachers at the convention in Cleveland.

Miss Borchardt

Miss Selma M. Borchardt, English teacher at Eastern High School and the AFT's national representative, was continued in office as a vice president.

Harold A. Allan, business manager of the National Education Association for 25 years, was elected by the association's board of directors to the board of trustees. Allan will retire from his NEA post in September.

Mrs. Eleanor Rowlett of Roanoke, Va., was named to the budget committee.

1145 Apprentices Are Registered Here

A total of 1145 apprentices were registered in the District in more than 50 skilled trades on July 1, according to an announcement by Gino J. Simi, District director of apprenticeship. Carpenters led the list with 137 apprentices, and bricklayers followed with 133.

Robbed of $9035, Farmer Tells Police in Alexandria

A farmer, who said he doesn't trust banks, told Alexandria police yesterday of being robbed of his life savings of $9053 Friday night, just behind police headquarters.

Bathurst C. Huntington of Springfield, Va., said two wallets, one containing $9010 in $100, $20 and $10 bills, the other containing $43, were taken from him after he had a few drinks and a conversation with two "neatly dressed" young men.

Huntington said he had brought a truckload of flowers to the Alexandria City Market in the evening, and arranged them in his stall. The market is in the court behind City Hall, and the police station.

Then Huntington said he had a couple of drinks from a bottle. He walked out into the block of N. Royal st., he said, and met two men, whom he could describe only as "neatly dressed young men."

They came back to his stall and talked, but from that point on he remembered nothing.

A policeman saw Huntington sleeping in the marketplace about 4 a. m. and awoke him. Huntington said he first noticed his loss at 7:30 a. m. yesterday. He told police he carried the money everywhere he went because he didn't trust banks.

Other farmers told of seeing Huntington with two men, but Police Inspector Russell A. Hawes said he had no evidence on which to make an arrest.

Filipina Heroine Welcomed in U. S.

Week's Home Accidents End 8 Lives Here

The death of a man from a severed spinal cord suffered in "horseplay" was reported yesterday by the District Red Cross Accident Prevention Service.

His death was one of eight resulting from home accidents during a week.

The previously reported deaths of three elderly men at the Blue Plains Home for the Aged from drinking denatured alcohol were among those listed.

Three adults died from falls and an infant suffocated in his crib.

Among 173 injured was a 63-year-old woman who suffered an infection after applying glue to a burn on her arm.

Seven children and three adults were burned by firecrackers, and three persons were cut by electric fans.

Bad luck struck three times at one family. A young boy cut his knee climbing on a broken bicycle, and his brother fell down stairs and injured his arm at the time a sister was undergoing an operation.

Other falls at home resulted in a broken hip, two fractures of the nose, a broken hand, arm and rib, and a fractured vertebra.

Dogs under foot tripped two children and an adult resulting in fractures of the elbow and skull.

A 13-month-old baby was bitten on both feet by a rat. A young woman had 10 stitches taken in her leg after tripping on a saw left by a workman. The charm on a bracelet penetrated the arm of a little girl who fell.

FRESH BLOOD A MUST FOR FREE ENERGY

Do you feel like you are tied to a drag everytime you try to do something? If so, don't let a low blood count hold you down when you may release vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre cell.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways; no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Personnel of Public Health Service, of which the institute is the research branch, ed to inspect the to inspect the research center from 2:30 to 5 p. m. The general public will be welcomed between 7:30 to 10 p. m., Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing announced.

It was on July 16, 1798, that President John Adams signed an act creating the Marine Hospital Service, now the Public Health Service.

Visitors Friday may participate in demonstrations of heart sound, skin temperature changes and plethysmographs of blood supply, Ewing said. Other exhibits in heart research will show results of studies in the physiology, metabolism and psychology of aging.

Dental research exhibits will include charts showing progress in control of tooth decay by fluorination of public water supply and use of the electron misroscope. The electron microscope, itself, will be on display, as will the Geiger counter, which detects presence of radio-active material, and an altitude chamber used for study of conditions met on high mountains or in high-flying airplanes.

Other exhibits at the National Institute of Health will be in the fields of cancer, infectious diseases, tropical diseases, biologics control, physical biology, chemistry, pathology and physiology.

Outlining functions of the National Institute of Health, Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, surgeon general of USPHS, said work of the research branch in its 60-odd years of existence "has extended into nearly all fields of medical research."

D. C. to Weigh Loan Company License Case

The District Commissioners will decide at a meeting Tuesday whether to take action against the Auto Loan Service, Inc., operators of three D. C. loan offices.

License Superintendent C. T. Nottingham has recommended that the Commissioners summon the firm before the District License Board to answer charges of keeping faulty records, and show cause why the firm's license should not be revoked.

Nottingham said the recommendation was the first of several to be made in a check on loan companies. He reported operations of several firms are being closely inspected.

The District official said employes in the firm's 638 Pennsylvania ave. se. office had "delayed in producing records" for inspectors, and that the records were "incomplete."

He said the firm also operates an office at 10th and H sts. nw. and one at 1501 Maryland ave. ne. under the same District license.

Bored Baboon Quits Show, Tries Life of Human

Ipswich, England, July 10 (U.P.).—Elizabeth, a baboon with a friendly manner, got bored with show business.

She sneaked away from the fairground and wandered aimlessly until she came to the home of Mrs. Dorothy Plummer. No one answered her knock, so she walked in.

In the living room, she borrowed a bottle of stout and picked up Mrs. Plummer's pocketbook. Then she went upstairs, wrapped herself in a pink eiderdown and climbed into bed.

Relaxed amid the homely comforts, Elizabeth uncorked the bottle of stout and still was swigging it when police—called by neighbors—arrived.

Police brought along Elizabeth's cage and her keeper. As the cage was pulled along the street, Elizabeth opened Mrs. Plummer's pocketbook and handed police the money.

Truman 'Converts' Face Republican Jeers

J. HOWARD McGRATH
. . . Harmonizer

Chicago Boss Jacob M. Arvey, an Eisenhower boom leader, now says he's never "been anti-Truman"

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

PHILADELPHIA, July 10.—Maybe things will pick up, but the most striking thing about this Democratic Convention is the difference between a Democrat and an Elk.

The Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, just concluding their most boisterous convention in years, are having a good time.

The Democrats, famed over the years for convention hoopla, are starting this one with all the gaiety of a wake.

They stood around and looked downright depressed when the bespangled BPOE band blared a final brass blast in the hotel lobbies after a happy, winding, warbling parade through the streets.

Even the 10-foot papier mache Democratic donkey they've ordered up for the Bellevue-Stratford marquee would look far more comfortable life size.

Philadelphia is still betting on the Democrats finding something to celebrate before the next week is out, but right now the convention looks about as cut and dried as the recent heavily advertised Republican fracas turned out to be.

Grudging Admiration

THE PUNDITS, after mistaking Elks for Democrats and trying to work up some interest in the wilted drive to draft General Eisenhower, say only three things are really undecided about it:

1. Who the convention, and hence its expected choice, Harry S. Truman, will pick as a vice presidential running mate.

2. How the Democratic Resolutions Committee will resolve its platform civil rights differences.

3. How many Southern delegations will really "take a walk."

If Democrats are discouraged, it isn't just because President Truman still looks like the convention's inevitable choice. Even in some of the dissident delegations there is grudging admiration of the President's fighting spunk, and his record as contrasted with that of the Eightieth Congress.

Some are saying he will look much better in historical perspective than he looks in the present "we-want-a-winner" atmosphere. More and more delegates are confiding privately that they were "never really anti-Truman."

WHAT IS distressing the Democrats, and taking most of the heart out of this convention, is the now widespread conviction that whatever they do here short of the miraculous, they are headed for defeat in November. The true root of the trouble is the Southern defection and the third-party split.

It's the same thought in reverse English that buoyed Republicans in the notion they were not merely nominating but electing a President and Vice President.

The drive for the forced draft of Eisenhower, which scattered when the General finally pulled the rug out, further undercut Democratic confidence. For the key insurrectionists, even though they accept in the end the convention's verdict, will find it difficult to plug for the ticket.

Potent leaders in many a local machine, they will always be open to the Republican taunt that they are trying to sell the country a nominee they personally tried to ditch.

Biggest single operation at this convention has therefore fallen to the lot of Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island. McGrath not only has to make good on his forecast that Mr. Truman will be nominated on the first ballot; he has to preach harmony in an atmosphere of gloom, persuade the bolters that they haven't really bolted, and somehow fling a unity blanket over them all.

Showdown Is Thursday

THE OPERATION is already pretty far along, but much could happen before Mayor David L. Lawrence of Pittsburgh calls the convention to order Monday noon.

Actually, McGrath will have another four days to complete his assignment. The floor showdown won't come until Thursday night when the State roll is called for nominations. If it's a one-ballot matter, this convention could fold up the same night. But if McGrath's guess is wrong, the voting could run into Friday and more.

The Rhode Island Senator is the President's official emissary here, but Leslie L. Biffle controls the direct line to the White House. Biffle's close personal contact with the President dates back to Mr. Truman's Senate apprenticeship, when the adroit Arkansan was secretary of the Senate majority, and later secretary of the Senate.

Biffle, who now handles matters for the Senate Democratic Policy Committee, is the Capitol's nearest approach to direct liaison with the White House. His official title here is convention sergeant at arms, but don't let the label fool you. In his Bellevue-Stratford headquarters, Room 307, occur most of the Truman strategy huddles.

The third key Truman man here is Resolutions Chairman Francis J. Myers (Pa.), who has a near-perfect Senate Administration record. Myers' job, the most delicate of all, is to bring both extremes of the party together on a platform, bridging if possible the civil rights rift.

But when the end product is cleared with the White House, it will be over Biffle's direct line. And it's a safe bet the convention "sergeant-at-arms" will be first to the wire at the end of that first ballot.

Keeper of the Keys

FOR THE REST, the Administration's "Mr. Fixit" has already seen to it that there won't be any Eisenhower gallery-packing at Convention Hall. Admission tickets, as scarce in this town as a cool July breeze, are his to withhold or hand out.

As double insurance against gate-crashing demonstrators, Philadelphia police have been asked to throw a cordon around Convention Hall doors. Official explanation is that the doors must be kept open to cool off the hall.

During the late June Republican convention, the undersize hall, superheated by the intense lights required for television and news camera shots, supplied a hot wave all its own, with Turkish bath effects. Some considered attending this one in shorts.

A few fans have been added, but Philadelphia humidity baffles the air-conditioning experts.

That about takes care of the arrangements, except for the Bellevue-Stratford's busy elevators. The Republican convention's peak load proved too much for them. Delegates found only one way to beat the rap—a walk up to the second floor and a ride down to the lobby in order to be first on for the trip up.

But Mrs. Anna Taggart, chief elevator operator, says she has 34 operators who're a match for the Democrats.

We haven't contacted President Truman, but everything else seems under control.

Third Man's an 'Unknown'

By Carl Levin

WITH THE names of President Truman, who wants the Democratic Presidential nomination, and General Eisenhower, who has said he could not accept it, the Nation may hear much next week of a third man who has said neither "yes" nor "no."

He is Justice William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court, who has gone fishing while the Democratic National Convention assembles in Philadelphia.

He is supported by strong but often politically inept liberal and labor forces. His backers principally are those who have insisted that President Truman must not be nominated and who advanced the name of Eisenhower with the clearly stated understanding that if the General would not accept a draft, their candidate was Douglas.

The Justice is no newcomer in the political arena. But, unlike President Truman and General Eisenhower, he is little more than a name to many Americans.

It is probably a measure of the political naivete of his supporters that they frankly admit that their candidate is not well-known through the country, though he is one of the Nation's ranking jurists and is regarded by his admirers as one of its great men.

The enigma which permits a man to attain outstanding national stature and yet remain a virtual unknown among the grass roots, is explained indirectly in a brochure entitled "William O. Douglas . . . The Man, His Life, His Views." The pamphlet, published by Americans for Democratic Action, puts it this way: "Those who know Washington know Douglas." That is true.

Justice Douglas was a Washingtonian before President Roosevelt called him to the Capital as one of the New Deal's bright young men. He is a Washingtonian from Yakima, Wash.

His story would be a "rags to riches" story except that he has always spurned riches and has taken with a disarming modesty the success which has delivered him from rags.

Though he is a New Dealer, who some-

Berlin Maroons West in Two-Story House Without Stairway

Careless Potsdam Pact Puts Allies in a Legal Dilemma

By Blair Bolles

IS THE recent war against Germany to be succeeded now by a war about Germany? The outcome of the East-West diplomatic conflict over the Soviet blockade of Berlin will tell.

American and British officials are energetically suggesting by public statements and diplomatic notes that their governments will fight before they will abandon their concessions in the bomb-bashed capital of the Reich, but their case has holes in it. Russia obviously does not believe that the westerners mean what they say.

Berlin today is the center of the American-Soviet world power struggle. The terrain of this conflict has been moving steadily eastward since the end of World War II.

Washington a year ago feared that Russia might establish its authority on the shores of the Atlantic through some triumph, never realized, by the Communist Party in France. Only last spring Washington feared that the Communists might win the Italian elections and thus turn Russia into a Mediterranean power.

American policy for a year has aimed—successfully—at pushing back the area of Soviet influence to central Europe and broadening the area of Western influence. Berlin represents the deepest point that the United States has penetrated into the Soviet world.

The Soviets in turn are using Berlin to force the United States to compromise on its policy of "containing" Russia—the policy first invoked in the Truman Doctrine and first expounded by George Kennan of the State Department under the pseudonym "X" in the magazine Foreign Affairs a year ago.

Russia has said repeatedly in the past week that the price of calm in Berlin is the negotiation of a general settlement for Germany. Such a settlement would give Russia a role in western as well as eastern Germany. Kennan's Chinese wall would be breached.

Eternal Watch on Rhine

THE dilemma of the United States, however, is that to support the policy of containment it might be necessary to occupy Germany as long as Russia exists. The reasons which impel America to oppose a general German settlement today will be as good 20 years from now.

Washington fears that any agreement endowing Russia with authority on the Rhine as well as the Elbe would enable it to exploit the industries and resources of the Ruhr. American policy aims at keeping from Russia western capital goods that conceivably could be useful in time of war.

And Washington fears the communizing of Germany if Russian authority oozes beyond its present zone of occupation, although the Communist Party has shown little strength in western Germany and even in Berlin it could not muster a majority in the municipal elections.

The Berlin question embraces the whole German question, and there is no solution for the German question through containment short of treating the country as the Romans treated Gaul—as a military outpost—unless the Western powers seriously contemplate obliterating the influence of Russian communism by a war against the Soviet Union.

An alternative road to calm in Berlin would be the Western withdrawal from the city. That move would not compromise the policy of containment in any fundamental way, because the western German state created last month by the United States, the United Kingdom and France would remain as a shield against the Soviet Union. But it would confront the West with the possibility of perpetual occupation.

The Potsdam Pandora

THREE years ago today the United States had great expectations for its policy in Germany. In July, 1945, President Truman and his British, French, and Soviet colleagues negotiated the Potsdam Agreement. He signed that careless document in an atmosphere that was almost carefree, so confident were the Western negotiators that lasting peace and international goodwill were about to decend on earth.

The Potsdam Agreement has produced one of the most ramified series of grave disagreements that the United States has experienced. Now America is paying a stiff price for its diplomatic vagueness. The problem of Berlin is the fruit of Potsdam.

In dealing with Berlin, the drafters of Potsdam built a two-story house without a stairway. The pact gave the Soviet Union responsibility for the occupation of all Germany between the Polish zone and the Elbe River excepting one small area—Berlin. Potsdam divided Berlin into four zones of occupation, American, British, French and Soviet. But the agreement neglected to state explicitly that the westerners should have the privilege of crossing Soviet-occupied territory to reach Berlin.

On the contrary, it declared that the military representative of each government would have the supreme authority in its zone of occupation. The Soviets rely on this technical oversight to close the roads, railways and canals that connect the western zones of Germany with the western zones of Berlin.

However, the root of the struggle over Berlin goes far beyond that technical omission. The Potsdam Agreement called for the economic and political unification of Germany, for the merging of the occupation zones, but the agreement set no time and failed to fix the specific action to bring about the unification.

The assumption that unity was coming

MARSHAL SOKOLOVSKY
. . . "Nothing personal"

GEN. LUCIUS D. CLAY
. . . "Statistical success"

led the negotiators to give a particular function to Berlin. Potsdam made the capital the seat of the four-power Control Council, to serve as an agency for preparing the transition of Germany into a unit. The prospect for unity—and thus one reason for the presence of the western powers in Berlin—began to wither almost at the moment Potsdam was signed.

Parrying the Blame

THE American Government is sure that Russia began to outrage the notion of unity. The four powers could not agree during the first two years after Potsdam on how to bring about unification. The United States protested that Russia was removing capital equipment from its zone without reporting the amount to its co-occupiers, and the British said that the removals from Berlin amounted to "ruthless stripping" of machinery.

This behavior indicated an individualistic rather than a cooperative approach to Germany on Russia's part. It strained the economy of all Germany, and burdened the United States by causing it to increase the amount of dollars it was spending for the upkeep of Germany. Whereas Russia (and France) had a policy of living off the land, the United States and Britain spent money for the improvement of German conditions.

The Russians for their part have persuaded themselves that the westerners first violated the thesis of unity. When the Americans and British unified their zones economically on January 1, 1947, the Soviets denounced it as a move to organize the west to the detriment of the east, although Washington and London said it was a step toward general union.

This sense of hostility had been inflated enormously by the spring of 1947, when Secretary of State Marshall made his fruitless trip to Moscow to negotiate a German treaty. By the time of the second vain German negotiations, in London last autumn, the United States, although no official ever publicly said so, seemed more interested in maintaining the policy of containment than in settling the German issue. The interests of the two worlds had become so thoroughly incompatible since President Truman listened to piano music at Potsdam that to pessimists it appeared impossible to reconcile them in Germany or elsewhere.

Currency an Excuse

3½ Million Germans Are Glad That Clay Didn't Go Fishing

By Richard Kasischke
Associated Press Staff Writer

BERLIN, July 10.—If Gen. Lucius Du Bignon Clay had had his way, he'd be cat fishing in Georgia this summer instead of commanding the American occupation in this crisis-ridden city.

It is no exaggeration to say that most of Berlin's 3,250,000 Germans and its 25,000 Allied inhabitants are extremely glad the Department of the Army turned down his request for retirement last October.

Clay is the best known American in Germany—perhaps the best known man of any nationality. He is widely known even behind the Iron Curtain of the Russian zone, if only through the invective hurled at him daily by the Communist press.

Berliners even call the new Deutsche mark introduced by the Western Allies the "Clay mark." It is noteworthy that this money is widely preferred to the "Sokolovsky mark," the Soviet-sponsored currency which is nicknamed after Clay's Russian counterpart, Marshal Vasilly D. Sokolovsky.

Millions of Germans, in the surrounding Russian zone as well as in Berlin, look upon 51-year-old Clay as the leading symbol of American democracy. During these days of blockaded Berlin's critical struggle between Russia and the West, many a Berliner is cheered as he passes Clay's OMGUS (Office of Military Government for Germany, United States) headquarters to see that "the flag is still there."

Appreciate the Results

FEW GERMANS—or Americans, British or French—would approve Clay's policies or performance 100 per cent. Some Berliners—not realizing that he can go no further than the State Department and the Army permit—feel he should have got much tougher much sooner with the Russians.

Nevertheless, the two million Germans of western Berlin gratefully credit Clay with instituting the day-and-night air freight service which is now bringing in food and other supplies from western Germany.

Clay also is generally credited, even by British critics, with having done the ablest administrative job of any of the military governors of the four occupying powers.

The No. 1 American in Germany is slim, of medium height, with dark bushy eyebrows, thin features, an acquiline nose, deep-socketed eyes, a piercing glance and a deliberate smile.

He is the son of a Southern Senator of the reconstruction period, Alexander Stephen Clay of Georgia, and was a Senate page in his youth.

He is the third American military governor for Germany, but he actually has been in charge of occupation policies from the start. He served as deputy military governor under his two predecessors, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Gen. Joseph T. McNarney.

Although Clay has never commanded combat troops, he has conducted more inspections of his troops in Germany than both his predecessors combined, and he takes great pride in his soldiers' appearance and morale. He says his troops now "are the finest section of our peacetime Army."

Clay chain smokes, consuming three packs of cigarettes a day, drinks coffee all day long and puts kinetic energy into everything he does. He is extremely popular with the press, German as well as Allied, because he is always frank and accessible.

The Goldfish Bowl

SYMBOLIC OF CLAY'S occupation policies is the always open door which connects his office with that of his personal assistant, Wac Capt. Margaret Allen. It is not even closed when Clay is in intimate conference with his British counterpart, Gen. Sir Brian Robertson, during this "Second Battle of Berlin."

The open door is symbolic of the "goldfish bowl" policy which Clay decreed for his administration—"open decisions openly arrived at, as far as the Americans in Germany are concerned."

Clay was described during the war by one of his earliest backers, former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, as "a man who could run General Motors or General Eisenhower's armies."

In November, 1944, when a crisis developed in the supply of Allied forces on Cherbourg Peninsula, Clay was summoned from Washington. In 20 days he had doubled the flow of troops through the battered port and in three more weeks Cherbourg's capacity was increased 500 per cent. From that job he went back to America to handle war mobilization and reconversion problems.

In some respects Clay is still the engineer. Some observers feel he handles creation of a democratic Germany as something of an engineering operation, with himself at the controls.

He laid down for the occupation a formula known as the "four D's"—denazification, demilitarization, decentralization and democratization. Even his critics concede that he has executed these with vigorous technical efficiency and with, as one put it, "more resounding statistical success than anywhere else in Germany."

Only time will tell how successful democratization efforts have been. Clay was an early advocate of trying to get Germany back on its feet economically. With the merger of the American and British zones, he got a chance to put his drive and skill into rehabilitation of the industrial Ruhr, a keystone of the European Recovery Program.

He also was an early and ardent advocate of giving self-government back to the Germans, subject to military government supervision. The American zone was the first to

Make Tito 'Earn' Our Help, Stassen Urges

By Harold E. Stassen

ST. PAUL, July 10.—Marshal Tito arose from his chair and began to pace across the floor as he started to answer my blunt questions.

"Do you expect to pattern your economic system exactly after the Soviet Union of Russia? Do you expect to follow Stalin's direction in world economic affairs?" I had directly asked after a brief preliminary conversation.

We had met for luncheon at the Marshal's guest house on Marshal Tito ave., in Belgrade. Jay Cooke of Philadelphia and Robert Matteson of St. Paul were with me throughout the 16-nation look-and-listen journey. We were especially studying economic developments after the war and their implications upon American policy.

We had already observed the struggles of the peasants along the Danube to get their crops seeded with very limited equipment—few horses, a shortage of manpower, and women doing most of the work in the most archaic methods. We had already observed the evidence of governmental domination over the people and had noted the sentries with submachine guns at the entrances of all public buildings. In fact, Jay Cooke had quipped that this apparently was not a police state, but a "tommygun state."

The date was March 18, 1947, before the Marshall Plan for European economic aid was proposed.

'Machinery, Machinery'

"YUGOSLAVIA will profit from the U. S. S. R.'s 25 years' experience in socialism," Marshal Tito replied. "Yugoslavia is independent and will develop its own economic system to meet the conditions and the hopes of its own people. Yugoslavia is a sovereign state. Its people fought hard and suffered much for independence during the war.

"As you know, I myself, was in the mountains as a leader of the Partisans," continued the Marshal, as he stopped and stood erect and proud in his uniform. "And General Velebit," he continued, indicating the interpreter, a handsome, black-haired, affable man of about 40, "was with me. So were nearly all of the leaders of our country."

The Marshal resumed his seat and continued: "For example, we have broken up the large estates, and we have turned the land over to the peasants. But we have not collectivized our farms and do not intend to.

"Yugoslavia wants good trade relations with the United States, and wishes to import machinery, cotton and wheat, and to export lumber, hops, handicraft and wines. We have copper deposits that are especially good and other minerals, including bauxite and lead. We need machinery for agriculture, machinery for mining, machinery for industrializing our country."

He further stated that Yugoslavia's agricultural production was only about 50 per cent of prewar because of the shortage of machinery and manpower. I commented that if he did not maintain such a large standing army he would have more men to work on the farms. He rejoined that he did not consider his standing army to be excessive. I questioned him about the trial of Archbishop Stepanic and about the lack of freedom of his people. He sought to justify all on the basis of security.

In the conference the evening before with Boris Kidric, then Minister of Industry and president of the Yugoslav Economic Council, recently named as the key economic minister in the Yugoslavian government, and with Nikolai Petrovio, Minister of Trades and Supplies, both had taken similar positions.

3 Conditions Persist

THE THREE predominant impressions I then had of Yugoslavia were: First, the desperate economic condition; second, its complete dictatorship; third, the intense nationalist spirit and pride.

Available information of events in Yugoslavia since that time has confirmed these impressions. The fact that Yugoslavia cannot get its own economic necessities from Russia or the nations under Russia's domination (with the possible exception of wheat), and the further fact that Yugoslavia cannot find a market for her exports in those nations, and the bad economic conditions at home, give rise to tremendous pressure for establishing better economic relations with western Europe and the United States.

It would appear that two of the ministers of Tito's cabinet, Hebrang and Zujovic, nevertheless wished to follow a blind policy of subordination to the dictates of Russia, and opposed and undermined the economic policies of Tito and the rest of the Yugoslav government. These two men were removed from the cabinet. The nine-nations Cominform, under the direction of Zdhanov of the Russian Politburo, then tried to give orders to Yugoslavia. The combined feelings of nationalism and pride on the part of Tito and his associates, and of economic necessity, gave rise to resistance to this dictation. Then came the open break with the Cominform.

What should the United States do about it?

First of all, a note of caution should be sounded that it is possible that this breach might be healed as abruptly as it occurred. Tito's government is a dictatorship and it can change very suddenly. The Soviet Union has already demonstrated sudden countermarches many times. It may even be a trick.

As I see it, our policy should be that if Yugoslavia, having departed from the rigid Moscow line, will move definitely toward increased freedom for her own peoples, particularly toward increased economic and religious freedom, then the United States will extend economic aid. Under such conditions the aid extended should be gradual in nature and should never be in lump sum or blank check loans. Its continuance should depend upon the steady movement of the Yugoslavian government toward more and more liberties for its own people.

Totalitarian Weapon

THE United States definitely should not extend unconditional aid simply because of the breach with the Soviet Union. If we do that we would place ourselves in a purely negative position of opposition to Russia, and in the role of approving the dictatorship of Tito. This is practically as extreme as the dictatorship in Russia itself.

Furthermore, if we extend unconditional aid and Tito continues to maintain a totalitarian economic system, I am certain the people of Yugoslavia will continue to suffer under extremely bad economic conditions. There will be no significant improvement, even with American aid, over their present desperate economic plight.

This, in fact, was the circumstance of the UNRRA aid after the war. It was sent into Yugoslavia in substantial quantities and unconditionally. Within the country it was used to a great degree by Tito to increase his grip upon the people. It was distributed by his Communist agents, and resulted in the decrease of the economic liberties of the people and lessened their prospect of true recovery.

But if, in accordance with a world-wide policy of helping any nation that is moving toward freedom and well-being of its own people, we extend constructive aid, then the Yugoslavian situation may become of crucial world-wide significance.

Increased economic freedom for the people of Yugoslavia, coupled with constructive aid from the United States, would cause that country to make a large improvement in the well-being of its own people. If incentives are returned to the farmers, the merchants, the producers and the miners of Yugoslavia, and if at the same time American aid in machinery and initial consumer goods is extended, and if the tourist avenues on the Dalmatian coast are reopened, Yugoslavia could rapidly move toward better economic conditions and more liberty for its own people in a manner that would have an amazing effect throughout all of Europe and the Balkans.

If at the same time increased religious freedom is granted and encouragement is extended to the churches, then the moral fiber of the country will be strengthened again and the deterioration of standards of conduct evident under Communist dictatorships will be reversed.

L. P. BERIA ... A. A. ZHDANOV

..."Most ignorant about the rest of the world"

BUT the most significant aspects of these recent developments are not what they mean in Yugoslavia, but rather what they mean in Russia. I believe that Zhdanov, who is the most ruthless and the least well informed of the key members of the Politburo, has won out in policy decisions within the Politburo in the Kremlin.

Zhdanov and Voznessensky and Beria are the most ignorant about the rest of the world outside the Soviet Union's borders. They are also the most rigid in hewing to a party line. The denunciations of Tito and the attempt to drive the Allies out of Berlin are two actions of the same type springing from this kind of mentality.

Molotov, with a greater knowledge of the rest of the world, and Mikoyan must have been overruled in their more gradual approach toward the same objectives. The weight of the Politburo decision must have been so strong that Stalin himself could not well veto it, and it is unlikely that with his knowledge of the rest of the world he would enthusiastically join in such policies.

If these current policies fail, as they certainly will if the United States follows an intelligent course, then we may well witness some very desperate and extreme moves made by this same faction of the Soviet Union to redeem their decisions. It may go to the extent of using border incidents between Yugoslavia and Bulgaria or Albania as an excuse to march the Red army into Yugoslavia. It may also take the form of Communist-inspired riots in Berlin against the United States, Britain and France.

Firm action by the United States, openly understood by our own people and by the western European nations, can lead to a major failure of this entire ruthless Soviet policy and open the way for internal revolution in Russia itself toward greater cooperation with the United States. In short, we are in the midst of a phase of postwar relationships of crucial significance.

Steady and intelligent decisions by this country, reached by calm, open discussion with our people, and strongly backed by both political parties, notwithstanding the fact that this is a presidential year, can make a superb contribution toward the future strengthening of the United Nations and a brighter prospect for peace and economic progress for ourselves and for others.

A Brunette Enlivens Britain's Quiet Red Purge

By Alvin Steinkopf

Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, July 10.—Britain's purge of Communists from government posts is starting more quietly than a similar cleansing in the United States, but a brunette named Ann has enlivened the proceedings.

She is 30-year-old Ann George, private secretary to the Minister of Education, George Tomlinson. Small, keen, an ardent trade unionist, she was the first civil servant to be suspended after a declaration by Prime Minister Attlee that only persons of utmost reliability may be employed in any work involving security of the state.

The Prime Minister, in a statement to the House of Commons, said that membership in the Communist Party or a reputation for being a fellow traveler were grounds for a presumption that a civil servant was unfit for certain posts.

The British, on the whole less alarmed about communism than Americans, resolved to clean out the public service without any roaring scandals. The whole enterprise, which also applies to Fascists, was taken out of the field of parliamentary inquiry and the courts.

First the Prime Minister set up an advisory commission of three former civil servants, men of high repute.

Ministers who hear about Communists or Fascists or persons closely associated with Communist or Fascist enterprises serving in key positions must place such persons on leave, with pay, and certify the cases to the commission.

If they wish, the individuals singled out may appear before the commission for a non-judicial hearing. The commission, after hearing all evidence in private, then reports to the minister. The members will say whether, in their opinion, a person is or is not a Communist, fellow traveler or Fascist.

It's up to the minister to take appropriate action—dismissal or transfer to some other post where the employe can do no harm.

The treasury, which has charge of the purge machinery, said that "about 25" persons now are on leave with pay awaiting action by ministers or the commission. Miss George was the very first to go, and she reacted with such vigor that well-planned intentions to carry on the purge quietly may be upset.

Cites Loyalty Record

AN IMPRESSIVE speaker with wide support in trade unions, Miss George was quick to defend herself in public. Asked directly whether she was a Communist, she replied: "No employer has a right to ask such a question."

She chose not to appear before the advisory commission, thus placing the entire responsibility on her employer, Minister Tomlinson. The minister has called her "the perfect private secretary." She was reelected to a trade union post with a thumping majority and she challenged anyone to find a weak spot in her record for loyalty to Britain.

Miss George said that to avoid embarrassing her minister, she would accept another suitable post if one were offered.

Miss George, and some others on leave, object to some features of the commission hearings. One is that they may not be represented by counsel. Another is that persons under investigation are not told the source of the evidence on the grounds that to disclose it might hamper other inquiries under way.

Another objection is that civil service trade union members or officials may testify to the character of a person under fire, but may not appear at the time the individual is questioned. The Prime Minister answered this by saying that the whole procedure takes place before commissioners who are veteran trade unionists and under the authority of a Labor government sympathetic to labor unions.

Keeps His Office

ANOTHER suspended person is E. J. Hicks of the Air Ministry staff. The ministry permits him to occupy his old office to carry out his duties as an official of the Civil Service Clerical Association. However, he is not allowed to handle Air Ministry business.

A treasury department spokesman said he did not think the purge would be a sweeping one, nor that it would generate the excitement of similar inquiries in the United States.

"A reason may be," he said, "that in the United States persons with leftist political feelings have no conspicuous representation in government, and that in the public mind there may be a tendency to consider lefts and extreme lefts as one and the same thing.

"Here the whole government is left, loyally left, and the trouble is caused only by the extreme lefts, who are small in number and very clearly identified."

Soviet 'Secrets' Going to Waste Here

By Clarke Beach

Associated Press Staff Writer

DESPITE THE Iron Curtain, tons of printed matter on Russian scientific and industrial activities are being imported into this country.

Soviet presses pour out hundreds of magazines, newspapers and reports covering an enormous range of subjects. A few copies of nearly all of interest to us find their way to some government or private library.

It isn't propaganda for foreign consumption. It's the same stuff which is distributed to Soviet administrators and specialists.

Russian language specialists here say that any American who can read Russian can learn practically as much about the Soviets as any well-placed official in Russia outside the Kremlin.

Of course we are not receiving any top secret material, and no Russian publication contains national production figures or information of direct military value. But trained statisticians say they take what information is supplied, put the pieces together and come out with a fairly clear picture of what is happening in the Soviet Union.

The export of some publications is forbidden, under pain of extreme penalties, but according to our experts there is very little we really want which we can't manage to procure.

Where to Look

HOWEVER, the enormous amount of Russian stuff which is received here is not being well used, according to many of the Russian experts. The difficulty is both with cataloguing and translating.

The Russians print a very limited number of copies of each publication—usually from 2000 to 5000. They say paper and printing equipment are too scarce to print more. And only surplus copies are sent abroad.

Most of the few copies that come to this country are sent to the Library of Congress or to other Government or private libraries with which the Soviet government has exchange agreements—swapping magazine for magazine, book for book. The others are sent over for sale, mostly through the Four Continent Book Corp. (55 W. 56th st.), New York, a Soviet government agency.

Often one library doesn't know what another one has. One Government expert on Russian production complained that after trying for months he was unable to get the Soviet periodical "Steel." He assumed it couldn't be had.

I mentioned this to a private research man in a library a few blocks away. He looked surprised. He showed me a complete file of "Steel" on his shelves.

Another expert had been told after diligent search that it was impossible to obtain a copy of the Russian national bibliography, listing all Soviet publications. A few days later I saw two copies of this book in another library.

WHAT WE need, one official suggests, is a new agency, either private or governmental, to catalog everything received. The agency would also have a staff of translators, trained chiefly for scientific and technical work, which would see that any information of value was put at the disposal of the Government or of science and industry.

The Russians have such an institution, connected with the Lenin Library in Moscow.

The Library of Congress has made a start at the cataloguing process. It publishes each month a list of its own Russian accessions and those of any other library which will cooperate.

The library got 298 Russian books and pamphlets last month and is now receiving regularly 273 Russian magazines and 41 newspapers. The newspapers arrive by air, usually four or five days after publication. The magazines are often a couple of months late.

In the first three months of this year the United States imported from Russia $23,000 worth of printed matter—more than half again as much as we imported in the same period last year.

The Russians in the same months this year imported $33,000 worth of United States printed matter. This, however, is a slight decrease. In the full year 1946 they imported $624,640 worth—making up, apparently, for what they had missed during the war.

Americans Learning

MANY EXPERTS say that only a small proportion of the Russian material is being read, because qualified translators are not available.

Most translators are Russian emigres who have been in this country since the Bolshevik revolution or before. Very few of them do well with scientific material. And anyway, the supply of emigres is running out.

The schools, however, are entering the breach. Russian language courses are now offered in 140 colleges and Army and Navy graduate schools. Only 40 colleges offered Russian in 1943.

Columbia and Harvard have established two-year graduate courses, for intensive study not only of the Russian language but of everything else concerning Russia.

One scientific translator says that whole fields of learning are being neglected by the translators, including mathematics, astronomy, some phases of physics and metallurgy and mechanical and electrical engineering.

Reds Using Currency As Blockade Excuse

and Britain reformed the currency in the western zones, which the three powers had agreed in London in May to combine into a single western German state. Russia took the issuance of the new currency as the occasion to announce:

"Berlin is to lose its place as Germany's capital. The currency reform will place Berlin's economy and her working population in an untenable situation which can only be solved by Berlin's close connection with the eastern (Soviet-occupied) part of Germany."

Thereupon the Soviets began their intensified campaign to drive the westerners from Berlin by the blockade. "They can't drive us out by any action short of war as far as we are concerned," Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States military governor, said.

But the issue is unity, not currency. Long before the money problem arose, on March 20, Marshall Sokolovsky, the Soviet military governor in Germany, walked out of the meeting of the Allied Control Council in Berlin with the remark that the western powers were undermining quadripartite government and seeking to make it impossible. The western powers were at the moment engaged in preliminary negotiations for the creation of the western state.

To punctuate Sokolovsky's remarks, Russia in April began the blockade of Berlin, and the Allies successfully took to the air to carry in supplies. The blockade declined in May and early June, but the Soviets renewed it energetically after the distribution of the new western currency. They complained that the West had violated the Potsdam Agreement anew by making territorial awards to Belgium and the Netherlands in the western state agreement, without consulting the Soviet Union.

The western powers could maintain that they were in Berlin by right of the agreement dividing Berlin into zones of occupation. The Soviets could maintain that the West had been admitted to Berlin to take part in the governing of a unified Germany which did not exist and apparently was not to exist.

Post-Warsaw Prodding

IN THE MIDST of the grim controversy the foreign ministers of the Soviet Union and the Soviet allies—Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania—met in Warsaw and on June 24 broadcast the proposal that the occupying powers set up a provisional government for all Germany and conclude a peace treaty.

This proposal was not communicated to the western powers in a diplomatic note (they had not communicated their plans for the western German state to the eastern powers in a note), but it was meant to be taken seriously. Events in Berlin are Russia's prod to the West to negotiate.

The three western powers do not intend to be prodded. On July 6 the United States, Britain and France each sent to the Soviet government a note protesting the blockade and demanding that it be lifted at once. Yet the notes were secret, and the manner of their sending gave other manifestations that this diplomatic action lacked the vigor it might have had if the legal right of the westerners to approach Berlin were more explicit and—far more meaningful—if France were wholly in accord with the move to resist, come what may.

The United States has no doubt of its right to stay in Berlin and to supply Berlin. But if the West is to pursue a policy in Berlin that may lead to war, France would like to have a guarantee in advance of American military and political support.

Conversations aimed at providing American guarantees to western Europeans opened in Washington last week, but the State Department needs more extensive authority from Congress than it now possesses before it can assure the Europeans of substantial assistance. For the present, the United States is writing sternly to Moscow but sending no ultimatums.

Ruling Party's Been In This Spot Before

By J. R. Wiggins
Post Reporter

DEMOCRATIC delegates who are gathering to make history at Philadelphia this week are dealing with a problem that frequently has recurred in the great party battles of this country.

No matter how they deal with it, they can cite historical precedent for their decision. This is not the first party convention to face the issue of renominating or refusing to renominate the man in the White House.

President Truman, who is a student of history, no doubt is as familiar as any of the Philadelphia-bound delegates with the party struggles of this kind. Whatever happens, there is for him some consolation in history.

Vice Presidents who have succeeded to the presidential office have found it hard to get a nomination for the presidency in their own right. There have been six "accidental" Presidents. Four were not nominated for the Presidency—Tyler, Johnson, Arthur and Fillmore. Two were nominated—Theodore Roosevelt and Coolidge.

President Truman can tell his party leaders that it is dangerous to drop a Vice President come President. In three of the four such instances in which the parties have attempted to switch to a different nominee, they have failed to win the subsequent election. The Republicans succeeded in dropping Johnson and nominating Grant, without losing the election.

Some of the other switches have succeeded and some have failed. Successful changes in midstream were made when the Democrats abandoned Pierce and nominated Buchanan and when the Republicans dropped Hayes for Garfield. Election failures followed the Democratic effort to switch from Polk (who wouldn't run again) to Cass, and the attempt to switch from Buchanan to Douglas.

History's Contradictions

HISTORY is a tricky guide, and the candidate was not the main consideration or the decisive factor in some of these election campaigns. In many of them, the outcome probably would not have been altered, switch or no switch.

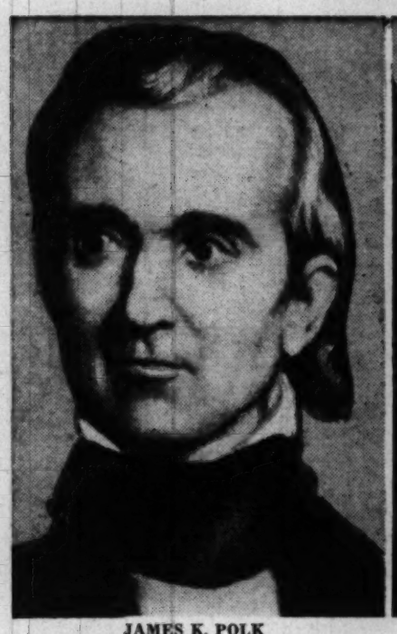
In 1948, the party problems would not be wholly solved by the candidate, either. The hard fight of a party 16 years in power will remain for any candidate nominated.

If the delegates consult the past for advice on whether to ditch Truman or renominate him, they will get some contradictory counsel from the most notable "switches" undertaken by the nominating conventions.

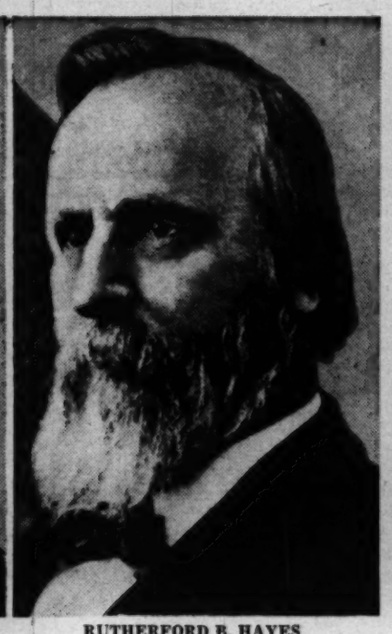
The Whigs lost when they tried to switch from John Tyler to Henry Clay in 1844. After Tyler succeeded President Harrison to become the country's first "President by accident," the Whigs changed their line on banking policy. Tyler broke with Clay and congressional party leaders over the bank bill.

Excitement was so great that mobs stormed the White House, only to be repulsed by employes Tyler had armed. All but one member of the Cabinet resigned. When the convention met in 1844, Tyler didn't have a chance. Henry Clay was nominated. He lost the election.

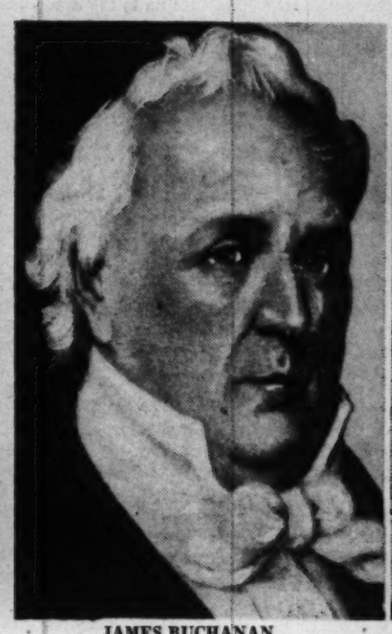
The Democrats lost when they tried to shift from President James K. Polk to Lewis Cass in 1848. In accepting the nomination in 1844, Polk declared he would discharge the duties of the office with the "settled purpose" of not being a candidate for reelection. So the party had no choice. It nominated Cass, who lost to Zachary Taylor.



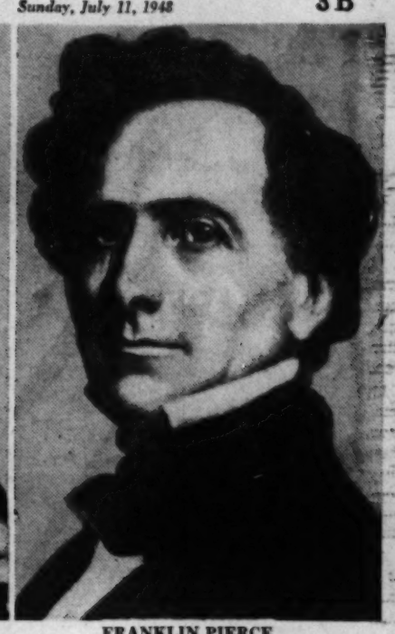
JAMES K. POLK
. . . Once was enough



RUTHERFORD B. HAYES
. . . Scattered votes



JAMES BUCHANAN
. . . On seventeenth ballot



FRANKLIN PIERCE
. . . Faced "racial" issue

North-South Stalemate

THE WHIGS lost when they tried to turn from another "accidental President" Millard Fillmore, to Winfield Scott in 1852. Fillmore quarreled with a divided party. He went into the convention with Southern support and was opposed by Northern Democrats behind Daniel Webster. They knocked each other out, the convention compromised on General Scott and the Whigs lost the election.

The Democrats succeeded in making a winning shift in 1856, when they abandoned President Franklin Pierce and nominated James Buchanan. President Pierce had a troubled time over the "racial" issues of his day—slavery. He wished to be renominated but did nothing to stop party rivals.

Foremost among these was Buchanan, who had managed to keep clear of the hot issues of the day. On the first roll call, Pierce got 122 votes, Buchanan 135. It took 17 ballots to nominate Buchanan, who went on to win the election.

In 1860 the Democrats lost when they tried to shift from Buchanan to another nominee. The party, hoplessly divided by that time, split into warring factions, with Stephen A. Douglas heading a Northern wing and Breckenridge a Southern wing. The Republicans won the election with Abraham Lincoln.

In 1868, the Republicans dropped President Johnson and switched to General Grant, who went on to win the election.

Went to 36 Ballots

IN 1880, the Republicans abandoned President Hayes and nominated and elected James A. Garfield. Hayes got a few scattered votes in the convention balloting. The convention fight soon settled down, however, to a contest among former President Grant, James G. Blaine and John Sherman.

Grant's high point for a third nomination was 313 of the delegates (755 voting); Blaine's high was 285. On the 36th roll call the delegates plumped for Garfield, who had resisted having his name put in nomination. He went on to win the election.

In 1884, the Republicans abandoned Chester A. Arthur and switched to James G. Blaine, losing the subsequent election to Grover Cleveland. Arthur, another "accidental President," tried hard for the nomination but was in bad with his party. He had stubbed his toe in New York, where the candidate he favored for Governor lost out to Cleveland in the election midway in Arthur's administration.

The past seems to make at least one conclusion safe: The troubles that President Truman is having are by no means without precedent. If his party fails to renominate him, it won't be the first time that a party machine, long in power, has wanted to change candidates. If he wins the nomination, he will do rather better than some of his predecessors in similar struggles.

Nation's 250,000 Junior Cops 'Arrest' Delinquency

By William J. Conway
Associated Press Newsfeature Writer

CHICAGO, July 10—Little cops are swinging a big stick at juvenile delinquency.

They are known by a variety of names—such as junior policemen and junior deputy sheriffs. They range in age from 10 to 18. They have been organized in many cities.

They are getting results. Look at the record in Mattoon, Ill. It shows that 405 youths were taken into custody there in one year. Then the junior police force was formed. The next year only 13 youngsters were arrested.

The idea of putting a large part of the delinquency problem in the hands of juveniles has spread rapidly in the last two years. Officials estimate more than 250,000 boys have joined the groups of cub lawmen.

Kid cops serve as traffic guards near schools, patrol playgrounds, help guide crowds at parades and scenes of accidents, hunt lost children, keep hoodlums within bounds on Halloween, take part in all kinds of sports.

But the main aim is crime prevention. The young officers learn to keep out of trouble themselves and seek to keep others out of trouble, too.

Outside Looking In

THE National Sheriffs' Association tells how the plan works in Junior Deputy Sheriffs Leagues. It goes like this:

A sheriff calls in the kids. He tells them his job is to crack down on crime. He wants the youngsters to help him. He puts across the idea that he is their friend—not a bogeyman.

The youths look around the office. They see the rogues gallery. They read case histories. Some make it clear that the criminal is shoveling coal in prison now because he took a wrong turn as a boy. The sprouts inspect the jail—a dreary place, at best. They hear a court trial.

When the lads sign up for the league, they pledge to uphold the law and set a good example. They get identification cards and badges; receive instruction in traffic safety and first aid.

Charles J. Hahn, executive secretary of the association, estimates that 400 leagues with a total of 250,000 members are functioning.

"Every report a sheriff has made to us on counties in which leagues have been organized indicates a marked decrease in delinquency," he says.

Such reports have come from Yuma, Ariz.; Ventura, Calif.; Lynchburg, Tenn.; Seattle, Wash.; Lewiston, Idaho, and other places.

Big League Expeditions

THERE ARE at least 20 junior police forces. Two of them in Illinois—at Harrisburg and Mattoon—have earned wide notice.

Police Chief Edward H. Davidson established the junior cops in Mattoon late in 1946. There are 745 of them now.

Businessmen chip in to rent buses to take the boys to big league ball games in St. Louis and Chicago. Churches treat them to picnics and parties. The Mattoon system became a working model for similar programs in a half dozen other cities.

Eddie Wise, father of six sons and a daughter, founded the Harrisburg force. He watched the ranks grow to more than 300 lads.

Wise figured there should be a clearing house for the exchange of information among scattered bands of young lawmen. So he organized the National Association of Junior Police. He is the executive secretary.

"Letters from all over the country are proof that an intense interest has been aroused," Wise says. "Although we have only approximately a dozen JP units as actual member-units to date, there are between 100 and 200 cities and towns that are making plans to become affiliated with the national association.

"We now are striving to establish 10,000 junior police forces in America, with a membership of more than two million boys."

The Gallup Poll

Ever Cool to Congress, Public's Cold on 80th

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

FEW AMERICAN institutions need counseling on public relations more than Congress does.

Opening his reelection campaign on an anti-Congress note, President Truman found a good talking point, one with wide popular appeal. The American public seems chronically unwilling to believe that Congress does a good job.

On 11 different occasions in the last 10 years the institute has asked the Nation's voters whether they thought Congress was doing a good job. Not once did a majority say that it was.

Even when it has just finished passing measures desired by the people, the country clings to the stereotype that Congress can do no good.

After passing the tax reduction bill and the Marshall Plan—two measures which had very substantial majority support from the people—the Eightieth Congress was still rated as doing a good job by only one voter in five polled by the institute in April. And Congress adjourned amid frowns from the public, as shown by the following survey which was conducted at the time:

"Congress has been in session since January a year ago. In your opinion, has this Congress done a good job or a poor job in dealing with problems facing the country?"

The vote:

Good job	19%
Fair	34
Poor job	31
No opinion	16

Each voter was then handed a list of some of the things Congress had done, and was asked: "Will you look over this list and tell me what you think was the MOST important thing this Congress did?"

The four items which received the largest vote were tax reduction, the Marshall Plan, the Taft-Hartley Act and selective service.

Yet in April, right after the passage of the first two of those measures, here's how the public rated the job being done by the national legislators:

Good job	22%
Fair	34
Poor job	26
No opinion	18

Despite the fact that the Republican Party controls both Houses of Congress, Republican voters do not feel that Congress has done a good job. The party vote follows:

	Dem.	Rep.
Good job	13%	27%
Fair	32	38
Poor	35	21
No opinion	20	14

Some liberals have attacked the Eightieth Congress on the grounds that it is under the thumb of big business and of the lobbies of vested interests. But Congress was no more popular back in the days when it was dominated by the New Deal and was passing all sorts of measures for social reform.

The highest percentage favorable to Congress was found in August, 1939, but even then only 42 per cent, or less than a majority, said they thought Congress was doing a good job.

In every other survey the "good job" vote has ranged from about one fifth to one third of all persons polled. Today's figure of 19 per cent therefore is lower than the average for the 10-year period.

Police Force, Not Law, Has Failed the World

By Brig. Gen. Telford Taylor

General Taylor has been chief American prosecutor at the Nuernberg war crimes trials. Following is the conclusion of his argument ending the I. G. Farben cases.

THESE men may tell us that they did not understand what they themselves were doing, or that they acted under stress of fear, but the record speaks for itself. We will not find the real source of uneasiness stated in any of the headlines of the many and able briefs which defense counsel have filed, for the most soul-searching doubts are those which arise in one's own mind, conjured up by events in the world around us. In the last analysis, the question in this case is whether we have faith in the intrinsic validity and practical efficacy of international law in this day and age.

I mean it as no criticism of defense counsel that this fundamental doubt has been carefully nourished by them, particularly during the past week. But it is an easy step from the doctrine of "too soon" and "too late" to a desperate if not cynical conclusion that the world is a ruthless and unmoral pasture in which the wolves fare better than the sheep.

What are the forces today which awaken these doubts, and are they truly doubts or are they mistaken fears?

Once again, Mr. Stimson* has divined one of the most basic causes of our hesitancy:

"What happened before World War II was that we lacked the courage to enforce the authoritative decision of the international world. We agreed with the Kellogg Pact that aggressive war must end. We renounced it, and we condemned those who might use it. But it was a moral condemnation only. We thus did not reach the second half of the question: What will we do to an aggressor when we catch him? If we had reached it, we should easily have found the right answer. But that answer escaped us, for it implied a duty to catch the criminal, and such a chase meant war. It was the Nazi confidence that we would never chase and catch them, and not a misunderstanding of our opinion of them, that led them to commit their crimes. Our offense was thus that of the man who passed by on the other side."

Discordant Chorus

IN THIS passage Mr. Stimson is speaking of prewar times, but the parallels to the present day are only too easily perceived. During the three years that have passed since the end of the war in Europe, mankind has not crossed over into Jordan. Small but terrible wars rage in Greece and Palestine, the light of democracy and freedom flickers ever more feebly in other lands, and the chorus of international voices is discordant.

In our country the fear of war has been revived by these disturbances and we are constrained to look once more to our defenses. There is talk of "cold war," and meanwhile men and women die in real wars, and the echoes of persecutions and atrocities will not be stilled. Is it small wonder that some are moved to ask, "Is there a law, and if so, where is it?"

GENERAL TAYLOR
. . . "Freedom flickers feebly"

Murky and disheartening as these circumstances are, they represent the shortcomings of the police force, but not of the law. In legal perspective, this is an old story.

The King's Peace is not easily established. In ancient times, through many a century, the robber baron sallied forth from his castle to rob and kill the wayfarer, and toyed with the lives and happiness of the serfs on his manor, and died unpunished in his bed. No doubt on many occasions not only judges and clerks, but tradesmen and peasants were moved to cry that there is no law, and many a defendant smarted because others, perhaps more powerful, sinned with impunity.

The very steps that our own country is taking today to see that its armory does not grow rusty are necessitated by parallel considerations, and find their most fundamental moral justification in that it is their purpose to fend off, not to conquer. Despite the restlessness of the times, no voice is raised today in defense of conquest, and no voice is heard to say that aggression is not a crime.

There is no longer any real doubt about the law against aggression, any more than there was doubt about the law against murder or robbery in Bracton's time.

Equal Obligations

YOUR Honors, if the complexion of world affairs has darkened since the inauguration of this court room, and if the shadows have lengthened during the course of this very trial, in the long run the law may thrive best on what now appear as obstacles to its universal enforcement.

I am sure that all of us in the court room want to see this torn land once again "ready to bloom and grow fruits," as Dr. Silcher put it yesterday, but we do not want to reap another harvest of dragons' teeth. Nor can a healthful and peaceful European community be restored by drawing a shroud over the dead without benefit of inquest.

Solemn as is the obligation that the defendants be given every benefit of a full and fair trial, equally solemn is the obligation to the millions in whose behalf these charges are brought that they be given the protection of law and order in a war-weary world.

T. B. Survey

Only 15 persons out of every thousand who participated in the District's city-wide chest X-ray survey were found to have symptoms of tuberculosis. This means that the chance of any individual being infected without knowing about it is relatively small. But for the city as a whole the number of victims, a total of 6401, is large. Sixty-four hundred cases of a deadly though curable disease is an appalling burden for any city to carry. It represents a frightful wastage of life and a menace to every member of the community.

The survey was justified, of course, as a measure for promotion of the health of the community as a whole. Even if an individual can afford to take a chance on being 1 of the 985 persons out of every thousand who are free from the disease, the community cannot. So long as there is one active case of infectious disease in a congested city it is a public problem. And just as it is a public function to find contagion, it is a public function to isolate the victims and to cure the disease. Health Officer Ruhland has appropriately called the T.B. survey a "first step." From the standpoint of the individual it has already produced notable dividends in terms of specific treatment for active cases. From the viewpoint of the community its potential benefits cannot be fully realized until the District is able to provide the proper treatment for all the T.B. victims who need it.

Washington has made notable strides in the last decade in reducing the number of deaths from tuberculosis. But the survey that has just ended is ample evidence of the job remaining to be done. There can be little doubt that one effect of the survey will be to make the inhabitants of Washington more conscious than they have ever been in the past of the T.B. menace. But more important than any individual action is a community program that will assure progressive elimination of the disease. It is heartening to note that Dr. Ruhland is moving promptly to initiate such a program.

The Eisenhower Symbol

General Eisenhower found it necessary for the third time to insist that he does not wish to run for the Presidency and will not do so under any circumstances. His final statement in a telegram to Senator Pepper was a flat refusal to take the Democratic nomination at Philadelphia even if he should be nominated without his consent. Sherman himself did no better than that. As in the case of most courtships, however, General Eisenhower's "no" only intensifies the yearning and admiration of his supporters.

It is difficult to recall any instance since the days of George Washington when there has been a popular demand for any man in the Presidency comparable to the present feeling for Eisenhower. There are many instances in which one candidate has been the almost unanimous choice of his party. But the clamor for General "Ike" has come from both parties. Now that he has utterly closed the door with a final and irrevocable statement that he will not get into the political arena by any entrance, the politicians may well ask themselves what is the secret of his hold upon the public mind.

There can be no doubt that the root of General Eisenhower's popularity is his military service. But that is only a foundation. Other men, including General MacArthur, made excellent military records. None of them has emerged into political preeminence. The public turned thumbs down on General MacArthur when he bid for the Republican presidential nomination. By remaining aloof and above the battle General Eisenhower has succeeded in making himself something of a symbol of high-minded, patriotic service as distinguished from self-seeking ambition. We suspect that this is a large factor in the hero worship that flows in his direction.

So far as the public is concerned, General Eisenhower remains untouched by the pettiness of politics. Men and women at the grass roots of our political system think of him as a man who puts his country above any party—one who is eager to get on with the serious business of making peace in a statesmanlike manner while maintaining the security and stability of our institutions. If General Eisenhower faced the necessity of outlining specific policies or of carrying out such policies as President, opposition would certainly arise and he might lose many of his present followers. One big factor in his refusal to consider a nomination may be fear that he could not live up to the expectations that have come to be associated with his name. Apparently he would rather remain a symbol of hopes that perhaps cannot be realized than to take part in the rough and tumble of national politics in this difficult period.

The fact remains, however, that he has become a symbol of strength and impartial national service in the minds of millions of American voters. Those voters will not be inactive on election day. Although General Eisenhower will not be in the race and will doubtless say nothing during the campaigns, his popularity is likely to be a powerful factor in winning support for whichever candidate most nearly approximates the qualities and the stature that the public has attributed to the General.

Arab Challenge

The nations of the Arab League stand at the bar of world opinion as the Security Council takes up again the tortured and tragic issue in the Holy Land. They will not agree to the continuance of the truce. They will not even agree to a three-day extension to permit the evacuation of the U. N. personnel and equipment. The Egyptians are reported to have started fighting even before the original cease-fire order expired. Now fighting is general, and the Syrian delegate has echoed this Arab defiance of the United Nations by thumbing his nose at it. Surely the Security Council cannot dodge its responsibility in a matter which by reason of the Arab challenge is primarily an issue of United Nations authority.

The forbearance shown in the case of Palestine already has been exploited by the members of the Arab League. Partition with economic union was voted November 29. Within a couple of days the Arabs started to attack the Jews. On February 16 the Palestine Commission, in its first special report to the Security Council, stated that "powerful Arab interests, both inside and outside Palestine, are defying the resolution of the General Assembly and are engaged in a deliberate effort to alter by force the settlement envisaged therein." The exit of the British (preparatory to reentry, like Joshua, side by side with King Abdullah) on May 15 crystallized the partition of Palestine. It left the Jews to set up their own government and produced a vacuum in the rest of Palestine. Member nations of the Arab League then started to overrun Arab Palestine, but failed, in spite of a many-pronged attack from the air, by sea and overland, in spite of British equipment and British officers, to make a dent on the new Israel. The Arabs, seeing their plans miscarry, then assented with the Jews to a cease-fire order issued by the United Nations.

No longer is there any question about the rights of the local population of Arabs in the Palestine issue. The Arabs in Palestine, who have had almost no part in the conflict, have repudiated their leader, the Mufti, though his representative at Lake Success is still regarded as a spokesman of Arab Palestine. Abdullah, acting almost as if he were the avenging angel of the Allies, out of whose hands the Mufti slipped in Paris, is bent upon putting him behind bars; he cannot forget that the Mufti denounced him all through the war from a radio station in Berlin as Rabbi Abdullah. The local Arabs are leaderless. It is reported that fugitives from Palestine, whose liberation is the alleged occasion for the fighting, are being treated badly in the adjacent countries. The struggle is avowedly a naked grab for the territory of the old Turkish sanyak by countries with not the slightest claim upon it. The Arab breach of the peace has thus become abundantly clear as well as present.

Perhaps the U. N. powers will not be able to stop the contest, but they can carry out the clear command of the Charter in undertaking sanctions against the nations participating in the repudiation of their Charter engagements. This ought to be done without delay. And, if the Security Council does not come to this decision quickly, the United States, out of a bare regard for elementary morality, should lift the embargo on arms shipments to Israel, so as to end the discrimination against the victim of aggression. Already the Israelis are being squeezed by the British shutdown of the oil refineries of Haifa, as well as the superior British armament of the Arabs. There would be no surer way of throwing Israel into the arms of Soviet Russia than to keep up the discrimination any longer.

Decline Of The West

It is rather sad to discover that Miss Rebecca West—who by her reporting of the British treason trials and of a lynching trial in South Carolina earned herself overnight a place in the first rank of contemporary journalists—has, in spite of her Olympian manner, the same tendency as the rest of us to go off half-cocked on occasion.

Miss West, as probably you know, is now in the United States for the purpose of reporting our national political conventions. She appears to have been given this assignment by an editor who works on the theory that the less one knows about a thing the better qualified one is to interpret it. The theory is possibly quite sound; at any rate it is given some support by the letter written by Miss West to the New York Herald Tribune, published July 2.

The letter is about Yugoslavia. Now that is certainly a subject about which the author of Black Lamb and Gray Falcon knows a great deal more than she knows about Republicans and Democrats. Yet Miss West was never quite as silly in writing about the significance of the Stassen movement as in writing about the significance of the reported breach between Marshal Tito and the Kremlin.

She began by reproaching the British and American newspapers for permitting themselves to be deceived by another transparent Communist hoax. The whole story of difficulties between Tito and the Cominform, she said, has been cooked up by Tito and Stalin merely to give themselves a pretext for a general slaughter of defenseless Yugoslavs. Miss West went on to prove her point by showing that Tito is a man who has never been known to utter "an elevated sentiment or complicated idea," in short, a political opportunist fond of luxurious living who has no real love for either the Yugoslav people or their institutions. Obviously, then, Tito is going through this farce of a mock rebellion because he has had explicit orders to that effect from Moscow.

This is a line of reasoning that has been followed by a good many others besides Miss West. Put into simpler language, it goes something like this: "Tito is not a noble and unselfish patriot like George Washington, therefore he cannot be anything but loyal to Stalin." Now that is considerably less than air-tight logic. If, as Miss West implies, Tito is the sort of fellow who is interested in power for its own sake, it seems all the more plausible that he should break with his masters in the Kremlin as soon as he found himself strong enough to do so. If the lust of power is incompatible with idealism, it may also be incompatible with an ideology.

Home On The Range

To the natural erosion of our soil caused by water and wind must be added a new kind of artificial erosion, that of pressure groups outside and within Congress intent on whittling down the restrictions on exploitation of public lands. The immediate target of these erosionists in the congressional session just concluded was the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture. The Forest Service's crime, in the eyes of these groups—and they do not by any means encompass all cattle and sheep growers—is that it is carrying out a program to reduce in a very minor degree the number of sheep and cattle permitted to graze in the national forests in order to begin restoration of badly depleted ranges. Fortunately, the Barrett resolution, which would have called a moratorium on all such efforts for a three-year period, was shelved by the House Rules Committee.

The source of the pressures for opening the ranges to further denudation has been the livestock and woolgrowers' associations, ably abetted by some members of the House Public Lands Committee and other congressional captives of these interests. How these groups have gone about their campaign to destroy the Forest Service is detailed by that fiery and indefatigable conservationist, Bernard De Voto, in an article, "Sacred Cows and Public Lands," in this month's issue of Harper's.

The story is one that ought to be read by everyone who appreciates the need for safeguards to prevent the kind of devastation in the form of deserts and floods that uncontrolled stripping of forest and grassland has brought in vast areas of the West. It is a sordid tale of selfish interests patently frustrating the national interest. The Barrett Subcommittee of the House Public Lands Committee conducted a long investigation apparently for no other purpose than to emasculate the Forest Service. The hearings were a sorry piece of distortion in which the opponents of conservation were allowed full opportunity to get in their licks while the Forest Service had little chance to reply. It is a curious coincidence that Representative Barrett himself is a stock grower.

The proof of the intention of the Forest Service opponents is found in what the service was attempting to do. The Government now grants permits to livestock and woolgrowers to use public lands for grazing, often at extremely low rates, up to the carrying capacity of the ranges. The Forest Service sought to cut the number of sheep and cattle allowed in national forests by two tenths of 1 per cent and three one-hundredths of 1 per cent, respectively, during 1948—and forest ranges supply only 7 per cent of the grazing for Western sheep and 2 per cent for Western cattle. As Mr. De Voto remarks, "Seldom has so much noise been made about so small a matter." Happily for the national interest, the Forest Service is proceeding with the program, largely because of the courage of former Secretary of Agriculture Anderson in resisting the attempts to cripple it.

The storm thus has subsided for the time being. But there can be little doubt that it will arise again, for the avowed aim of many of the Forest Service opponents is to "return" all the public lands to State and private ownership. A greater calamity could scarcely be imagined, for there is a direct and vital relationship between the health of the remaining public domain and the productivity of the soil on which we rely for food.

LANDSCAPE

There were no lights along the shore
The night her ship came in;
Only a thin moon in the clouds,
That wandered out and in

With cold surprise to see so still
A figure on the sand,
Holding a creased and pencilled map
All crumpled in her hand,

And wearing on her face the look
Of one whom calm, not tempest, shook . . .

Nazi Assets Abroad

With reference to the communication from the Society for the Prevention of World War III which you published July 4, I wish to point out that Swtzerland committer herself, in the Washington Accord of May 25, 1946, to liquidate the property in Switzerland belonging to Germans residing in Germany, provided that these German owners would receive countervalue in German money for the liquidated assets. At the time of the negotiations, the Swiss representatives, on the basis of the census made by the competent Swiss authorities, stated that the property in Switzerland belonging to Germans in Germany amounted to 500 million Swiss francs, or approximately 120 million dollars.

Since 1946, investigations by the competent Swiss authorities have continued, and it has been proved that the estimate of 1946 was rather high. At no time did the Allied members of the Joint Commission in Berne pretend that the result of the liquidation would greatly exceed the original estimate.

At the time of ratification of the agreement by the Swiss Parliament, it was stated that the country could adopt a legal viewpoint which in many respects was in direct contrast to the provisions of the Swiss constitution, protecting private property, only if the German owners would be compensated in a just and fair manner. To establish the basis for this compensation, it was necessary to set a rate of exchange for the Swiss franc and the reichsmark.

Switzerland proposed several times to the Allied governments that they fix the same rate as then existed in Germany for the exchange of United States dollars against reichsmarks. The Allied answer, however, consisted in offering the rate which had prevailed before the war. This proposal, of course, could not be accepted by Switzerland, since it is a fact that the value of the Swiss franc is many times that of the German reichsmark.

The Swiss viewpoint was last explained to the Allied governments in a note dated October 8, 1947. The Allied reply of May 11, 1948, is now under consideration by the Swiss government.

Democratic Choice

What purpose do those Democrats and pseudo-Democrats think they are serving who are campaigning for a demigod, a hero or anybody-but-Truman for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency?

Certainly it is a strange set-up. Here the Republicans have just completed running away from the record they have made in a Congress controlled by them for the last two years. They have repudiated it in their platform and repudiated it in their refusal to nominate any of its eminent leaders.

But now it is suggested that the Democrats should run away from their record too and, like the Republicans, nominate a newcomer instead of a tried veteran in national government—a sort of pigs-in-a-poke double play.

One of the first questions that will be answered at Philadelphia next week is whether there is any Democratic Party any more, or just a cloud of loose particles looking for something to which to attach themselves. If there is a living party I think it will nominate President Truman and build a strong, a rejuvenated progressive Democratic organization behind him.

It can be said that the building of such an organization may be even more important for the future than the result of this campaign, as gravely important as that will be.

Bus Exits

May I add my bit to the controversy over leaving by the front or side door of cars and buses. It seems that offenders are usually women. I am one of them because when buses stop, the curb is too far away from the side door to be reached with safety and it's a long step down to the pavement for short people. On one occasion, I tried to reach the curb but my foot slipped off the rounded edge and I went down and was only saved from the wheels by the red light.

Another reason, in windy weather, a woman's coat blows back and if she is last out the door catches the ends of the coat. This often happens, judging from the news items. Streetcars, with the loading platforms, are much safer and there is little excuse for not using the side doors.

Public-Owned Transit

It is too bad that the obvious solution to the transit fare problem is one from which both Congress and the bulk of the District's population will flee as from an epidemic disease. I refer, of course, to the acquisition of the lines and facilities of Capital Transit by the District government, and their operation by a District Board of Transportation, in the name of and for the benefit of the entire area.

There is, to my mind, no less reason why the cost of public transport should not be shared among the entire people, non-users as well as users, than there is for the assumption of the public education burden by all taxpayers, those without children as well as those with children. An efficient public transit system benefits those who do not need to use it: I see no reason why they also should not pay for it.

The great trouble, however, is that public ownership, whenever it is proposed, is immediately labeled "socialism," and thereby quickly and painlessly disposed of, to the aggrandizement of the vested interests. Public ownership admittedly is no universal cure-all; but I would feel much better if I were paying a 12-cent fare simply for services rendered, than a 15-cent fare to assure somebody's profits. Why should somebody profit by my necessities?

"Issue In Emphasis"

In its July 3 editorial "Issue in Emphasis," The Washington Post last week made a grossly unfair attack on the GOP presidential candidate, Thomas E. Dewey. Because the governor refuses to blindly follow the Truman road on foreign policy, particularly in China, The Washington Post aims its heavy artillery against him.

It is asserted first of all that Dewey has broken the spirit of the bipartisan foreign policy by deviating from the Truman party line. This claim is completely untenable. The bipartisan policy was largely aimed at winning the war against Nazi Germany. In that respect it was followed by the Republican Party. Dewey's consent to this program, which The Washington Post quotes, was made in 1944 while the United States was still at war.

It would be a fantastic breach of our free system of government, if the Republican Party were to adopt all of the futile indecision of the foreign policy makers of the Truman Administration. The reason we have political campaigns and opposing parties in this country is to thrash out differences at the bar of public opinion.

EMMANUEL S. LARSEN.
Director, Far Eastern Information Service.
Washington.

It must be remembered that the foreign policy of our Nation can be truly bipartisan only so long as it is the creation, the active creation, of both major parties. If it is to be simply manufactured in the White House and then handed to the Republicans as an accomplished fact, it becomes a unilateral policy.

In his recent public utterances Mr. Dewey has revealed that this is exactly what Mr. Truman has been trying to do, instead of consulting GOP policy makers on major issues. The Republicans cannot in good faith accept such dictation, no matter how loud the propagandists of the Truman palace guard are about it. If they did succumb, the GOP high command would be taking the first serious step toward political totalitarianism in the United States.

The Republican candidate's foreign policy, especially on the China question, cannot, by any stretch of the imagination, be considered as a point against him. After all, what is the purpose of having political campaigns other than to thrash out the issues of the day? How are the people to know the situation if one party to a contest is to remain silent? The voters of America must have both sides of a disputed question in order to decide whether or not the Administration in power has efficiently and properly discharged the trusteeship of government.

Certainly no one can argue that the Democratic politicians have a monopoly on international wisdom or that the Truman-Marshall policy of abandoning China to the Soviet-driven Communist rebels is the best policy for the United States to follow. The Republican Party has an imposing array of foreign policy experts of its own, many of them easily as qualified to speak on the subject as the President and his general-Secretary of State.

Mr. Dewey believes, as do most of our qualified Asiatic experts, that the attempts on the part of our Government to force China to accept Communists into the government is a disastrous surrender of national interests. He believes that the maintenance of a huge Chinese army in the battlefield against the Soviet Union's trained agents is a sound measure for the security of our own Nation, a fact which was recognized 50 years ago when a Republican administration laid down the "open door policy."

Finally, the claim that Mr. Dewey is not qualified to speak, because he "has not yet had an opportunity to canvass the world situation" is simply not true. On the contrary, the governor has been a keen and able student of foreign and domestic affairs. As presidential candidate in 1944, and leading contender for the nomination since that time, he has had access to the ablest international minds of his party, men of the high caliber of John Foster Dulles. His knowledge easily entitles him not only to comment upon the errors of the present Administration but to play an active role in the foundation of a foreign policy of his own. His statements on China aid made two days after the nomination show beyond any doubt that he has the ability to do so.

Overtime On Overtime

A Communication

HAVING participated in the litigation of the longshoremen's overtime-on-overtime claims, I wish to reply to Senator Thomas' letter published in The Washington Post on June 25.

Senator Thomas asserts that the Supreme Court's decision will have a very limited effect, being applicable only to the stevedoring industry, and that the decision does no more than give judicial approval to principles previously established by the Wage and Hour Division. In fact, the exact opposite is true as to both assertions.

The Supreme Court held that overtime paid under collective bargaining agreements cannot be excluded from "regular rate" or credited against overtime required by the Fair Labor Standards Act unless such contract overtime is paid because a man works in excess of a stated number of hours per day or per week.

Contract clauses requiring overtime payments for work which is not in excess of a specified number of hours are not limited to the stevedoring industry but are prevalent throughout all organized industries. Such clauses requiring overtime payments at time and one-half or double time cover, to mention only a few, call-in work, work during meal hours, work before 8 a. m. or before the regular starting time or regular shift, work when recalled on the same day, as well as work on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

Irrespective of retroactive liability facing employers who have made such payments, the decision will necessitate changes in all such employment practices and contracts. The prevalence of such requirements throughout industry and the inevitability of changes in employment practices by reason of the decision has been made very clear even by the Wage and Hour administrator.

On June 28, 1948, the Wage and Hour administrator announced that enforcement of the "new" interpretation "necessitated" by the Supreme Court decision would be postponed until September 15, 1948, because "information from both labor and management sources indicated that more time is required to make appropriate adjustments, or where necessary, to make revisions* in collective bargaining agreements, due to varying requirements of union agreements, as to reopening of contracts."

MOREOVER, the decision of the Supreme Court adopts a totally new theory of overtime never applied by the Wage and Hour administrator. The administrator of the Wage and Hour Division in his published interpretations has never drawn any distinction between overtime rates which were paid because work was in excess of the specified number of hours and overtime which was paid because of the particular time of the day or the day of the week or year the work was performed.

Time and again the administrator has advised industry that overtime paid for Sunday and holiday work was not a shift or job differential but a true overtime rate. While the Wage and Hour administrator did advise the War Shipping Board (not the stevedores) in 1943 that in his opinion, the overtime rates paid in the stevedoring industry were not true overtime that opinion was based upon the administrator's belief that overtime was "regularly worked" in the stevedoring industry. Not only is this fact not true, as was demonstrated in the hearings in the case, but the Supreme Court held that this was an improper test to determine whether overtime was to be excluded from regular rates and credited against statutory overtime under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

The bills introduced by Senator Wiley and Representative Goodwin are narrowly limited so as to prevent only the pyramiding of FLSA overtime upon overtime as universally understood by industry, labor and the Wage and Hour Division. They are not designed to, and do not, undermine the overtime standards intended by the Fair Labor Standards Act. Even the Wage and Hour administrator, in his Annual Report to Congress, dated January 2, 1948, and in a recent letter written to The Washington Post, has advocated an amendment to the Fair Labor Standards Act to prevent such pyramiding.

NOR IS IT true that the Government will defray the recoveries, including costs of accounting, even in the stevedoring industry. The several hundred suits filed in New York prior to the Portal-to-Portal Act of 1947 have a six-year statute of limitations. One to two years of individual liability exists prior to the beginning of Government wartime operations. Moreover, it is the position of the Army and Navy that under their wartime fixed-price contracts they have no obligation to reimburse any retroactive liability imposed upon stevedores for operations prior to February 1, 1945.

Senator Thomas' letter is but another illustration of sincere but misguided liberals applauding a result which is so extreme and unfair in its effects as to undermine confidence in social legislation and furnish a basis for selfish attack aimed at the destruction of such legislation.

It is difficult to understand how one sincerely interested in the principles of collective bargaining and minimum wage and hour legislation can applaud the reversal of a decision by such an eminent and liberal jurist as Simon Rifkind, who served for many years as secretary to Senator Wagner. Judge Rifkind characterized the claims sanctioned by the Supreme Court decisions as being of such nature as to "put collective bargaining in the category of a device for obtaining money under false pretenses." The cause of liberalism faces certain disaster if it is to be identified in the minds of the public with ruthless harshness and inequity such as result from this type of decision. WILLIAM RADNER.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

No One's Ever Said a Final 'No'

By Drew Pearson

HERBERT BAYARD SWOPE, former mastermind of the old New York World, has done some quiet research to see whether anyone ever turned down a presidential nomination.

The records show that one man, Gov. Frank Lowden of Illinois, did turn down the vice presidential nomination after it was tendered him in 1920. But no man in our history has ever refused the presidential nomination.

Several have discouraged it in advance, but no one has ever refused it after it was voted at a party convention.

Pennies Rolling In

DEMOCRATIC leaders got together in an off-the-record meeting the other day to raise money for the campaign. Results were not encouraging.

Some of the Democratic functionaries talked optimistically about raising five million dollars, but the experienced money-raisers in the group shook their heads. If the party scraped together one fifth of that, they said, it would be a miracle. Money just isn't coming in, they mourned, and it won't—with Truman running.

Already Democratic money-raisers are touching diplomats and jobholders who cannot be touched twice. Here is the latest record of contributions:

Laurence Steinhardt, Ambassador to Czechoslovakia, $3000; his wife, $5000; his daughter, $5000; Herman Baruch, Ambassador to Holland and brother of Bernie, $3000.

Bernard Armour, president of the American Aniline Co., $5000; Jack Frye, who owes his job as head of General Aniline & Film to the Truman Administration, $1100.

C. V. (Sonny) Whitney, Assistant Secretary for Air, $5000 (loan); Will Clayton, former Undersecretary of State, $1000; William A. Julian, Treasurer of The United States, $1000; John W. Scott, former Federal Power Commissioner, $2500; George Bowden of Chicago, former treasurer of the "1000 Club," $1000; Edith Helm, social secretary to Mrs. Truman, $500; Hugh Grant Straus of New York, $1000; Carl Estes of Longview, Tex., $1000.

These are the individual collections between March 1 and June 1, and for a campaign year they are meager indeed.

The Widow's Mite

VERY few people realize what John L. Lewis has done to white-collar workers, to old people living on Government pensions and to the rest of the labor movement.

To get a bird's-eye view of Lewis' operations, you have to go back to the days of the New Deal when it was recognized that all old people deserved some kind of security. Accordingly, the Social Security Act was passed, providing unemployment compensation and old-age pensions.

Today these pensions have become most woefully inadequate, and one factor helping to make them so has been Lewis' never-ending, inflationary demands for wage increases and miners' pensions.

For instance, when Lewis gouges a multimillion-dollar welfare fund out of the mine operators, the operators pass the cost on to the oldsters and everyone else in the country, whose pensions then becomes less valuable.

Thus the miners become a privileged class. Not only do they get three and four times the pensions given ordinary citizens, but other citizens have to pay for the miners' pensions.

The widow who tries to make both ends meet on a Government pension of $30 a month has to help pay for the miner's pension of $100 a month.

Another thing: Lewis can now bulldoze wage increases for the miners which certain other unions can't. For instance, the railroads have their rates set by the Interstate Commerce Commission. As public utilities, they are not free agents to decide what they will charge the public.

Therefore the railroad brotherhoods, once the aristocrats of the labor world, have not been able to secure sweeping wage increases because the railroads cannot pass the increase on to the public.

Actually, coal is just as much a public utility as the railroads. It is essential to the lifeblood of the Nation. But while the railroads are regulated by the ICC, the electric power and gas companies by the Federal Power Commission and the radio, telegraph and telephone companies by the Federal Communications Commission, the coal industry remains unregulated.

Still another thing: Private industry cannot get together and conspire to fix prices. To do so violates the Sherman Antitrust Act. Yet Lewis can get all the miners together, from West Virginia to Utah and from Ohio to Alabama, and present uniform demands on all coal operators, without violating the Sherman Act.

Prediction: 1. The Supreme Court in a year or so will reverse its previous ruling and make labor unions subject to the antitrust laws; 2. Congress, recognizing that the coal industry is just as much a public utility as the railroads, will set up a commission regulating both coal wages and coal prices. In other words, John L. Lewis will kill the goose that laid his golden eggs.

The Change in Truman

IF YOU look back about three years you will note that a most interesting change has developed in Harry Truman.

When he first came into office he kept dropping remarks about how he didn't want to be President, that he wasn't qualified, that he never sought the job, that he was so unhappy living in that big house alone.

Mrs. George Marshall, wife of the Secretary of State, tells in her book of President Truman's early conversation with her about not wanting to be President. That was Harry Truman at his best—simple, direct, apparently sincere.

But something has happened since those days. The Harry Truman of today is so feverishly panting to continue as President that he now is in the position of one whom his party does not wish to run, but who insists on running anyway.

Few Presidents ever have had such a wholesale revolt of both the leaders and the rank and file of the party. Yet he hangs on.

Probable reason for this change is that when a man has been in the White House for some time, has enjoyed the power, the prestige, the gold-braided aides at his beck and call, the private airplanes and special railroad trains, he is always reluctant to leave.

Harry Truman is only human. He is no different from most other Presidents. The days when he was just a little guy from Missouri, unhappy in a strange place, are no more.

Bill Green's Indirection

AFL topnotchers are still sizzling over President Bill Green's announcement, following a White House visit, that Labor's League for Political Education could not support the Dewey-Warren Republican ticket.

Green, who has the best intentions in the world but is getting along in years, apparently had forgotten a secret huddle in Milwaukee some weeks back at which he and other LLPE policy-makers decided that the league would indorse no presidential nominee in this year's campaign, directly or indirectly.

It was decided that the league would deal with issues affecting labor during the campaign, rather than with personalities. AFL leaders were left free to support either the Republican or the Democratic ticket, providing they made it clear they were not speaking for the AFL or the LLPE.

That was why other AFL chieftains hit the ceiling when they heard about Green's renunciation of Dewey and Warren, an indirect indorsement of the yet-to-be-selected Democratic ticket.

Odds Against Polio

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor

NEW YORK, July 10.—The odds are heavily in your favor that you and your child will escape polio.

Even in an epidemic, only one child in 300 comes down with it, statistics show. Half or more recover completely without any crippling or other after-effects.

Of the rest, about half are left with only minor paralysis or other disabilities, thanks to modern care and treatment.

This may sound, of course, like saying that only a certain number of houses will burn down this year, and that yours very probably won't be one of them. And there's no insurance against polio, although scores of capable scientists are trying to find a preventive.

One approach is to try to solve the puzzles of polio epidemics, and find out exactly what happens then. Like in an epidemic of 1944 . . .

May Eruption

THAT WINTER, the epidemic was like a smouldering fire. Eight children came down with polio between October and May in two Pennsylvania towns. In May, the fire burst into flames. A serious epidemic raced through an area of 10,000 square miles.

From a small central area, the disease spread evenly in all directions for 60 miles. It traveled at the rate of half a mile a day. Nearly 1000 children and adults were hit.

In the 15 years preceding there had been sporadic cases of infantile paralysis in that area, but no true epidemics. The next summer, in 1945, the epidemic started up again in the outskirts of the same area.

Epidemiologists studying that outbreak didn't solve any of the mysteries. But their findings pointed up some of the main problems. One is how the virus is spread. Another is why some people apparently are immune.

This same kind of hunt for answers is under way again this summer by teams of experts who move into epidemic areas. The March of Dimes helps support their work.

Summer Spurs It

THE EVIDENCE so far indicates that human contact plus some other unknown factor or factors are instrumental in producing epidemics, said Dr. Hart E. Van Riper, medical director of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Outbreaks of polio occur all year, but when warm weather comes something happens that either helps the spread of the virus or greatly reduces human resistance.

Flies can carry the virus. But there is no proof yet that flies spread it to human beings or that flies are part of the chain in the summer epidemics. Other insects might be responsible.

The virus is found in sewage during epidemics. It's found in the intestinal tracts of people who aren't appreciably ill with polio. For every person who comes down with the disease, hundreds may carry the virus. Whether they spread it to others hasn't been proved. For every person who has a paralyzing attack, six to eight may have only mild attacks with no paralysis.

In the United States, and some other countries, polio now apparently is affecting a higher percentage of older children in both city and country than it did 30 years ago. For many years it affected a higher percentage of older children in rural areas than in urban areas.

Some workers have remarked that countries with good sanitation seem to have more polio epidemics than countries where living conditions are poor. There is a guess, but only a guess, as to why this happens. The guess is that in nations with poor sanitation, children may be exposed to the virus at a very young age and develop immunity.

In countries with good sanitation, according to this theory, children avoid the virus, and may be more susceptible to it when it does start to spread.

Natives Escaped

HIGH rates of polio among American and British troops in the Philippines, Middle East, and Far East are an interesting new development. In some cases, the troops had 10 times more polio than troops stationed at home. But there wasn't more polio among the native populations.

The troops either were exposed to the virus for the first time, or were exposed to a different strain of the virus than those prevalent in the United States and Britain.

There may be a dozen different strains of the virus. The number complicates the search for a vaccine or other means of preventing the disease. Animal experiments indicate that immunity acquired from exposure to the virus is immunity only to that particular strain or its close relatives.

One team of workers found that when chimpanzees were fed the virus, they became intestinal carriers of it for several weeks or months. They developed specific neutralizing antibodies to the strain of virus used. Then if they were given the same strain of virus again, they were immune to reinfection. But if different strains were used, the chimpanzees could be infected again and again.

Sixty per cent of all children's operations are tonsillectomies, and 20 per cent are appendectomies or fractures, a survey by a committee of the Actuarial Society of America shows. Boys, it found, incur 15 per cent more surgical operations than girls.

* * * *

These theories about food are "nonsense," says Prof. Albert P. Sy of the University of Buffalo chemistry department:

That only one food should be eaten at a meal; that only raw foods should be eaten; that onions are good medicine for the liver; that lettuce helps against insomnia; that garlic is good in cases of hardening of the arteries; that spinach is good for muscles.

Further nonsense, he adds, are the beliefs that there are such things as brain food, hair food, skin food and eye strengtheners, or that certain foods can determine the sex of unborn babies.

"Overweight," he told an American Chemical Society meeting, "is almost always due to overeating, and good digestion and metabolism. Sooner or later, overeating must be stopped, and if it isn't done sooner there won't be any later. External applications are useless, totally. Exercise increases appetite and weight. Massage is a waste of effort. All drugs and remedies are dangerous."

Coming True After 40 Years

Nile Dam Was Churchill Dream

By A. T. Steele

KAMPALA, Uganda, July 10.—Where the Nile plunges out of Lake Victoria on the start of its long journey to the sea, the boiling cataracts will soon be harnessed to the needs of man.

For half a century the idea of taming the Nile at its source has dazzled imaginative minds. Today the dream is near realization.

At Owens Falls, 40 miles east of here, British planners expect shortly to begin construction of a great dam that will provide cheap power for industrial development in East Africa. Besides transforming the economy of the British protectorate of Uganda, it will help to stablize the flow of the Lower Nile.

Uganda is a highland country sandwiched between Kenya and the Belgian Congo. Its chief source of prosperity has been raw cotton. The hydroelectric scheme opens up the prospect of mills and smelters to process the raw materials of this region.

INITIAL surveys have been completed. Negotiations are in progress with Egypt. It remains for the British and Uganda governments to work out the details of financing. The estimated cost is $28,000,000. The project will take five years to complete.

The dam will go in at a point about a mile down river from the outlet of Lake Victoria. Seven hundred feet long and more than 60 feet high, the structure will raise the level of the great lake 3 feet, creating an immense reservoir of water to be released as necessary for power production and flood control.

Egypt has suffered for centuries from the vagaries of the Nile. The Egyptians would have preferred to store the surplus water in Lake Albert, farther down the river, but a dam at that point would flood 1100 square miles of fertile and inhabited land. Uganda is already hard up for good land for her growing population.

Raising the level of Lake Victoria will create a controllable reserve of water 27,000 square miles in area and 3 feet deep, without loss of valuable land.

Continental Supplier

THE power plant, with an output of 105,000 kilowatts, will make possible the establishment of a textile industry in Uganda capable of supplying most of East Africa.

More than 40 years ago, Winston Churchill visited Owen Falls and later wrote in his book, "My African Journey":

"We must have spent three hours watching the waters and evolving plans to harness and bridle them. So much power running to waste, such a coign of vantage unoccupied, such a lever to control the natural forces of Africa ungripped, cannot but vex and stimulate imagination, and what fun to make the immemorial Nile begin its journey by diving through a turbine!"

Churchill had the fun of toying with the great idea, but it looks as though it will be the Labor government that will have the work of putting it into effect.

Painful Trek for a Lean Donkey

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

ONE bitter anti-Truman Democrat compares the unfortunate President to Haiti's King Christophe. Christophe was the black dictator who ordered his army to march to certain death off the towering battlements of his mountain palace. The bitter Democrat asserts that Truman is demonstrating his power in much the same way, by insisting on his nomination and thus ensuring the destruction of the Democratic Party.

No doubt the analogy is unfair, and certainly it is unsafe to make predictions of the outcome of the election at this early date. Moreover, since General Eisenhower's third and final "no," there has been a rather undignified scramble back onto the sinking Truman ship. Even so, it certainly appears likely that the Truman campaign will be about as sad a spectacle as any in recent history. Indeed, the mind boggles at the prospect.

Let us take Mr. Truman on an imaginary campaign trip. His first stop is, say, Philadelphia. In Pennsylvania, the Democratic revolt against Truman recently forced the careful National Committeeman, David Lawrence, sufficiently off the fence to remark wistfully that Eisenhower could "sweep the country."

Mr. Truman moves on to New Jersey. There that statesmanlike figure, Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, has publicly branded the President as inadequate, in response to pressure from the Democratic rank and file, and the entire New Jersey Democratic delegation has been committed against Truman.

From Coast to Coast

THE President's next stop is New York. Although he is now sadly reconciled to the Truman candidacy, the Mayor of that city, William O'Dwyer, has already made it quite clear that he would have preferred almost anyone to Truman. And both Bronx Boss Ed Flynn and National Committeeman Paul Fitzpatrick have played ill-concealed footy-footy with the stop-Truman forces.

Perhaps somewhat discouraged by the coolness of his reception, Mr. Truman pushes bravely on to Chicago. Although willing to forgive and forget, Democratic Boss Jacob Arvey of that city has been a leader of the stop-Truman forces from the beginning. Such other influential Illinois political figures as Ed Kelly have privately expressed an equal lack of enthusiasm for the Truman candidacy.

Wisely skipping such anti-Truman States as Minnesota and Oregon, the President dauntlessly carries on to California. There more than half the Democratic delegation, although the whole delegation was instructed for him, joined the anti-Truman revolt before it collapsed. The revolt was led by James Roosevelt, the oldest son of Truman's predecessor.

Perhaps it is better to draw a veil at this point over the reception Mr. Truman can be expected to receive in a number of Northern States. As for the South, it would be unkind to mention it. Altogether, as still another bitter Democrat has remarked, "The President had better confine his campaigning to Missouri."

'Success' Is Inspiring

IT IS TRUE, of course, that a nomination for the Presidency can effect miraculous changes in a party's attitude toward the nominee, as witness the vast love-feast which the Republican Party has become after the hotly contested nomination of Governor Dewey. But certainly a record number of hands will be sat upon during the coming campaign if Truman is nominated.

Thus the Truman campaign seems certain to be a pretty painful business. This is so not only because of the publicly expressed hostility of so great a proportion of the Democratic leaders. It is also so because the Democratic coffers are already almost completely empty—it is reliably reported that the money is flowing more readily into even the Wallace party's treasury—and are likely to continue so.

Even when he was most disliked by the prosperous, Franklin Roosevelt could always depend on a healthy contribution from a would-be Ambassador here and there. But hardly anyone believes that the unfortunate Mr. Truman will have any ambassadorships to offer in the future.

Shelve That Tombstone

THINGS may change. Truman has a remarkable record of political ups and downs, and an up may be on the way after his nomination. Yet this is very difficult to believe. On the other hand, it is also difficult to believe that the country is now witnessing, as some gloomy anti-Truman Democrats assert, the disintegration of the Democratic Party. Disintegration of the Republican Party was widely heralded after the disastrous Landon defeat in 1936, and the Republicans are now doing very nicely, thank you.

Yet there are differences. The hard core of the Republican Party remained united after 1936, and there were always, even at the darkest moments, Republicans who were willing to provide the financial sinews of political warfare. Certainly a similarly disastrous defeat will tend to expose the bare bones of Democratic disunity.

Thus disintegration of the traditional Democratic Party is at least conceivable. And it is also conceivable that it might in time be replaced by the kind of Stalinist-influenced left grouping which Europe has come to know all too well. That is the real danger in the terrible troubles of Mr. Truman.

Southern Accent Fills the Bill

Keynoter Barkley a 'Ready' Man

By Harry Snyder
Associated Press Staff Writer

A FAMILIAR VOICE will greet the Democratic faithful at Philadelphia tomorrow.

Once again the full-bodied bass tones of Alben Barkley will sound the call to arms for his party in national convention.

It will be the third time that this tall, broad-shouldered son of Kentucky has done the chore of keynoting and serving as temporary chairman.

Party leaders wanted a man of experience. They got him. For 43 years he has been active in the party, orthodox all the way.

He toiled in the House of Representatives for 13 years before moving to the Senate, where he's been for 22 years. For 11 years he has been Senate Democratic leader.

It was Barkley who keynoted the 1932 convention at Chicago that sent Franklin D. Roosevelt out to capture the Presidency from Herbert Hoover. He played the same role in 1936. And in 1940 and 1944 he took the gavel of permanent chairman.

They have returned him to the firing line for this show. President Truman says he is confident of victory, in the election. But some of his followers cast anxious glances southward. It is a time calling for a persuasive voice with a Southern accent.

Shout or Croon

THE DEMOCATS chose a keynoter from the old school of political oratory. Back in 1905, when Barkley won election as prosecuting attorney in McCracken County, his first political victory, it was because the folks took to his booming voice.

They didn't have microphones and sound amplifiers then, but he didn't need them, and he doesn't need them now.

He's known as a "ready" man. He can speak on almost any subject, at any time, for any length of time. And he does, confidently and ably.

He's a shouter. He's a floor-pacer. He's a desk-pounder.

But he has a change of pace, too. In presiding over the 1940 convention, he almost cooed into the microphone and frequently burst into song.

Next November he will turn 71. But you might not believe it. You note that his thinning hair is whitening. You guess he might worry a bit about an expanded waist line. He wears glasses, the kind that pinch on the bridge of the nose. It seems that he is forever taking them off and putting them on.

One of the natty dressers in Congress, he is usually the first to don sports clothes in the spring.

Rugged Campaigner

HE'S AN "IRON MAN" among political speakers. He made 40 talks for Earle Clements' successful race for the Kentucky governorship last fall even after he broke a rib in an auto accident. He's also quick with a quip, but sometimes he thinks his sense of humor isn't appreciated by his fellows.

It's safe to say the Grand Old Party and its recent record in Congress will get a going-over from him at Philadelphia. You can count upon him to touch such issues as Government spending and tax cuts, topics that have excited him in recent months.

A member of the Finance and Foreign Affairs Committees, the Senator studies international goings-on closely. In recent years he has traveled abroad extensively.

Woodrow Wilson long was his ideal. Franklin Roosevelt achieved a similar place in his eyes despite the row they had in 1944 over the language of a presidential veto message.

He resigned the Democratic leadership as a result of that row—an action which was promptly reversed by his colleagues.

Congressional Record's 'Cousin' Becomes a Textbook

By Fred Hechinger

LONDON (Delayed)—Britain's most informative newspaper does not appear on the newsstands. It has no screaming headlines. Its daily circulation is below 5000 copies. Its name is "Hansard."

All this sounds incredible in an age of information-hungry people. And it might be incredible, indeed, if it did not have its equally neglected counterpart in the United States. For Hansard is nothing more startling than the British cousin of The Congressional Record.

And when, in all honesty, have you last read the Congressional Record?

As early as 1939 one man in Britain started out on a unique program of adult education in the doings of Parliament. Commander Stephen King-Hall had just retired from the Royal Navy and got himself elected into the House of Commons as an independent member.

When he made his "maiden speech" he startled the House by attacking the popular and official neglect of Hansard. At first members smiled at the "eccentric intruder;" but when the Commander asked the direct question: "How many of the honorable members are reading their 'own daily newspaper'?" the poll proved highly embarrassing.

But K. H., as he is popularly known, was not satisfied with this first attack. The following week he raised another question. How many of Britain's Embassies abroad "subscribe" to Hansard? There was some uneasy whispering and a request for time to answer the question. A week was granted. Then the answer came triumphantly: "All of them are on the mailing list."

K. H. smiled, then inquired: "Since when." And the answer came with slightly less enthusiasm: "Since yesterday." In fact, the British Embassy in Washington had been the only previous "subscriber."

Born in 1944

OUT OF THIS personal effort grew the Hansard Society. It was born officially in 1944 and has since continued its pioneering efforts to get as many key citizens in Britain, the Commonwealth and foreign countries to read the daily record of one of the world's oldest democratic bodies.

The Hansard Society first set out to act as a subscription agency and then, in addition, inaugurated a quarterly journal, "Parliamentary Affairs." I have talked to its editor, Mr. Sidney D. Bailey, and learned that all over the country interest in the work of Parliament has increased.

Recently 300 members of Parliament voted that several hundred copies of Hansard be made available for the use of the educational centers of the armed forces.

Still Not Satisfied

BUT K. H. was not yet satisfied. With parliamentary democracy on trial he believes that the export of the British Parliament's record is one of the most striking educational necessities. At a special meeting the organization linked hands and documents with sister-agencies abroad. It was found that Canada and Belgium already had similar institutions, the Canadian Friends of Hansard and the Connaissance du Parlement (Knowledge of Parliament). While no similar agency exists in the United States, more than 40 American universities are by now "subscribers."

Recently the Hansard Society embarked on an entirely novel venture. It conducted a 10-day course for 12 carefully picked parliamentary leaders among German officials in the British zone. What might easily have turned into a highly technical and learned forum, in effect became a living lesson in democracy.

Perhaps the most important fact concerning the Hansard Society is its nonpolitical, all-party makeup. Recently congratulatory letters were received from Winston Churchill and his present successor, Clement Attlee.

Stephen King-Hall sees in the small beginnings of the society the potential force of a giant adult education program on a world-wide basis. He admits that the day may be some time off—1975 is his conservative guess—but he speaks of an International Council of Parliamentary Societies as the "embryo of a world parliament," based on knowledge.

Both Teacher And Pupil Play Hookey

TOKYO, July 10 (U.P.).—Japanese school children who play hookey have to be careful or they will run into their teachers at the swimming holes and pool halls.

The situation is deplorable, according to Ministry of Education officials, who made a private check on schools and found 40 per cent of the teachers absent.

In one prefecture, 60 per cent of the principals were playing hookey the day the officials dropped in unexpectedly.

It's probably embarrassing for all concerned when the teachers and pupils meet on the street during school hours. Of course, there always is the possibility that they got together in advance and decided to go to a ball game.

High education officials give the teachers an "out" by suggesting that some of the instructors might have to skip school a few days each month and work at other jobs to make a living.

However, it is admitted that even school teachers probably don't like being indoors when the grass is green and the water in the village pond is warm.

The thing that really upsets the Ministry of Education officials is a report that teachers in one school have been throwing sake parties during school hours. Japanese sake is a potent rice wine that gets quick results when served hot.

Ministry of Education officials said these sake parties have got to stop because it is undemocratic for men teachers to wait on male colleagues by serving drinks to them and "obeying their orders as though men were superior to women."

Columbia to Inaugurate Advanced Library Work

The Columbia University School of Library Service will inaugurate an all-graduate program of study in September with a completely new group of courses leading to the degree of master of science.

New advanced courses will also be offered students who are accepted by the university's joint committee on graduate instruction, enabling them to work for the degree of doctor of philosophy in the field of librarianship.

Columbia will become the only institution in the East and one of three in the country offering the opportunity of studying for a doctorate in this field.

Goal: Up the Quality

Art Goes to the Hinterland

By Jane Watson Crane

WHILE THE traveling art exhibition is by no means an exclusively American institution, its possibilities have certainly been more extensively exploited here than anywhere else in the world.

Pioneer in the field is the American Federation of Arts, which, from headquarters in Washington has been sending art around the country for 40 years. During 1947-48 the federation will have circulated 62 shows, with a total to date of 281 bookings. Aim for the 1948-49 season is to up the quality, lower the quantity but not the bookings.

Originally the federation's program of traveling exhibitions was designed to bring art, particularly original works, into communities without facilities of their own. Lately it has developed into a large-scale service to established centers as well. However, many of the big museums initiate their own shows, some even have traveling circuits of their own, so the real need continues to be in the smaller communities. The difficulty, in a time of soaring costs on all fronts, is to keep the fees within reach of the outfits with slim budgets.

Some of Its Own

AT PRESENT the federation plans few special shows of its own, the majority being organized by museums and galleries, some by industrial sponsors. Last year seven were made up of loans by private collectors, three were from United States Government collections, and 14 by universities, art societies, and artist groups. The service is now in charge of Mrs. Annemarie Henle Pope, and there is a national exhibition committee consisting of museum officials and artists which reviews all material offered for circulation and advises generally on the program.

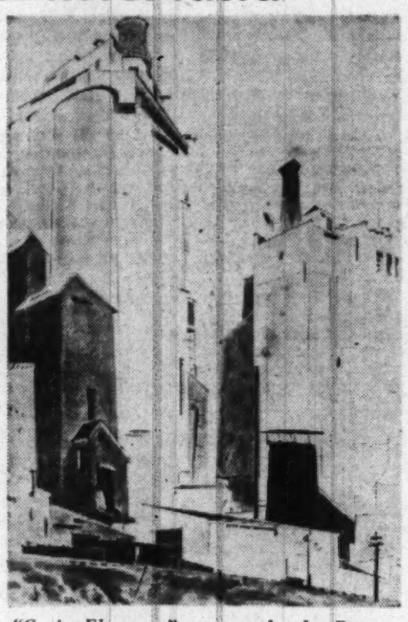
During the past year federation shows have gone as far afield as Honolulu, and into all but 13 States of the Union. They go to schools, libraries, and small galleries, as well as into museums and community centers.

The list of States not included is, however, revealing, for many of these according to the original intent of the program, would profit the most. Wyoming is one example. We can remember in the thirties when a show of paintings went to a small town in that State, people came from miles around the countryside to see it, and the attendance records about doubled the figures for the town's total population.

Not Only Paintings

AS TO MATERIAL circulated, it is by no means confined to paintings. In fact, Mrs. Pope tells us that the greatest demand is for shows dealing with design and decoration. She believes this due in part to the fact that since the costs of home-building and other practical difficulties have forced postponement of construction of the post-war dream house, people are increasingly interested in improving the homes they have. "Good Design Is Your Business," a show organized by the Albright Gallery in Buffalo, has been in constant demand. The American Institute of Decorators has a show in circulation, and others are devoted to advertising and commercial art.

Emanating from the District are exhibits of ancient Peruvian textiles and semi-antique rugs, lent by the Textile Museum of the District of Columbia. These likewise have been in steady demand, their value greatly enhanced by the informative, carefully worked-out text which accompanies each display.



"Grain Elevators," water color by Preston Dickinson. From the early twentieth century American water color exhibition circulated by the American Federation of Arts

Print shows range from surveys of American print-making to Chinese woodcuts. There are several exhibits circulated in conjunction with the American Institute of Graphic Arts, including the "Fifty Books of the Year."

Matisse in Demand

NEW SHOWS scheduled include a group of prize winning designs and other drawings for the modern monument to be erected by the Jefferson Memorial Association in St. Louis commemorating the Louisiana Purchase; nineteenth century French paintings from the Art Institute of Chicago; paintings by the American realist, John Sloan; by the progressives Max Weber, Marsden Hartley, Abraham Rattner, Milton Avery, and Karl Knaths. An unusual and distinguished water color show is offered from Columbus, Ohio—early twentieth century examples by Charles Demuth, Preston Dickinson, John Marin and Charles Sheeler, from the famous Howald collection.

Newest booking, and biggest demand, is for a group of drawings by the French artist, Henri Matisse, from the painter's own collection and shown for the first time in this country at the big Matisse exhibit in the Philadelphia Museum.

Much planning and labor go into the traveling show program. All exhibits are listed with details concerning footage and poundage. Arrangements for insurance and for shipping, requiring bookings that make practical sense geographically, offer endless complications. Rental fees for periods of three weeks represent a pro-ration of the federation's expenses for assembling, packing, routing, dispersing, and insurance. Exhibitors are required to defray railway express transportation charges for shipment to the next point of showing.

Work of Five Virginia Artists On Display at Charlottesville

FIVE Virginia artists, two of them closely identified with the art life of the District, are featured in a special show at the University of Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Charlottesville. John Gernand and Prentiss Taylor, both residing in Arlington, are the two from this section. Each is represented by several entries. Others whose works are shown are Greta Matson of Norfolk, Edmund Campbell and Charles Smith of Charlottesville.

John Gernand's lyrical landscapes and still lifes are personal and unmistakable. Prentiss Taylor, an experienced and able print-maker, has in recent years devoted much of his time to painting. Smith, it will be recalled, is an abstractionist who worked and taught in New England for several years before moving to the South. . . . . . .

The exhibit of regional painting brings out the wide diversity of style and approach among contemporaries. Open daily from 3:30 to 8:30 p. m., it will continue on view through July. Martin B. Hiden, jr., is in charge of the show.

The Watkins Gallery of American University is exhibiting paintings by Jack Tworkow through July. Tworkow, who comes here from New York, is teaching for the first time at the university's summer session.

Also shown at American University during July are a selection of paintings from the Watkins Memorial Collection and work by associates of American University's Department of Fine Arts.

The Central Branch of the District Public Library is showing water colors by Margaret Hill, to July 31.

Spaniards Argue Over New Painting of Christ

By Jose Torres

MADRID, July 10 (AP).—A painting of Christ on the Cross, very different from the accepted ways of portraying the scene, is causing a hot controversy in art and religious circles.

Benito Prieto's oil is one of 380 entered in the national art show It is his first entry for the highest art honors in Spain. Right now his work is the first topic of conversation wherever artists gather.

Cardinal Parrado, the Archbishop of Granada, saw and approved the first sketches. Other high clergymen have said the painting is a horror.

Prieto strayed far off the usual path. His painting presents a Christ almost broken on a rough, crude twisted cross. The block that supports the body is not hidden. The legs are pulled around it and crossed.

The Christ is tied with ropes at the wrists and ankles. The figure has no face except for the nose and a shadow of beard. The right shoulder has been pulled out of its socket.

Tells a Tale

PRIETO says he conceived the idea for his painting many years ago. He spent three years preparing 300 sketches. He spent long hours in research. Then, he said, he studied at least six corpses, some of which he hoisted on crosses. But he did not think that was enough. This is the tale he tells:

"One night I went out in search of some men of evil. Hate and evil are with us all the time. I was searching for a soul able to feel the hate, the rancor vented on Our Lord. I found such men. I locked myself up with them in a disreputable dive and plied them with wine.

"The worst in them began to come out. I told them about murder and death and asked them what they would do to someone who had caused them great harm . . ."

This is Benito Prieto's much talked-of painting of Christ on the Cross

"I took them to a corpse tied to a beam and incited them to vent their hateful instincts on the dead body. I understood then how deep hate can go. I felt and heard an arm snapped from its shoulder socket—the one seen in my painting—and I saw that one can go beyond mere physical suffering. And I painted, feverishly."

Emotional Shock

JOSE FRANCES, secretary of the Royal Academy of Art, said the painting gave him a deep emotional shock.

"If I were to choose between the cold serene Christ of Velazquez and the tortured Christ by Mathias Grunewald, and this, I would keep this," he said.

But Salvador Munez Iglesias, a presbyter who teaches Bible lore, said: "It is really horrible."

This critic thinks Prieto's Christ is not one to arouse piety and says he would not place it in a church for the veneration of the faithful.

But, he adds, "If I had money, I would use it as a magnificent spot composition for my meditations on the sufferings of Jesus."

Prieto is now a figure in Spanish art circles. Friends are urging him to take the painting abroad for exhibition at Latin-American expositions.

Library Completed

A Latter-Day Record Of Courts and Press

THE PRESS AND THE CONSTITUTION, By J. Edward Gerald, University of Minnesota Press.

CONGRESS and the courts have had a great deal to say about freedom of the press in the last 16 years. This excellent book covers this eventful period in a most comprehensive way. It deals with legislation by cities, States and Congress and with judicial interpretation put upon such legislation.

Zechariah Chafee's excellent work on freedom of speech covers most adequately the preceding years. This book extends the record up to the current year. Together, these two works make up a library on press freedom indispensable to the understanding of free speech in our society. It will be a fortunate thing indeed if Mr. Gerald periodically brings up to date the record he has covered in this volume.

Relevant Material

THE chapter on contempt is particularly illuminating. It will come conveniently to hand for the newspaper groups now fighting the restraints upon court coverage in Maryland. Gerald wryly notes a tendency of the courts to "favor the needs of a friend over those of a stranger." He observes that "the courts have found it easier to limit the freedom of the press than to accommodate themselves to its pressures."

The development of the "clear and present danger" test in newspaper contempt cases, in the Bridges and Miami Herald opinions of the United States Supreme Court, is carefully detailed by Gerald.

He has his own piece of advice for courts and press, as they struggle to reconcile the constitutional guarantee of a free press and the equally binding guarantee of a free trial. He says:

"The press and the courts are coholders of both freedom and responsibility under the American Constitution. The relationship that should exist between them cannot be achieved by a schoolmasterish attitude on the part of the judges or a tutorial attitude on the part of the press. Neither freedom of the press nor fair and orderly judicial process need suffer in the accommodation of these rights and privileges to each other."

Evolutionary Process

IN DISCUSSING labor's freedom to picket, Gerald takes up an aspect of free speech not ordinarily brought within the purview of such studies. He traces development of free speech rights in labor disputes from the days when picketing was frequently enjoined by courts through the Norris-LaGuardia ban on Federal injunctions, and on into the Wage and Hour Act controversies and the later decisions broadening the free speech rights of employers.

A chapter on the press under the National Recovery Act details the fight over licensing and enforcement of wage and hour provisions on newspapers.

The taxing power and the press are discussed in a chapter which describes court opinions staking out the limits of municipal and State taxing powers over newspapers.

The Supreme Court opinion requiring the Associated Press to open up its ranks to membership applicants is rather sympathetically treated by Gerald. More careful note might have been taken of the extent to which the opinion may diminish competition between newspapers.

"Devious Ways of Censorship" are cited by Gerald in a chapter taking up many sorts of press regulation, including postal laws, municipal licenses, restraints on harmful publication, bans on free distribution of literature, prohibition of some sorts of advertising, censorship of political activity.

This is definitely a book by Mr. Gerald and not a book about his opinions. It is a careful, scholarly and well-documented account of the progress of press freedom from 1931 to 1947. Everyone engaged in enterprises of communication will want it at hand. All who seek an understanding of the present extent and limits on the rights of free expression will wish to consult it.

First-Hand Stuff

VERN HAUGLAND collected the material for "The AAF Against Japan" while he covered the American Air Forces' operations in the Pacific for the Associated Press. Twice awarded the Headliners Club Medal of Valor, he was also honored with the Silver Star for his harrowing 42 days in the New Guinea jungle, to which he parachuted from a damaged plane. Born in Litchfield, Minn., in 1908, he studied at the University of Washington, was graduated from Montana State University, worked on some Montana papers and joined AP's Salt Lake City bureau in 1936. After working in Boise and Los Angeles, he volunteered to report the war, and a month after Pearl Harbor he was on his way to Australia. He wrote this book with the aid of a $2500 Air Power League fellowship during a year's leave of absence. He is now in the AP's Washington bureau and lives at 2721 Terrace rd. se.

A Playwriting Analysis for Mature Minds

The Art of Dramatic Writing. By Lajos Egri Simon & Shuster. 308 pp. $3.

MOST textbooks on creative writing are an insult to the intelligence. They start with the conviction that the hopeful young dramatist or novelist is a semi-literate novitiate who wouldn't know Ibsen from an ibex or William Archer from Robin Hood.

It is, therefore, with profound relief that I read and reread the successive revised and enlarged editions of Lajos Egri's masterpiece, "The Art of Dramatic Writing."

I know nothing about Mr. Egri's plays. But if he follows the advice of his own textbook he could scarcely fail to write sound scripts.

Starting with the importance of the premise or theme of the play, he quickly proceeds to the bone structure: character. Most plays and novels fail because the author knows far too little about each character and nothing at all about how this character will develop under the stresses and strains of conflict.

As Mr. Egri points out, one must know the physiology, sociology and psychology of every character, from such seemingly unimportant facts as height, health and color of eyes, to the profound matters of family, neighborhood and economic environment. Actually a thick dossier of information is needed or the character will never have flesh and blood and sinew.

Plot will come naturally out of the action of these characters and cannot be superimposed upon them. For instance, there is never a moment of uncertainty (though the inevitable is sometimes surprising) in the relationship between Nora and Helmer in Ibsen's "A Doll's House." Given these fully realized characters, their struggle was foreordained.

I think that Gilbert Miller is going a bit too far when he compares this book to such milestones in other fields as Veblen's "Theory of the Leisure Class." After all, there have been but a handful of minds in all history in a class with Veblen's.—S. N.

Folger Rates A Chapter in Bard 'Survey'

SHAKESPEARE SURVEY, 1. Allardyce Nicoll, editor. Macmillan. 144 pp. Ill. $3.75.

THIS handsome quarto volume begins a series of annual surveys of Shakespearean discovery, history, criticism and production in all parts of the world.

It is sponsored jointly by the University of Birmingham, the Shakespeare Memorial Theater and the Shakespeare Birthplace Trust in England.

The present number opens with a review of studies in the Elizabethan Stage since 1900 by Allardyce Nicoll, editor of the Survey, in which due credit is given to discoveries of preceding generations and the great gaps in our knowledge today are indicated.

Prominent in space and illustration is an article on the Folger Shakespeare Library by Dr. James G. McManaway of the library.

The story of Henry Clay Folger and his wife, for nearly 50 years assiduously collecting and storing away in packing boxes their books, reluctant to spend the money to build a library in their own home, will always be an amazing one.

The usefulness of such a review is so obvious that it is a wonder it was not started before now.—L. G.

A Story of Economic Warfare

Our High Stakes Game With Franco

By Donald Hiss

THE SPANISH STORY, by Herbert Feis. Alfred K. Knopf. 265 pp.

ONE of the fortunate, positive aftermaths of World War II is this fascinating narrative of the day-to-day relations between the Anglo-American Allies and Franco Spain during the war in Europe.

Dr. Feis is well equipped for the task. From 1931 to 1944 he served with unusual distinction in the State Department as the economic adviser, and he acted as chairman of the Iberian Peninsula Operating Committee throughout its existence. IPOC was an interdepartmental committee which met in Washington, and representatives of the British Embassy participated as observers.

The Spanish Story begins with the spring of 1939, after Franco's hasty recognition by the United States. Immediately thereafter Spain filed an application for a credit from the Import-Export Bank for the purchase of cotton.

There was appreciable opposition among the American public to Franco as a person and as a symbol of Nazi and Fascist intervention. Moreover, Franco's attitude of disdain toward the United States, as manifested by Spain's institution of an "irritating lawsuit" for the return of silver purchased by our Treasury from the Loyalist government in 1938, added further objections to the loan application.

Just as these objections were overcome, another developed. American business interests which had hardly been hostile to Franco during the civil war, were encountering increasing difficulties in the operation of their firms in Spain.

While the loan agreement was ultimately signed, final approval was given only after considerable backing and filling. And relations between the two countries continued in that manner until the defeat of Germany. As a matter of fact they still continue in this vein, in view of the resolution of the U. N. Assembly condemning Franco.

In essence, "The Spanish Story" is a thrilling tale of the opening and closing of the oil pipeline from this hemisphere to the Iberian Peninsula during World War II, told with not the slightest attempt by the author to justify the policy decisions of the IPOC over which he presided.

American control of oil supplies was indeed an ace in this card game, but at times it appeared to the Allies that Spain held far superior cards. With the fall of France in 1940, even Chamberlain gave up hope of saving Gibraltar, the plum openly coveted by Franco. It has now been established from official documents of the German government, however, that Spain remained throughout the war dependent on the United States for petroleum products.

This volume will not add fuel to the absurd fire which developed a few months ago in Congress and resulted in the House's adding Spain as a recipient country under ECA. Unemotionally, but with devastating effect, Dr. Feis relates instance after instance of chicanery and dishonesty on the part of Franco and his colleagues.

Guesses Panned Out

DR. FEIS limits himself to the Spanish case. He makes no pretense to sweep the cosmos and arrive at a formula as to the price and value of economic warfare generally. In retrospect, however, the members of the IPOC seem to have tasted what Justice Holmes considered one of the real joys of life—to make adequate guesses on inadequate data.

Gibraltar remained in the hands of the British; Germany's supplies of wolfram and tungsten remained tight throughout the war; and Spain was lured by United States dollars and oil to respond to the preclusive purchase program of the Allies.

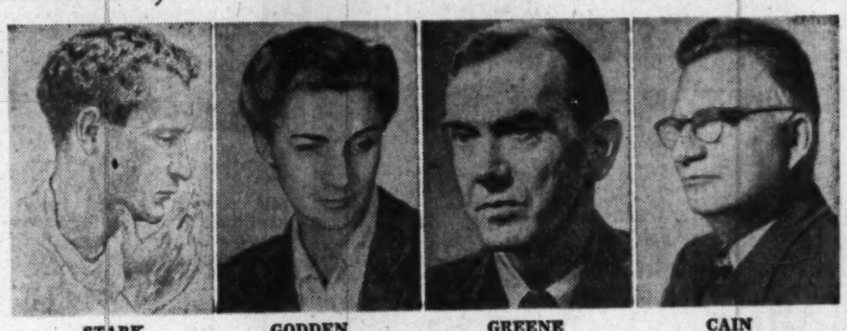
Early in 1942, when rumors of an imminent Spanish attack on Gibraltar were rife, the late Ambassador Winant returned from London to Washington for consultation. He attended one of the regular weekly conferences which Assistant Secretary Acheson held with his associates and assistants in charge of the economic warfare program.

Dr. Feis was present and Mr. Acheson explained the former's function as chairman of IPOC, ending the explanation with the statement: "Herbert Feis is the Lord Wellington of World War II; he is in charge of the Iberian Peninsula campaign." In his shy and enchanting manner the Ambassador replied: "Notwithstanding the regard I have for his ability, I would still prefer to have Wellington leading the Iberian campaign today."

Undoubtedly, a Wellington-led army in the Iberian Peninsula would have shown greater accomplishments than IPOC can claim. But not even a Wellington could have equaled the accomplishment of Dr. Feis in writing such a skilled narrative as The Spanish Story.

Week's Run of Novels Assays High

'Civilized Thriller,' and a 'Tender' Jim Cain



STARK GODDEN GREENE CAIN

By Sterling North

HOUSE BY THE SEA. By Jon Goddard Rhinehart. 271 pp. $2.75.

ONE of the strangest "love stories" ever written and one of the smoothest and most civilized thrillers comes this week from Jon Godden, a youthful English writer still comparatively unknown in this country.

Miss Godden has taken sharply contrasting ingredients and blended them into a poetic narrative which can make ice-water trickle along your spine.

The principal "characters" in this book are a pleasant but lonely little house on the Cornish coast, a childless middle-aged maiden lady, Edwina, who has purchased the place and a rather sinister, frightened American GI deserter who seeks refuge.

Long before the dog growls or the sound of knocking is heard at the door, the author has inspired in the reader a sense of terror difficult to analyze. Edwina has been protesting to herself how safe she feels, how much she loves all the objects of her snug retreat, how little she fears the sea, the fog, the cliffs and the isolation.

Mutual terror and mutual dependence make a strange bond between the young murderer and the gentle, middle-aged woman. The progress of this improbable "affair" is indicated by small, specific episodes, curious little acts of tenderness on the part of the woman and finally a gruff, reluctant acceptance of these acts by the soldier.

Aside from a very few slips, no misplaced word creeps in to mar the continuous and mounting tension of this psychological chiller.

THE MOTH. By James M. Cain. Knopf. 373 pp. $3.

JAMES M. CAIN, author of such hard-boiled, fast-moving stories as "Mildred Pierce" and "The Postman Always Rings Twice," never before has written a book like "The Moth." Some sense of security has given him the courage to reveal to his readers a tender, mellow facet of his personality.

Taken as a whole this could be called a sardonic success story. John Dillon, both angel and brat as the story opens, is a success as a curly-haired choir boy and juvenile vaudeville star, a success as a garage mechanic, a success as a college football player, a tolerably "successful" bum and petty criminal, a very successful soldier rising from the ranks to become a major during the invasion of Normandy, and finally a successful promoter of frozen foods in the postwar world.

Lucky in most other things, he is, however, more or less unlucky in love (running the casual gamut of seductive females usual to Cain novels) until the inevitable clinch with Helen in the final chapter.

"The Moth" is in many ways Cain's most ambitious novel. It attempts to cover significant episodes and trends in American life from the Atlantic to the Pacific during the three decades bracketing two World Wars. It delves into high school and college life of the 1920s, the world of music in Baltimore, the '29 boom and crash, the life of the bindlestiffs during the depression, and particularly the tough and romantic oil industry in California where a gusher can make you or a big fire break you.

But because this narrative tries to bridge so wide a stream it needs more structural strength than its engineer has been able to furnish.

THE HEART OF THE MATTER. By Graham Greene. Viking. 306 pp. $3.

THE new Graham Greene novel (current Book-of-the-Month Club selection) is launched this week with such an avalanche of superlatives from British, French and American critics that the reader's first impulse is to say, "It can't be that good." In this instance the skeptical reader is in error. This is one of the best novels in many months.

No one has ever been bored reading a story by Graham Greene. But only a few of his devotees could have predicted a novel of the richness, scope and solidity of "The Heart of the Matter."

Set in Conradian fashion in a decaying British colony on the west coast of Africa where heat, humidity, insects, alcohol and boredom constitute the real "white man's burden," Greene's story immediately establishes a mood of foreboding and imminent tragedy.

Major Scobie, an "incorruptible" police official, is no longer in love with his nagging, childish wife, who desires a jaunt to South Africa.

Shortly after his wife has left, the survivors of a boat sunk by the Germans (this is during World War II) are brought ashore. Scobie's inexhaustible pity encompasses a little boy who dies and a girl of 19 who finally becomes his mistress.

And when his wife returns the ultimate shape of the tragedy is rapidly revealed.

Superbly told though it is, this story might have been merely another equatorial novel had it not been for the fact that Greene, like his major character Scobie, is a deeply religious man.

None of this, however, reads like a religious tract or an essay in abstract ethics. It is written with the same skill as Greene's lesser "entertainments" and achieves wonderfully fashioned minor characters, tugging suspense and narrative pace.

THE INVISIBLE ISLAND. By Irwin Stark. Viking. 377 pp. $3.

IT IS the fate of first novelists that they should achieve their first adolescence and approaching maturity in a goldfish bowl. From Jean Jacques Rousseau to Tom Wolfe the tendency to confess and explate in public has accelerated until the sated and shock-proofed reader sometimes wonders what there is left to confess.

But it is probably the privilege of youth to be amazed at the miracle of self. So Irwin Stark, a young New York school teacher, writes about a young New York school teacher. Being a budding writer he makes his hero also a budding writer. Being a young liberal his makes his protagonist a young liberal. Then he appends the usual affidavit that all his characters are imaginary.

Stark is at his best when he deals in forthright fashion with the tough, disillusioning life of the lower East Side, and with the even tougher and more disillusioning pattern of existence in Harlem where Matthew Stratton is shown teaching in 1943.

The author is at his worst in the self-analytical passages which seem as endless as they are pointless.

Stark does a workmanlike job in depicting the cheap political appointee who is principal of the high school, and his incompetent first assistant. He is even more successful in etching with acid the detective who bullies the scholars and is finally shot by one of them. But all of the author's triumphs are brief, being more vivid flashes in long passages of rhetoric and callow contemplation.

The Magazine Rack

By Katharine Graham

BEVERLY SMITH follows up his preconvention piece on Republican antics with another and even livelier one, "The Democrats Went Crazy First."

They started the whole thing, Smith charges in the Saturday Evening Post, way back in 1832. And the Democrats excel not only in length of service but in peculiar customs, grandeurs and follies. It has been charged that they drink more, but after consultation with those old convention hands, H. L. Mencken and Frank Kent, Smith reports it isn't true. They only seem to drink more.

"The Democrats once saw their chairman, lurching as he swung his gavel, miss the table and conk the speaker below squarely on the dome. They once mistakenly started a presidential demonstration for a deceased British novelist. And the destiny of their party—perhaps even of their country and the world—in 1932 hung by a thread while one delegate wavered back and forth in his allegiance, like a slow metronome, according to variations in his firewater ration."

With all its faults, Smith concludes on a serious note, the convention in some mysterious way has achieved a fairly high level in human leadership, over the years. It may be Divine benevolence that has taken care of the United States along with drunkards and little children, he concedes, but to date no one has come forward with a better way to pick Presidents.

Elsewhere in the Post, Mr. Ickes recollects events leading up to the third term nomination. He casts a considerably more favorable light on President Roosevelt and a less favorable one on Mr. Farley than that found in Mr. Farley's recent memoirs.

NOTHING, just nothing, has been omitted from the current Life. It goes even further than usual, in a refined way of course, to include several pictures of rather naked ladies, this time displaying summer lingerie. "New styles are pretty and cool," Life solemnly reports. As if to compensate, a few pages later Life runs a long and unbelievable report on happiness in America.

Eighteen men and women met for a weekend conference at the Westchester Country Club in Rye on the question, "What is the meaning of the third right asserted in the Declaration of Independence, the right to the pursuit of happiness?" Beatrice Gould, editor of the Ladies Home Journal, contributed the results of a survey conducted by her magazine showing that most people in the United States thought they were pretty happy. Despite this, the conference felt that there was a failure to achieve genuine happiness.

The Table ducked the ancient question on the nature of happiness with the vague statement that it was left to the individual and that the conference was concerned with "the working of a political right . . . in our modern society."

There are two distinguished news stories, at which the magazine is better than at philosophy: one on the Japanese earthquake by Carl Mydans, who happened to be in Fukui when it was destroyed, and another on Jugoslavia by a photographer and correspondent who were invited in to see for themselves a few weeks before Tito's split with the Cominform.

NOW that Princess Elizabeth is married, her younger sister, Margaret Rose, has suddenly become Britain's No. 1 item for public scrutiny. She is the subject of more interest than Commons, the Prime Minister and the hard-currency question, according to Collie Small, who describes the young lady's appearance, tastes and daily routine in Colliers. Another piece by Eleanour Harris relates the tests to which the long-suffering American Express Co. is put by its demanding public—an estimated 90 per cent of all traveling Americans. On occasion the company has witnessed a wedding, it often locates missing relatives and it once turned a ship around so that a sick passenger could see Mount Fujiyama from his window—and all for free to the customers.

"WE NEED not fight Russia," declares Barbara Ward, young foreign affairs editor of the Economist of London in Look. Unlike fascism, communism can survive without war, she argues. Nor does it glorify war as a means of ruling the earth. The best way to prevent war, then, is to make plain to the Russians that further expansion will lead to war, Miss Ward asserts. On the positive side, the democracies must "be as determined to create a society worthy of free men as are the Communists to create a collectivist hive."

FASHION magazines Vogue and Mademoiselle have filled their summer doldrum issues mostly with other matters. Besides some handsome pictures of New York in summer, Vogue contains a piece on opera addicts by W. H. Auden, on "Poise" by Rumer Godden, and on race track characters by the New Yorker's G. F. T. Ryall. Evelyn Waugh attacks the interviewing system in "Let My Pulse Alone."

Children are not necessarily "just little savages," says Margaret Mead in Mademoiselle. It's father who takes out his resentment against civilization by giving Junior an Indian suit and at the same time conveys to him the idea that growing up is no fun.

Piracy Sweeping Asiatic Coast

By The Associated Press

CANTON, CHINA, July 10—Pirates, smugglers, hijackers and black marketeers are flourishing in waters all the way from southern China up to Korea and Japan.

The seagoing Oriental criminal is an anachronism—a combination of Captain Kidd and the rumrunners and hijackers of American prohibition days. But, his tastes are more varied. He'll pirate anything from a boatload of rice to gold bullion. He'll smuggle anything from opium to people, as long as it brings a price.

Until recently, piracy was generally confined to the coast of China, where it has been unchecked for a thousand years. But the trade is now extending to the island-studded coast of Korea, which has ideal daylight hiding places for the thousands of boats sneaking up from as far south as Hongkong and Formosa.

The smuggling trade in the area where the Korean Peninsula divides the Japanese and Yellow Seas has become so profitable it has attracted armed hijackers. Many smugglers and their boats have just disappeared.

The Chinese pirate usually uses a junk armed with machineguns and perhaps light cannon. He lies in wait along a network of rivers which carry cargo and passengers to Canton, or he lurks in the bays and inlets on both sides of Hongkong to the southeast.

In these areas, river junks, towboats and motor vessels are attacked almost every day. Few escape looting. Some end up with dead and wounded, and many a Chinese has had to pay ransom to stay out of pirate hands.

PIRATES recently fought a two-day air, sea and land battle near Hongkong.

A junk full of thugs in the inshore waters 35 miles west of the city was about to board and loot a junk carrying rice when a police launch showed up. The pirates opened up with machineguns and headed for shore, making the beach under cover of the fire. The police radioed for help.

Before long a flying boat heavy with well-armed police roared to a landing on the river. Along a shore road came other cops in motor vans. Then for two days, on a villainous piece of real estate known as Tiger Hill, the pirates fought off the cops.

They finally escaped at night, leaving behind one wounded pirate—a woman!

The least violent of the pirates in the neighborhood work the rivers around Canton. They, too, have slit throats in their time, but now they are content to extort "protection" money from passing junks and river boats.

The worst of the buccaneers are said to hang out in notorious Bias Bay, 45 miles east of Hongkong. They call themselves the "navy" or the "marine corps" or the "united democratic army" of the Communists of south China.

To help flush them out, Chinese authorities have converted four American landing craft into small floating fortresses, each big enough to carry 100 soldiers, a small arsenal and two-way radio.

'Guaranteed' Delivery

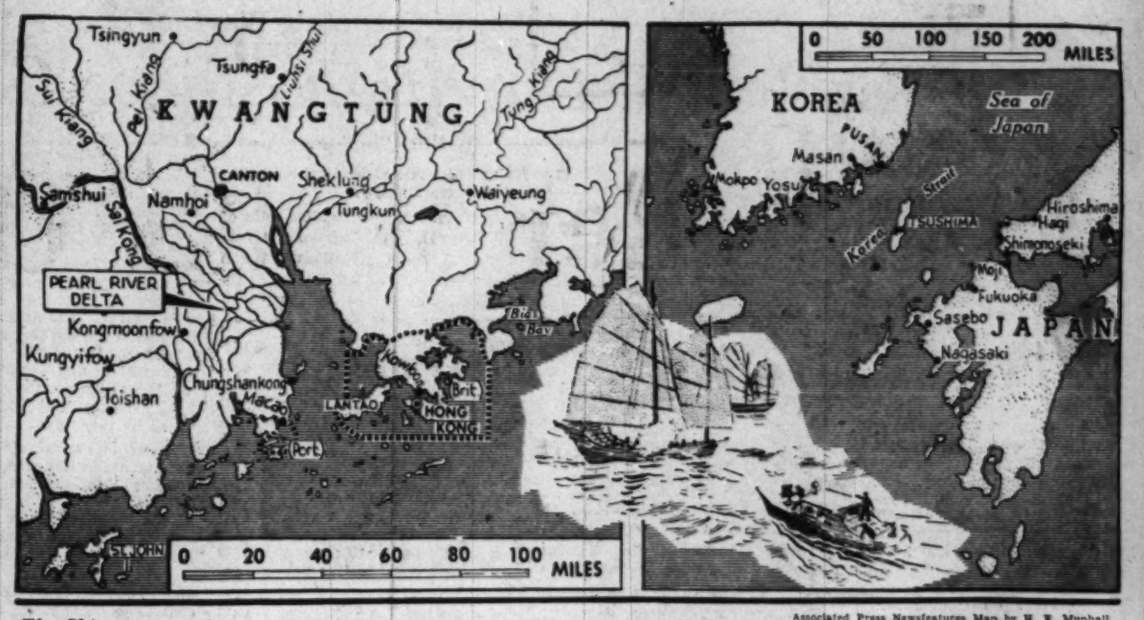
THE seagoing rackets also are increasing 1500 miles to the northeast, reports Frank L. White, Associated Press staff correspondent in Tokyo, who recently made an 18-day trip to south Korea and southern Japan. He talked to Allied authorities, local police, smugglers and their backers, black marketeers and people who travel without passports.

One Korean smuggler offered White a well-known American car, unobtainable at present in Tokyo and not too available in the States. He offered to deliver it at any spot in Japan for $10,000 American money. He said the car would come from China and guaranteed it would arrive in first class condition.

"Another smuggler I met in a darkened alley by appointment," says White, "guaranteed to deliver me on the coast of Japan in two days. I debated the matter, but decided the American authorities might not like that type of entry, even to prove it could be done.

"There was also the problem of keeping awake for 48 hours. Recently there have been tales in Korea that many who depart never arrive. The stories are that pirates searching for more valuable loot kill many to keep them from talking."

T. H. Ireland, a former Baltimore policeman, now CID agent of the Twenty-fourth United States Army Corps at Pusan, Korea, recently seized 100 pounds of smoking opium, valued at one million American dollars, right on the Pusan docks. The dope had come from China aboard a 200-foot vessel which was English registered and Chinese operated. The opium, in tin cans covered by a single layer of apples, was destined for the United States.



The China coast, and especially the Hongkong area inside the dotted line on the left-hand map, has always been a haunt of pirates, but now they're extending their operations all the way up to Japan and southern Korea, shown at right

Associated Press Newsfeatures Map by H. E. Munhall

ALSO increasing is the flood of Koreans who go illegally to Japan, where industry and trade offer them more chances of making a living. Japanese police and United States military government officials in southern Honshu arrest about 300 illegal immigrants a week; they expect the arrests to reach 1000 weekly by midsummer.

A high official at American headquarters in Tokyo estimated Japan now has as many as 500,000 unregistered Koreans. He said more than half the Koreans who attempt the trip succeed, at a price ranging from 10,000 yen to 50,000.

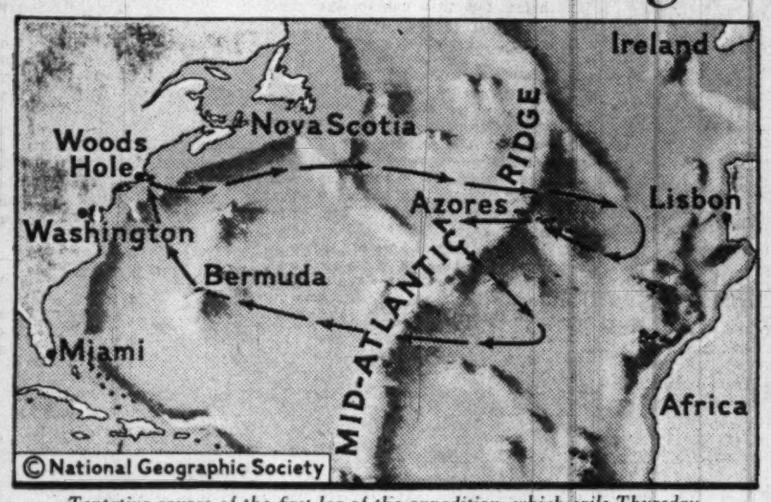
On return trips to Korea the smugglers carry textiles, electrical goods, household articles and machinery obtained from Japanese black markets. There also is heavy smuggling of American food, clothing, machinery, Army equipment and even huge road-grading machines and trucks.

Mostly these are stolen at the docks or from occupation warehouses. The trucks and machinery generally go to China for huge prices. Food, particularly Army 10-in-1 rations, usually finds its way to the Russian-controlled port of Dairen in Manchuria, where it is traded for salt and dried fish—scarce items in southern Korea.

In Seoul a United States staff officer said 20 per cent of all goods reaching south Korea under the occupation are stolen between dockside and distribution points.

In Pusan a Korean employed by the Army disappeared with a 2½-ton truck containing an air compressor unit used in quarrying or construction work. The truck was found three days later in a seaside village. It had been completely taken apart and readied for shipment to China. The driver said he was paid four million Korean yen for the truck.

Color Camera Taking 2-Mile Dive



Tentative course of the first leg of the expedition, which sails Thursday

SCIENCE is getting ready to try for a candid camera record in color of ocean life two miles deep.

Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, announced today that a scientific expedition will sail from Woods Hole, Mass., Thursday on the research ship Atlantis to study the mysteries of the Mid-Atlantic Ridge, the underwater range which stretches from Iceland almost to the Antarctic.

The expedition, headed by Dr. Maurice Ewing, is being sponsored jointly by the National Geographic Society, Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution and Columbia University, where Dr. Ewing is professor of geology.

Deep sea color photographs are only one item on the expedition's extensive program. It will also start mapping the sunken mountain chain, which is one of the world's last geographic frontiers, and marine biologists hope to bring up specimens of the creatures that populate the ocean's bottom.

Record of Millennium

TO GET clues to still-unknown phases of the world's geological history, the scientists will take "cores" of the sediment deposited along the steep mountain flanks and in the canyons. This sediment accumulates at the rate of about one inch each two thousand years, and Dr. Ewing aims to get 60-foot cores of it. That would provide him with a geological cross-section of some 1,440,000 years of the earth's history.

These cores are obtained at depths as great as three miles by a method somewhat similar to that used by a housewife in coring apples. A long tube is thrust into the sediment by its own weight on a free fall, and then hauled back. Scientists believe that such cores may give some hints to the world's geological future, as well as to its past.

Odds are stacked heavily against the expedition's plans for filming some of the secrets at the sea's bottom, but scientists feel they have perfected equipment which gives them a good chance of success. They hope to be able to get color pictures two miles or more down, and black-and-white pictures at even greater depths.

The expedition will use a special camera rig, developed by Dr. Ewing and his associates. The camera is in a water-tight metal housing and very powerful flashlight bulbs will be tried.

One difficulty is that the photographer must shoot blind, for he has no assurance that any marine life is in the path of his lens. The photographers will experiment with a variety of lures to coax ocean creatures into camera range.

The water is extremely clear at great depths, and pictures require only a slightly longer exposure than in daylight on the surface.

Candid photos of deep sea life are rated high by scientists, for they show ocean creatures in their normal condition, unimpaired by the changes in pressure, temperature, etc., which occur when they are brought to the surface for study.

Sediment Is Radioactive

THE EXPEDITION plans extensive trawling for deep sea specimens, however, and dredging for sediment, rocks and other material. An extremely interesting development in this line is that all of the deep sea sediment obtained by the Atlantis in an exploratory cruise last summer was radioactive to some degree.

Robert Sisson, National Geographic Society photographer, works on the flash-bulb assembly of the new deep-sea camera rig. In the foreground is the metal housing which will protect it at 2-mile depths

The S-shaped mountain range lies a mile or more beneath the Atlantic, with scattered peaks which break the surface as the Azores, Ascension and other islands. Complete mapping will take years, but scientists now have the advantage of echo-sounding equipment and techniques perfected in World War II.

Scientists differ as to the origin of the chain. Some hold that it came into being when the continents of the Western Hemisphere broke away from Europe and Africa in some primeval convulsion. Others believe that it may represent a pushing together rather than a separation of lands.

The expedition will be divided into two parts. For the first two months operations will be in the North Atlantic, ranging southward to the Azores. The second part of the cruise will take the Atlantis to mid-ocean off the western bulge of Africa and the northeastern bulge of South America.

The General's Gentle Voice Hides Temper

hold postwar elections, many months ahead of the other three occupation zones.

Brand of Caesar

THE BRITISH sometimes feel that Clay is domineering. A high British official here once said of Clay, after a hard bargaining session, that "he looks like a Roman emperor—and acts like one."

Some British correspondents also feel that he speaks too quickly and freely on important decisions.

Clay was the first high Allied official to admit Germans to his press conferences. He amazed Berlin reporters by his willingness to be questioned, his frankness, his sharp mind and fund of statistical information.

However, newspaper correspondents, as well as Clay's military government aides and his Army subordinates, have found that his soft voice and patient charm do not entirely hide a stubbornness and a capacity for occasional bursts of temper.

Clay is a strict disciplinarian with his staff. He has an alert mind with rapid grasp of essentials, and a penetrating intelligence frequently impatient with slower minds.

His relations with the other three military governors generally have been reported cordial. During the current crisis he confers with Robertson and the French deputy military governor, Gen. Roger Noiret, almost daily.

The American commander also generally has cordial personal relations with Sokolovsky. It is reported that when the Russian marshal made his angry walkout on the Allied Control Council March 20, which wrecked four-power government for Germany, he later called to assure Clay, "Sorry—but this is nothing personal."

Important Developments Due

Belgium Gets a Royal Runaround

By Anthony Tys
Associated Press Staff Writer

BRUSSELS, July 10.—Important developments in the Belgian "royal question" are expected soon.

Prime Minister Paul-Henri Spaak is doggedly pursuing confidential talks with King Leopold, virtually exiled in Switzerland, in an attempt to settle the issue.

Former Minister J. Albert De Vleeschauwer, chairman of the parliamentary group of the Christian Social Party (rightist Catholic), Leopold's strongest supporters, recently said that Prince Baudouin, heir-apparent to the throne, will take his seat in the Belgian Senate early in September when he becomes 18. Under the Belgian constitution, royal princes are entitled to sit as senators when they are 18.

To do this, Prince Baudouin would have to leave his father's residence.

No Legal Bar

KING LEOPOLD of the Belgians (constitutionally he is sovereign not of the country, but of the people, and by their will) is in a curious legal position. He is not deposed; he just does not reign at the moment. He is not in exile; theoretically there is no law to prevent him, as a private person, from coming home to Brussels.

The regent of the kingdom is Prince Charles, the late King Albert's second son, two years younger than Leopold. The regency was proclaimed while Leopold was a prisoner of the Germans.

Not a voice was raised in protest when Prince Charles was proclaimed regent by Parliament September 20, 1944, but when the Allied forces penetrated Austria and liberated Leopold, the deep cleavage was revealed in Belgian opinion on the subject of the King's return.

This cleavage is both political and territorial. The Socialists, with Communists and a majority of the Liberal Party, are against Leopold's return. The Christian Social Party, formerly called the Catholic Party and representing the right wing in Parliament, wants him back.

Geographically, there appear to be more supporters of Leopold in the Flemish region of Belgium than in the Walloon (or French-speaking) part of the country.

The immediate difficulty has been shelved by a law saying that, as Parliament is the only authority competent to declare a regency, it remains for Parliament to make an end of it.

Disagree on Powers

WHILE there have been accusations against Leopold that he has shown himself a "reactionary" and a "pro-German," Spaak's statement that the conflict is based on political grounds entirely and that the King's honor never has been tarnished, has done much to clear the air.

Spaak's declaration in Parliament was held essential by the King. Leopold's opinion is that there could be no useful purpose in any negotiations if he were officially considered a traitor.

The root of the matter is a fundamental difference between Leopold and his Ministers as to the extent of the King's constitutional prerogatives.

In 1939 there was disagreement between him and the Cabinet on the conduct of the war. During the "18 days' campaign," between May 10, 1940, when Belgium was invaded, and May 28, when the army capitulated, there were misunderstandings between the King and his Ministers, apparently due in part to misinformation on both sides and a reluctance on the part of the military, including the King, to communicate strategic plans to the politicians.

The differences were emphasized when the Belgian army surrendered. The King decided his honor required him to remain with the army. The government urged im to flee and continue the war effort from another country.

Contrary to Law

ANOTHER matter of private nature has had a far-reaching psychological effect. That was Leopold's morganatic marriage to Miss Lilian Mary Baels, daughter of a Belgian industrialist. Leopold gave his bride, who was born in 1917, the title of Princess De Rethy.

The bride's father had been a cabinet minister and a provincial governor. His personality has caused comment in some quarters. Further, the marriage was celebrated religiously in September, 1941, and registered civilly some three months later. This was against the law of Belgium, where no marriage may be celebrated before it has been registered publicly.

At that time Leopold was a widower. The King's supporters argue he had a right to marry again and to give his children a normal home. But opponents point out that the royal prisoner of war took to himself opportunities from which other Belgian prisoners in German POW camps were barred.

This has no direct bearing on the King's constitutional position, but unspoken arguments sometimes are most effective.

Meanwhile, Spaak continues his attempts to find some solution which will be generally acceptable. The return to Belgium of Prince Baudouin, establishing contact between Belgium's future King and the people, could be beneficial.

Leopold has renounced, on behalf of Princess De Rethy's issue, all claims to the Belgian throne. Prince Alexander, born July 19, 1942, is therefore Prince De Rethy, not Prince of Belgium like other members of the royal family.

Soviet Backs Chief Wamba

U. N. Ponders Loss of a Kingdom

By Peter Kihss

LAKE SUCCESS, July 10.—Chief Paul Wamba Kudililwa has lost his throne, but Chief Wamba has won himself a little place in history. For Chief Wamba was the first king ever to apply to the United Nations to get back his throne.

Today Chief Wamba remains minus his throne. The U. N. Trusteeship Council, which heard his case, found only one supporter for him. The Soviet Union alone thought Chief Wamba should have his case investigated by a U. N. mission.

Chief Wamba was a small king. He ruled over some 16,000 people in the Lake Province of Tanganyika. J. E. S. Lamb, British political liaison officer for that trust territory and once commissioner for Chief Wamba's district, told the Council:

"It is one of those unfortunate cases that do occur. He was regarded by us, in his younger days, as a very promising chief indeed. He was well educated and the sort of a man whom we thought we could use a great deal in educating his people.

"Unfortunately, he suffered from a defect which appears to have been a family complaint. His immediate predecessor lost office, in the days of the Germans, because of embezzlement, and this chief, on no less than three occasions, embezzled funds belonging to the native administration. On two occasions, a lenient view was taken of it because of his record, but when the third time came, it was decided that more drastic action had to be taken."

THAT wasn't quite the way Chief Wamba saw it. Writing from a place called Buchosa Uzinza, Chief Wamba said he'd carried out his duties as chief satisfactorily for 26 years. He put it:

"My being dethroned was due to the hatred between the district commissioner, Mr. C. MacPherson, whom I told to return the money he used from our treasury without any just. After I had demanded the money he was against me and said that I was not trustful to the government and that I should be dethroned.

"He was successful and put another chief in my place in spite of people's discontentment and those who tried to show their unwillingness were caught and put in custody for five days without food until they agreed to be under the new chief."

Chief Wamba said the district commissioners "ordered me to go around my country for three months without returning home even for a single day"—looking over the millet, manioc (cassava) and yam crops. He said the commissioner told him to finance himself from war subscriptions, and he did so; but on his return, the district commissioner forced him to return the money he had spent on tour.

And, finally, he related, a man named Gugu was given his job. "After the new chief had ascended the throne," the petition went on, "the district commissioner gave an order that the doors of my house should be broken, which was done. Also that all my things should be taken out, which was complied with, and made Gugu take over and stay in my house."

Britain's formal reply said Chief Wamba had been removed following an August, 1941, report that "he had been guilty of converting to his own use both the proceeds of fines imposed by the Shinyanga native court and voluntary contributions which had been paid to him for the local war fund."

The British rejected Chief Wamba's accusations against the district commissioner as without foundation. They reported that "Mr. Wamba is an extremely enlightened and intelligent man, who, apart from his periodic financial lapses, had performed valuable services." But now, they said, the tribal elders had unanimously elected his successor—grandson of a former chief.

Council delegates generally took the view, stated by Victorio Carpio of the Philippines, that it was primarily "a matter of local administrative character." Only Semen K. Tsarapkin of the Soviet Union argued that the council's mission to Tanganyika this summer should look into the complaint, arguing that "to have faith invariably in the administering authority . . . would mean that we almost always will leave the petitioner without redress."

But the British weren't too hard on Chief Wamba. Mr. Lamb reported: "They decided to give him a pension for the rest of his life, and they gave him an area of land for cultivation in another chiefdom in the district. Therefore he is not, by any means, left destitute."

Justice Still Isn't Pushing For High Spot

times suffered silently while the New Deal went up alleys he considered better left untraveled, his talents have been broadly recognized outside of New Deal circles. In 1942 the Saturday Evening Post appraised him "one of the most brilliant minds enlisted by the New Deal, and perhaps the most deadly and efficient administrator it has produced."

"He possesses a genius for accurate diagnosis," the magazine found, "an unerring instinct for feeling out the adversary's soft spot, and a natural sense for timing the payoff punch. He is an excellent justice and a contented one, but some observers feel that at least half of his talents are lying idle. His political attractiveness has been heightened by a distaste for the pushing tactics which other men of his age have exhibited in reaching for the juicier gifts of the voters."

Tall, angular, lean and looking sometimes like a friendly cowhand, Justice Douglas no longer is a young man; he will be 50 in October. The six years which have intervened since the Saturday Evening Post examined him, however, have left him just as averse to "pushing" for political reward as he was in 1942.

When this reporter tried to reach him last week, he found that the Justice was at his usual summer retreat—his fishing cabin in the Wallowa Mountains near LaGrande, Oreg., where he could be reached on horseback but not by telephone.

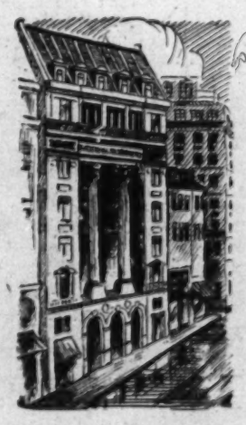
BE FRANK WITH YOURSELF



Even your best laid plans can go tragically awry. So why leave your family's financial future to unpredictable chance—when a trust fund may make it secure.

When you establish a trust fund at your bank, you thereby set aside certain capital which the bank, as trustee, can keep profitably invested; and the income derived from that capital is paid by the bank to the beneficiary you name. A trust fund can mean, for your family, an assured income from securely invested capital—even should they suddenly be deprived of your support.

Come in soon and let us explain in detail how a trust fund will protect YOUR family.

This bank was the FIRST national bank in the United States granted trust powers under the Federal Reserve Act.

Bob Feller Walks Out on All-Star Game

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

THAT OUTBURST of name-calling between officials of the Browns and Yankees was halted very suddenly last week after the Browns accused the Yanks of being "pikers" in their bid for Pitcher Sam Zoldak . . . Commissioner Chandler told both clubs to get back on their dignity and shut up . . . does the night trotting program at Laurel hurt baseball attendance at Griffith Stadium? The answer was "no" last Friday night when Laurel drew its biggest crowd of the meeting and the Nats drew their largest night crowd since May . . . Larry MacPhail, former manager of the Yankees, found himself with a losing ticket at Havre de Grace the other day. Driving away from the track, MacPhail had his car out of line and a State cop waved him down. "I'm Larry MacPhail," said MacPhail. The policeman, unimpressed, said "How do you do? My name's Smith and here's a ticket for you." . . . Joe Louis, who had intended to campaign for Eisenhower if the general was nominated by the Democrats, shortly will announce his active support of Governor Dewey in the presidential election. Louis made several appearances in support of Dewey in the 1944 campaign . . . the National League All-Stars won't be weakened by the absence of lame-back Marty Marion, Cardinals' shortstop. His replacement will be Eddie Miller of the Phillies, who has been a better shortstop than Marion for the last couple of seasons, and always was a more dangerous hitter.

POVICH

IKE WILLIAMS' defense of his world lightweight title against Beau Jack at Philadelphia on Monday night will be televised as well as broadcast . . . major league club owners are panicked at the idea that ball players will demand a cut of the television receipts after the example of the fighters who insisted and are getting a cut from the video money . . . after refusing to charge advertisers for television rights so their games could be made available to more viedo fans, the Red Sox in an about-face have scheduled afternoon-night doubleheaders with separate admissions charged . . . Maryland U. coaches report that the days of football de-emphasis at the University of Pittsburgh are apparently at an end. They report Pitt scouts "in every neck of the West Virginia and Pennsylvania woods trying to get the same high school players we're after." . . . Bobby DeOrsey, son of the Redskins' legal eagle, Col. Leo DeOrsey, will take his basketball and baseball talents to Notre Dame where he will register as a freshman in September . . . the Nats have set some sort of a record for a sixth-place club and confounded the old adage that the second-division teams don't win the close wons. They've won 15 of their 23 games that were decided by a one-run margin . . . the United States women's amateur golf championship of 1893 was won by Miss Margaret Curtis who had only four clubs in her bag—brassie, cleek, mashie and putter . . . but more remarkable, she was only 13 years old.

AN ADVERTISER in the official scorecard of the Philadelphia Athletics is taking no great gamble in his offer of $500 to "the first player hitting four consecutive home runs at Shibe Park this year." It's been done only twice in any park since 1901—by Lou Gehrig and Chuck Klein . . . the undisguised hand of The Washington Touchdown Club was seen in the appointment of Dutch Bergman as $10,000-a-year manager of the Armory. Bergman is a former president of the Touchdowners. So is Len Walsh, head man of the Armory board . . . Elmer Madarik, veteran halfback of the Detroit Lions, owns one peculiar distinction. He once scored a touchdown on a forward pass he threw himself. Passing for Detroit U. in 1941, Madarik saw the ball deflected by a Central Michigan College player, scooped it up before it touched the ground, and ran it over the goal . . . Dick Welk, the kid pitcher to whom the Nats gave a $15,000 bonus in 1943, has been doing so well for Chattanooga he has been selected on the Southern Association All-Star team. He'll get another trial by the Nats in the fall . . . The United States Olympic Committee could take a bow by arbitrarily appointing Gil Dodds to the Olympic team despite the leg injury that kept him out of the qualifying trials, but it won't. They don't know how to un-stuff a shirt . . . The baseball Book of the Year is Milton Gross' "Yankee Doodles" which hits the Washington shops this week. It sparkles with tales of the New York Yankees.

BUCK NEWSOM'S workouts with the Yankees had the approval of Manager Bucky Harris but the disapproval of General Manager George Weiss, and that's why they stopped . . . the success of the Athletics against the Yankees and Red Sox this season is explained simply by Connie Mack who says, "they said at the start of the season that the Yanks and Boston were the teams to beat, so we've been beating 'em. . . . Clark Griffith recently called Gil Coan into his upstairs office and told him, sternly, to "lay off those high pitches they've been fooling you with." . . . Satchel Paige could always throw the ball hard but he didn't become a good pitcher until he found the one catcher who could hold his stuff, the late Josh Gibson, of the Homestead Grays . . . Walter Johnson once called Gibson "a better catcher than anybody I ever pitched to." . . . indignant subscribers write that Ted Williams got a bad deal in his comparison with Joe DiMaggio in this space last week, pointing out that while Williams in former seasons may have been lack-lustre in the outfield, he has a New Look and is hustling this year, and that is true . . . when the Nats traded Stan Spence to the Red Sox last winter for Al Kozar, Washington fans moaned that the Nats were giving up known hitting power for an unknown quantity . . . well, at this writing, Kozar is outhitting Spence by 19 points.

Mel Patton, Whitfield, Ewell Lead U. S. Team

By Ted Smits

Evanston, Ill., July 10 (AP).—Two mighty sprinters, Barney Ewell and Mel Patton, and a middle distance double winner, Mal Whitfield, won the right today to lead one of the strongest of All-American Olympic track teams to the games of the fourteenth Olympiad in London starting July 29.

A series of disasters, however, eliminated some of the greatest names of trackdom.

Charles Fonville, of Michigan, who has made 58 feet ¼ inch in the shot, almost a foot better than the world record, will be left behind, as will Gil Dodds, the peer of the milers.

Harrison Dillard, of Baldwin-Wallace, regarded as the best high hurdler in the world, qualified for the 100-meter dash, but quit in despair in the hurdle final.

OTHER OLYMPIC STORIES, SUMMARIES ON PAGE 4-C.

Dean Cromwell Pleased

Despite these blows, Head Coach Dean Cromwell was happy and confident. "We will win seven or eight firsts for sure," he said, and named a total of 14 events in which America has good chances.

Long-striding, Pel-Mel Patton from the University of Southern California won the 200 meter final by a yard from Ewell, the 31-year-old Penn State alumnus, to reverse the order of finish in yesterday's 100 meter dash. Thus both became double qualifiers and both showed performances in line with the great sprint traditions of the United States.

Patton won the 200 in 20.7, which equals the unofficial world record for the race around a curve. Ewell's 100 meter time was 10.2, which also equals the world mark.

In all, 33 places were filled in 11 final tryout events before a crowd of 20,000 in Dyche stadium, rounding out the team which comprises three athletes for each of 22 track and field events, plus two relay teams. The weather was hot and muggy, but the athletes performed with zeal.

Whitfield Real Contender

Whitfield, representing the Army and Air Force team and a student at Ohio State, was the only double winner, and his times were such as to brand him a contender at London regardless of the field assembled. He took the 800 meters in 1:50.6, and then 40 meters in 46.6. Both are the fastest times made by an American this year.

The three great casualties came from varying causes. Dodds had a pulled Achilles tendon and did not even compete. Fonville, who had a sore back, did 54 feet 1⅜ inches, and that was only good enough for fourth place, just outside the team. Dillard apparently couldn't hurdle today.

Among the marks that sparkled in the tryouts boding well for London were: Verne McGrew, Rice, and George Stanich, Los Angeles Athletic Club, 6 feet 8¼ inches in the high jump; Francis Delaney, San Francisco Olympic Club, 55 feet 1¾ inches in the shot put.

There was a mounting gasp as Harrison Dillard knocked down the second and fourth hurdles in the 110-meter hurdle finals, and then drew up helplessly in front of the seventh one, pushing it down with his hands as if he had no more strength for leaping.

Thus the man who had bettered the world record for the 120-yard high hurdles with 13.6, and who was regarded as a shoo-in at London, failed to make the team in his favorite event, although he is qualified for the 100-meter.

Back in 1928 when Lloyd Hahn qualified for the team in the 800 meters, but failed at 1500 meters, he was entered in the 1500 at Amsterdam—but following this the United States Olympic Committee decided never to send a man into an event for which he did not qualify. So Dillard apparently is out of the London hurdles.

William Porter of Northwestern won the high hurdles brilliantly by 2 yards in 13.9, with Craig Dixon of the University of California at Los Angeles second, and Clyde (Smackover) Scott of Arkansas third.

Another stunning upset came in the shot-put. There had been reports for the past two weeks of a sore back plaguing Charles Fonville, the tall, lithe shot-putter from the University of Michigan.

Fonville, counted on to achieve one of the greatest marks of any American at London, made what was for him a mediocre 53 feet

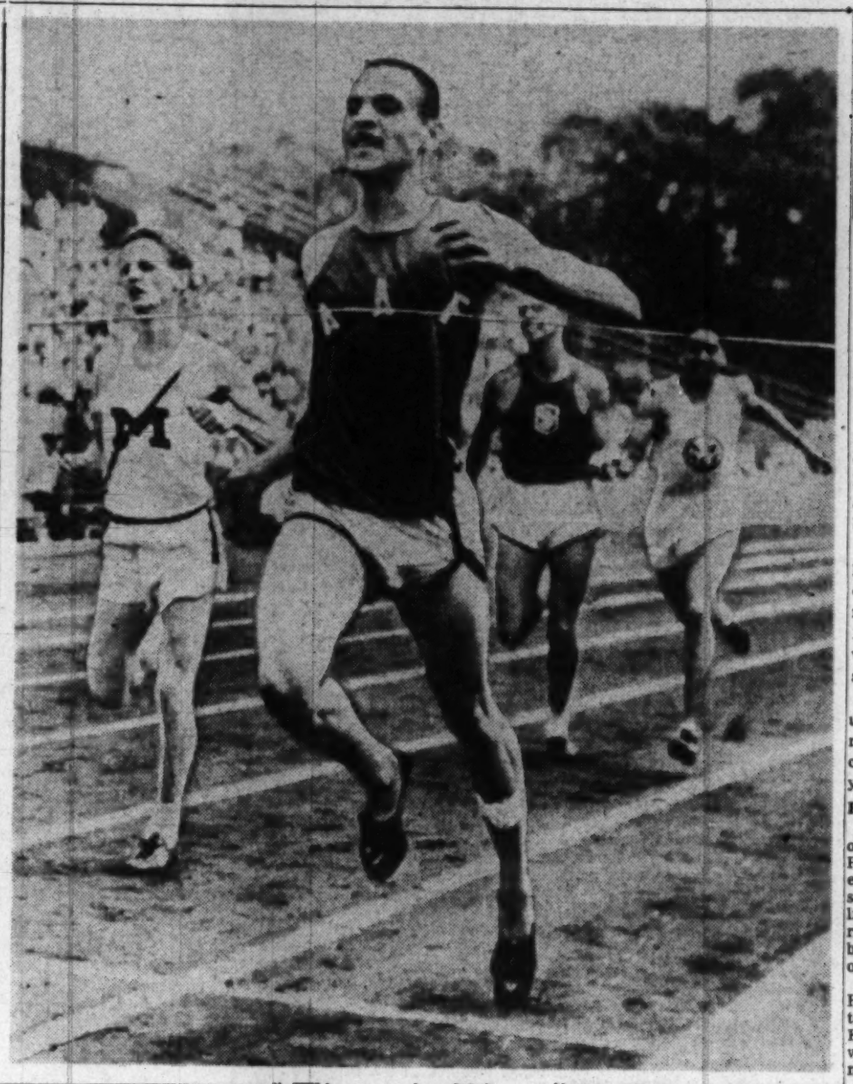
Falkenburg Ousted From Paris Tennis

Paris, July 10 (AP).—Marcel Bernard, French Davis Cupper, today eliminated Bob Falkenburg, Wimbledon tennis champion, from the Paris International Tourney, 6—2, 3—6, 6—2.

Bernard will meet another Californian, Budge Patty of Los Angeles, in the finals tomorrow. Patty had an easy time subduing France's Bernard Destremau, 6—1, 6—1. Falkenburg and Patty, however, combined to defeat Bernard Cochet in doubles, 2—6, 6—4.



Bill Voiselle Hurls Braves To 4-3 Victory

Boston, July 10 (AP).—Big Bill Voiselle hurled the top-place Boston Braves to a 4-3 win over the Phillies tonight before a 25,023 crowd. Shortstop Alvin Dark hit safely in his twenty-second consecutive game as the Braves strengthened their first-place National League lead.

Kramer Shuts Out Macks for Red Sox, 4 to 0

Philadelphia, July 10 (U.P.).—Shutout pitching by Jack Kramer and a pair of first inning home runs gave the Boston Red Sox a 4 to 0 decision over the second-place Philadelphia Athletics today before a ladies' day and knothole gang crowd of 24,795.

Kramer was touched for 10 hits, but was tight in the pinches and 12 Athletics were left on base. It was his ninth victory against three defeats.

Home runs by Vern Stephens and Bobby Doerr accounted for all of the Boston runs. With two out in the first, Wally Moses, playing in place of the injured Ted Williams, singled. Stan Spence walked and Stephens lodged his seventeenth homer of the year over the leftfield wall. Doerr fired one in the same stands and the scoring was over for the day.

Bill McCahan, on the shelf most of the season with a sore arm, started his fourth game for the A's. He walked 11 batters, but had the Sox popping up in the pinches after the first.

Williams, the league's top hitter, was benched with a slight rib injury.

Tenerant Wins at Ascot

Ascot, England, July 10 (U.P.).—Tenerant, a 2-to-1 favorite ridden by Jockey E. Camici and owned by F. Tesio of Italy, defeated Jockey Club Chairman William Woodworth's Black Tarquin by a neck today in the Queen Elizabeth Stakes.

In 10 Innings

Yost's Error Costly, Nats Beaten, 5-2

The Nats deserved a 2 to 1 decision over the Yankees yesterday, but they received instead a 10-inning defeat, 5 to 2.

Although Mickey Haefner was charged with the setback, the losing "pitcher" actually was Third Baseman Eddie Yost.

Yost uncorked a wild pitch on a ridiculously easy play in the seventh inning which gave the Yankees the run they needed to stay alive until the 10th when they broke loose with three runs to win.

Vic Raschi was the winning pitcher, registering his 10th success on a fancy seven-hitter. The five New York tallies came on a 12-hit yield by little Haefner, who was bumped for the ninth time this season.

Yost threw in one of the four unearned Yankee runs Friday night, but that bobble was tame compared to the error he made yesterday.

Rizzuto Whacks Triple

With the score locked at 1-1 and one away in the seventh, shortstop Phil Rizzuto unloaded his second extra-base hit of the afternoon, a solid triple down the left field foul line. Raschi followed with an easy roller to Yost, which the Nat third baseman gathered in on the fringe of the grass.

With plenty of time to throw out Rizzuto streaking home, Yost tossed 20 feet over Catcher Jake Early's head and Rizzuto was in with the run that he should never, never have scored.

The Nats overcame that handicap in their half of the same round when Eddie Stewart and Mickey Vernon singled in succession and Mark Christman grounded into a double play to score Stewart.

After that, however, Raschi had their number, facing only 11 more batters the rest of the way.

Until Yost's wild throw, Haefner was breezing along in fine fettle. He recovered from a shaky first inning which saw George Stirnweiss single, Tommy Henrich double and Johnny Lindell ground out to drive in the first Yankee marker.

Christman Still Hitting

The Nats got that run back in the second on a double by Christman, which enabled him to stretch his batting streak to nine games, and Early's single.

The winning Yankees tenth saw Haefner walk Raschi to open the inning. Stirnweiss and Henrich beat out bunts to load the sacks. Johnny Lindell partially unloaded them with a single which delivered two runs. Steve Souhock singled in the third and highly unnecessary New York tally.

In short—the Yankees are so short of outfielders that Catcher Larry Berra, who had a fling in the pastures, was restored to duty in the ninth after running for DiMaggio . . . The crowd of 9464 was one of the smallest to see the Yankees play anywhere this season . . . Coan was thrown out trying to steal second in the sixth. It was the sixth time he's been caught this year, but he's made it 13 other trips to lead the league in that department . . . For today's windup, the Yankees will try to sweep the set with Tommy Byrne pitching against Walter Masterson. MORRIS SIEGEL.

Harris Mad, Says Indians' Fastballer Has No Alibi

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Bobby Feller walked out on the 1948 major leagues' All-Star game yesterday.

Feller's decision not to play in Tuesday's contest in St. Louis evoked a scathing denunciation from American League Manager Bucky Harris of the New York Yankees.

"If I ever have the opportunity to handle another All-Star team I'll never pick Feller again." Harris said here yesterday as his Yankees beat the Nats. "He has absolutely no alibi for quitting.

"I doubt if it will ever happen, but if the All-Star game is ever discontinued, you can say Feller's action today precipitated it. Is he trying to crucify the game?"

Harris, who promptly announced Righthander Joe Dobson, of the Red Sox, would replace Feller, admitted he was "burned up" over Feller's action.

"He's Simply Ducking"

"I withhold no punches as far as Feller is concerned. He's simply ducking the game. He's a big star in baseball, but some stars shine brighter than others. Look at Joe DiMaggio. He's got two bad heels and a pair of swollen knees, but he'll be in St. Louis Tuesday, and if he can walk he'll play."

DiMaggio yesterday was out of the Yankees' starting lineup for the first time this season. His only appearance against the Nats came in the ninth inning when he stroked a pinch single.

In Cleveland, the Indians' office said Feller had suggested that he be replaced on the squad because he was scheduled to pitch against St. Louis today and would not be of any use to the All-Stars.

When Harris heard this, he said: "I hope the Browns touch him up good."

Let's Own Pals Down—Griff

President Clark Griffith of the Nats said Feller's walkout was not only a blow to the fans, but that he was also guilty of letting his fellow players down.

"Some of the proceeds from the All-Star game go to the ballplayers' pension fund," Griff said, "and Feller in reality is walking out on his pals.

"Feller's walkout won't hurt this year's game at the gate because it's already sold out, but if other big stars follow his lead the All-Star game will fold up.

"Feller is bound by contract to play. There's a clause in every player's contract that says he must participate in events like the All-Star game. It's a great honor to be chosen on the All-Star team and Feller is making a sad mistake by not realizing it."

Williams May Not Be Able to Play

Philadelphia, July 10. — Ted Williams sat out today's game between the Red Sox and Athletics because of a pulled cartilage in his side.

Red Sox officials said that the slugging leftfielder may play tomorrow but that "it is doubtful if he'll be able to play in the All-Star game Tuesday."

If Williams is out of the American League lineup, the game will be robbed of the batting duel between him and Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals, the National League's leading batter.

Newhouser Starts All-Star Game

Hal Newhouser of the Detroit Tigers will open for the American League All Stars against the National Leaguers in St. Louis Tuesday.

Newhouser will be followed by Bob Lemon of Cleveland. Either Walter Masterson of the Nats or Joe Coleman of the Athletics will succeed Lemon.

Quality Order of Day

Record 270 Entries Appear In Warrenton Breeding Show

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

Warrenton, Va., July 10.—Quality was the order of the day as 270 of the best breeding stock in the East paraded on an average of 30 to a class to make the Virginia Horsemen's Association Breeding Show one of the largest in these parts.

Topsfield, a Grafton Farm entry, won the featured hunter championship. The brown gelding, by imported Easton from Sun Fritters by imported Sun Briar, is owned by Mrs. A. C. Randolph of Upperville, Va.

Reserve honors went to Miss Whirl, a gray filly owned by Roger Bayly, jr., of Beaver Hill Farm, Purcellville, Va.

In the colorful racing division, championship honors went to Safeguard, owned by Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane of Brookmeade Farm, Upperville. Safeguard is a chestnut mare by Okapi from Guarded Queen by On Watch.

Prince James Wins at Laurel

Prince James, co-holder of the Laurel Raceway track record, won last night's $1000 feature before an estimated 12,000, but had to display plenty of speed to turn the trick in a battle with five other top horses.

The Prince's time for the mile pace was 2.08 2/5, slower than his 2.07 standard, but fast enough to get him home in front of Captain Eddie and Edgar Hanover.

Alan Myer, youngest of the five Delaware brothers, put on a top driving exhibition, capturing the last four races.

Betting broke all meet records. A total of $236,474 was wagered on the eight-race card with $36,743 handled on the feature.

The second feature, a mile and a sixteenth trot, with a $700 purse, went to Bonnie Scotland. Alan Myer, youngest of the five brothers, had the reins on the 13-year-old black gelding and handled the horse superbly to outphoto Darnelle Hanover, another long shot driven by Tom Wingate.

In Columbus Open

Schoux Shoots 64 to Take Lead Of 4 Strokes Over Alexander

Columbus, Ohio, July 10 (AP).—George Schoux of San Francisco breezed far ahead of the field at the halfway mark in the third annual Columbus Open tourney today.

The 29-year-old 140-pounder ripped rugged Wyandote's terrain apart with a startling 32, 32—64, added it to an opening 34, 32—66 for a 130 total, and settled back with a four-stroke edge going into tomorrow's 36-hole stretch drive.

Stewart (Skip) Alexander of Lexington, N. C., who paced the first round with 64, skidded to 70 today but clung to the second spot with 134.

Tied for third were Lloyd Mangrum and Johnny Bulla of Phoenix, who deadlocked at 135.

Ellsworth Vines, the reformed tennis kingpin, found out his second straight 68, and wheeled into the fourth spot with 136. Frankie Stranahan, Toledo's British and Canadian amateur champion, scored a four-under-par 67 today for 140.

Bill Nary of Phoenix also dropped into the 140 slot, he went out in 38 strokes, two over par, but came home in 29 blows, six under, for a course record on that half of the layout.

Tied at 138 were Al Smith of Winston-Salem, N. C., Dr. Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, Bobby Locke, the defending champion and pre-tourney favorite from South Africa, Herman Keiser, the former Masters champion from Akron, Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, N. C., Denny Shute of Akron, former PGA champ, and Jim Turnesa of Elmsford, N. Y.

Kansas Faces 'Big 7' Ban If 5 Athletes Are Played

Kansas City, July 10 (AP).—The Big Seven Conference faculty committee today gave the University of Kansas two weeks to retract its stand on league eligibility rules or face cancellation of all athletic events with member schools.

The decision came on a vote of 5 to 1, with only Kansas dissenting. It stated Kansas has until

Steele's Record Broad Jump Nullified by Foul

Evanston, Ill., July 10 (AP).—Willie Steele of San Diego State broad-jumped 26 feet 10 inches today in the final Olympic tryouts, but fouled the jump-off board by one quarter of an inch and thus lost an opportunity to set a world record.

The mighty leap aggravated a heel injury, and Head Olympic Coach Dean Cromwell advised him to make no more jumps. He had already made a legal jump of 26 feet 2 inches, easily qualifying him for a place on the team.

The world record for the broad jump is 26 feet 8¼ inches, set by Jesse Owens of the United States in 1935. Owens acted as one of the broad jump officials here.

Triple With 2 on in 8th Beats Bucs

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—Bill Nicholson, who homered to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday, came through again for the Chicago Cubs here today with a triple that came with two mates aboard in the eighth inning for a 4-2 victory.

Johnny Schmitz held the Bucs to two hits, a single and double by Clyde Kluttz, for his eighth win.

Extra base blows were the undoing of "Rip" Sewell. Bob Scheffing doubled and Roy Smalley tripled for one run in the fifth and then Andy Pafko, who bagged three of the Cubs' hits, pounded out his twelfth homer to deadlock the score in the sixth.

A Future Star at Seven . . .

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

ON THE MOUND—Eugene "Bucky" Brooks, all of 7 years old, is the youngest pitcher in his league, but he already has two no-hit games to his credit. "Bucky" pitches for Bailey's Crossroads, Va., in the Alexandria Boys Club Class C League. He looks tiny on the mound with most of his teammates almost twice his size but he has good speed and a smooth delivery. Pictures of "Bucky" were not still-posed. The camera was kept in one position and "Bucky" went right on pitching, making about 10 as this series was taken. From left to right: He watches runner on first base; he pivots and gets set; far back he rears, and there it is, strike three

'Pro' Kallas Out Of Ozark Game

Thanks to the shrewd eye of a professional baseball scout, 18-year-old Leonard "Spike" Bauroth is embarking on a "once-in-a-lifetime" adventure and Bill Kallas is the proud owner of an attractive baseball contract.

Kallas, former Eastern High School star who was recently sent to Van Buren, Ark., to represent Washington and the Police Boys Club in the annual Baseball Festival of the Ozarks, forfeited his amateur standing to sign with the Chicago Cubs. He thereby vacated his place in the tournament.

Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barret selected "Spike" Bauroth, former teammate of Kallas, who leaves for Arkansas this morning, as his replacement in the all-star series scheduled for July 16-18.

District Skippers Stand Out In Annapolis Yacht Regatta

Annapolis, Md., July 10 (AP).—Washington, D. C., and Virginia skippers made strong bids for honors in standard classes at the eleventh annual Annapolis Yacht Club regatta today.

The regatta was marked by the first race for Chesapeake Bay log canoes in a major western shore event in 15 years. The newest among the old-time windjammers, Oliver's Gift, skippered by Capt. Dick Woodburn of Solomons Island, won its first start against six older canoes.

Duke Adams' Noddy, built in 1918, was second, and Boley Tyler's Sandy third in the four-mile race.

The small boats competed in two brushes today, with the third and final heat slated for tomorrow.

Washington skippers had a lock on the Chesapeake "20" round-bottom division with Jack Judy of the Columbia Yacht Club winning the first brush in his American and Bob Orme of the Corinthian Y. C. winning the second in Blue Water.

Frank Marquardt of the Columbia Y. C. also was in the thick of the fight in the star class, finishing second with White Shadow in the first heat and copping the second. Francis Wolfe of the Gibson Island Yacht squadron had the same results in Crash.

The penguin division was between Len Penso's Triket of the Columbia Y. C. and Jack Record's Scanty of the Potomac River Sailing Association. They took turns finishing first and second.

The Norfolk Yacht and Country Club was in the running among the Hamptons. Jack Vail taking the second brush in Rebel II, while Chauncy Willis had two seconds in Long Gone.

Maryland boats reigned supreme in the Severn One and National One design classes, the first three boats in both divisions being skippered by Indian Landing Boat Club representatives.

Sour Grapes

Moscow, July 10 (AP).—The United States and western European nations were accused by a Russian newspaper today of "exploiting children" in the coming Olympics games.

Russia is not competing in the Olympics.

The Moscow News said:

"Exploitation of children is widely practiced in the United States and western Europe."

Five District Marksmen Are With Leaders

Quantico, Va., July 10.—Five Washington area marksmen were given strong chances to gain berths on the United States Olympic rifle and pistol team yesterday at the end of first day firing in the two-day Olympic rifle and pistol trials here.

Arthur Cook, Frank Parsons, John Layton and Robert Mansell of Washington and Col. Walter Walsh, USMC, of Arlington, Va., all placed high in the scoring yesterday.

Cook, Eastern rifle champion from the University of Maryland, shot 597 with a .22-caliber rifle to go into a four-way tie for third place. William Schweitzer of Elizabeth, N. J., led the division with 599 of a possible 600.

Parsons scored 1028 to finish two points behind Emmet O. Swanson of Minneapolis, Minn., in the free rifle competition. Possible score in this event is 1200.

Layton, a Washington Metropolitan Police detective led the rapid fire pistol field. His 1058 gave him a substantial lead over Jack Ahern of San Francisco who shot an 1125 and Robert Mansell of the United States Park Police who scored 1112.

Senior Golfers Play Thursday

The Walter McCallum Senior Golf Championship, sponsored by the Middle Atlantic Golf Association, will be held Thursday at the Burning Tree Club.

The minimum age limit set for the tournament is 55, with the event divided into three classes—55-60, 60-65, and 65 to 70 and over.

Entries for the tournament will close Tuesday and must be in the hands of Executive Secretary Dr. Robert Kielty on that date. All play in the affair will be under U.S.G.A. rules.

The low gross scorer in each age group will be the winner, with low net receiving second prize. In addition to the main tournament, there will be a 36-hole putting contest for men not in other events.

Play in the tournament will begin at 2 p. m. and will be preceded by lunch at 12 noon and followed by a dinner at 7:30 p. m. The entry fee of $10 will cover lunch, play and the dinner. For persons wishing to attend only the dinner, there will be a fee of $5.

The over-all low gross winner will receive the Walter McCallum Memorial Trophy with the low net winner being awarded the Hinshaw Cup. The oldest Middle-Atlantic Golf Association member present will receive the Tuckerman Cup.

Fort DuPont Golf Links Open

The new Fort DuPont Golf Course was opened for play yesterday with a large number of golfers helping in the dedication of the 9-hole, par-35 layout.

In the first foursome to play the course were R. L. Sanders, P. J. Covello, B. F. Pruitt and J. M. O'Sullivan. Their scores were: Sanders, 51; O'Sullivan, 52, and Covello and Pruitt, 57 each.

Putnam Scores Ace At Prince Georges

Col. Walter B. Putnam shot a 188-yard hole-in-one yesterday on the seventeenth hole of the Prince Georges Country Club course. He used a five-iron.

Playing with him at the time were Col. William R. Yancey, B. M. Rank and G. S. Mattingley. Putnam's score was 80.

3 D. C. Women Enter Tourney In Maryland

Only three Washington women golfers have entered the Maryland State Women's Golf Championship tomorrow at the Five Farms course of the Baltimore Country Club.

Navy Netmen Set for Play

Annapolis, Md., July 10 (AP).—Twenty-eight topnotch tennis players of the United States Fleet will meet on the courts here next week in the second annual all-Navy tennis tournament held at the Naval Academy.

The 1947 singles champion, Lieut. Comdr. John D. Behr of Pensacola, Fla., and the winning doubles team, Capt. Janes M. Farrin and Lieut. K. K. Jones, both stationed in Washington, D. C., are entered.

Leading contestants will qualify for play between Army, Navy and Air Force players in the Leech Trophy matches at Arlington, Va., July 30 and 31. Army won the 1947 Leech trophy.

First-round singles matches begin Monday afternoon. Finals are scheduled for Saturday.

The doubles matches will begin tomorrow and end on Saturday also.

Entries in the tournament include officers and enlisted men—and two marines—from all ports of the world.

Duke Nalon Races Friday At Lanham

Duke Nalon, who performed creditably in the Indianapolis 500-mile race, finishing third, will compete in Friday night's midget auto program at West Lanham Speedway.

Nalon set a new qualifying mark of 131.606 miles per hour at Indianapolis last May and led in the big-car classic at the 300-mile mark before he was forced to refuel.

The "Iron Duke" appeared here 10 years ago when he won the first midget race around these parts. That was at the old National Capital Speedway on Bladensburg rd.

Nalon, who drew down $6900 for his Memorial Day finish, handles big and little cars equally well.

Card Farm Signs Bobby Hooker, G.W. High Hurler

The Salisbury Cardinals, Eastern Shore farm team of the St. Louis Cardinals, have signed 17-year-old Pitcher Bobby Hooker of George Washington High School, Alexandria, Va.

Scout Benny Borgman said six other major league teams had tried to get the youthful right hander. He reports for duty next week.

The club also announced the signing of Johnny Reinney of Center Hall, Pa., former student at Lock Haven Teachers College.

Pail of Water Wins Over Alsab's Day

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—A saucy little filly from the East named Pail of Water streaked to a 1½ lengths victory in the $51,600 Lassie Stakes at Arlington Park today in making her strongest bid for the 1948 juvenile filly championship.

The winner a 2-year-old daughter of Jack High-Up The Hill, doused the championship aspirations of Mrs. Albert Sabath's Alsab's Day, which finished second.

Third place in the nine horse field went to Louis Lee Haggin's Stole, which just nosed out T. C. Melrose's Seely. Both, however, were three lengths back of Alsab's Day, the favorite.

Hippenstiel, Mrs. Herbert Win District Net Championships

Capt. Robin Hippenstiel and Mrs. Willie Herbert became the new District of Columbia men's and women's tennis singles champions yesterday before a large crowd at the Edgemoor Club in Bethesda.

Hippenstiel defeated Dr. David Johnson, 6—4, 6—4, 6—3, while Mrs. Herbert had a slightly more difficult time as she came from behind to win, 7—9, 6—1, 7—5, over Charlotte Decker.

Only a few weeks ago, both Hippenstiel and Mrs. Herbert were beaten in the final round of the City of Washington tournament, but both won convincing victories yesterday.

The second seeded player in the tournament, Hippenstiel forced the play throughout his match with the third-seeded Johnsen. The slender Army officer rushed the net constantly and Johnsen's usually effective passing shots failed him at crucial points.

Hipensteil's service was working well, particularly in the two final sets, and he used this weapon to gain an advantageous position at the net. The triumph was Hippenstiel's first major Washington title in this, his first year of competition here.

Mrs. Herbert, who was top-seeded among the women, had a difficult time against Miss Decker, seeded second. The long first set was closely contested all the way, with Miss Decker finally pulling out against her favored opponent.

Mrs. Herbert came back strongly in the second set to win it, 6—1, without much trouble. But Miss Decker refused to give up and came close to winning in the hotly contested third set, which Mrs. Herbert finally took, 7—5.

Colts Trim Down, Drop Two Coaches

Baltimore, July 10 (AP).—The Baltimore Colts will have new faces all around for next season's All-America Football Conference, in the front office, on the team and in the coaching department.

The refinanced Colts announced today that Head Coach Cecil Isbell will have only two assistants compared to last year's five. The only aide returning is Line Coach Tom Stidham, a college mentor at Marquette and Oklahoma before teaching the pros.

The new assistant will be Louis de Filippo, one of Fordham's line greats and once a player with the New York Giants. De Filippo and Isbell won't be strangers.

Coach Isbell and Trainer Fitz Lutz have left for Sun Valley, Idaho, to set up the Colt training camp which opens there July 22.

Classy Colt Wins Easily In 1:04.6

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Havre de Grace, Md., July 10.—Crispin Oglebay's Noble Impulse, a 2-year-old who never runs a bad race, turned on keen speed here today to break the track record and run off with the $7500 added Eastern Shore Stakes, first contested here in 1913.

Before a crowd of 12,000 the Cleveland-owned juvenile scampered home in easy fashion five lengths in advance of the closest opposition in a field of nine. Foxcatcher Farms' Elbutte was second and Mrs. Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Bahram was third.

The son of Bull Dog ran in 1:04 3/5 for 5½ furlongs, knocking three-fifths of a second off the mark shared by Sailing B. and Comixa. Noble Impulse carried top weight of 122 pounds. Jockey Carson Kirk of Silver Spring, Md., who came down from Monmouth Park for the race, was aboard Noble Impulse and the backers of the swift juvenile collected at the rate of $3.80 for the usual deuce investment.

Never Felt Whip

Kirk had Noble Impulse away on top and the juvenile gave his backers no anxious moments. The good-looking colt skimmed along the inside rail and never felt the whip, fairly coasting into the finish line despite the fast time.

There was hardly any competition for second money either. Elbutte was closest to Noble Impulse after the field settled into full stride and Jockey Willie Saunders rode hard but was no menace to the winner. This colt finished six lengths ahead of Sun Bahram, who put on a mild rally after going wide into the stretch.

The race was worth $6135 in earnings to Noble Impulse, bringing his season's total to a respectable $26,460. It was his third success in nine tries.

Double Pays $265.20

To the tune of an across-the-board mutuel of $93.20, $26.20 and $12.00, Mrs. V. D. Waple's Baby Pauly won the first race. The 3-year-old son of Quatre Bras II, winner of only one of 17 tries over a two-year period, finished a half length in front of the favorite, Mrs. J. B. Bond's Theodore. Third money went to H. Kaplan's Khorawych, in the field of a dozen ordinary 3-year olds.

Ridden by Jockey Dick Williams, Baby Pauly clung to the lead after the opening jumps and stepped the 6 furlongs in 1:13.

Those who had the three and two combination in the daily double, collected $265.20 for the popular $2 twin bet. Jockey Kirk rode his first winner of the day in the second race on K. A. O'Connor's Temeru. The $4.60 favorite was in front all the way and led Mrs. H. R. Ryan's Balliol to the finish line. Third in the mile and quarter test was G. C. Smith's Projoe. The winner was clocked in 2:08.

Jockey Breen Fined For Striking Rider

The stewards announced today that Jockey Johnny Breen was fined $100 for striking Apprentice Dick Williams with his whip during the running of the fifth event yesterday. Williams was fined the same amount when he was found guilty of rough riding. Breen had the leg up on Sun Elsie which finished third in back of Obedient, the winner.

Conniver Wins Vagrancy 'Cap

New York, July 10 (AP).—Harry La Montagne's Conniver, probably the most improved horse in training, galloped to an easy five-length triumph today over seven filly and mare rivals in the $29,450 Vagrancy Handicap at Aqueduct.

It was the most important triumph in the career of the 4-year-old daughter of Discovery, and she did it while backed down to favoritism by the crowd of 31,027, and against stiff opposition. Conniver has been picking up support steadily after her steady improvement in this area.

Jockey Ted Atkinson overhauled Arnold Hanger's Harmonica after steering Conniver outside the pack coming down the stretch, and she rolled under the wire galloping for her sixth triumph in 10 starts this season. Harmonica, making her first since she beat Stymie in the Suburban Handicap at Belmont May 31, saved the place by two lengths over Casa Camara, the pace-setter.

Covering the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:43 3-5, the winner rewarded her backers with $5.30, $3.20 and $2.80 for $2. Gallorette, world's money-winning mare, was withdrawn shortly before the race.

Taylor of Clowns Appears on Video

Juggler Joe Taylor will explain the Indianapolis Clowns' nickname tonight at 6 on the original amateur hour show over Dumont television's station WTTG.

The Clowns will make their first Washington appearance Wednesday night at Griffith Stadium in a Negro National League game. Taylor will appear tonight with Goose Tatum, King Tut and Ted Strong, his partners in the Clown's famous quartet.

In Fight Monday

Roach Is 8-5 Favorite to Whip Perry

Lavern Roach will be an 8-5 favorite when he crawls into the ring with Arron Perry at Griffith Stadium Monday night in the middleweight feature bout of four 10-round contests.

The fight is important for Roach. On its outcome will depend whether or not he'll be booked with Rocky Graziano in Madison Square Garden in September.

Roach will have a three-man board of strategy in his corner to help him conquer the hard punching of Perry. He arrived here with Trainer Charlie Goldman, handler of three former world's champions, and will be joined today by Comanagers Chris Dundee and Johnny Abood.

Roach was named the ring's rookie of the year last year, and has been called the finest fighter developed during World War II. He established himself as a comer in New York during the past year, capping his performances there with a decisive victory over Tony Janiro but losing to Marcel Cerdan, the slugging Frenchman, by a knockout.

Three other 10-rounders are scheduled tomorrow night. All rematches, they pair Jimmy Cooper, local featherweight, against Joe Kay, English puncher, who won a split decision over the colored clouter here recently; Ken Stribling, D. C. 160-pounder, against Randy Brown, New York middleweight who upset him here last spring; and Jackie Cranford, Washington heavyweight, with Jackie Lyons, Pittsburgh, who extended the local boy in Richmond.

Tickets will continue on sale at Turner's Arena today, and tomorrow at Griffith Stadium only. Seats are priced at $2.50 for general admission, $5 for box seats, and $6.50 for ringside.

Hanna, 70, Good for 15 Years

Virginian Has Won 3 With 19-Year-Old

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

HARNESS RACING is one sport in which age is considered more of an asset than a handicap. Frank Hanna, who has by far the best driving percentage at Laurel Raceway, can't be accused of overlooking any winning factors.

Hanna, reportedly 70, has been putting across a preposterous parlay. To his experience, he's added that of 19-year-old Hanover Express, second oldest horse on the grounds. The combination has accounted for three victories in three trips postward.

Although he's racing only three horses, Hanna has seven rsts, three seconds and a third in 11 starts. He also took the reins on David Spencer for its owner and finished third by two necks in a $1000 feature.

The Aylett, Va., veteran is only one behind Tom Wingate in number of triumphs. And he hasn't been out of the money yet.

In addition to Hanover Express, his Prince Vonian has won twice and finished second and Chester Hanover also has two firsts, two seconds and a third.

Hanna, a taciturn but not unfriendly individual appears touchy about only one thing—his age. He claims to be only 58, says he has papers to prove it. However, the consensus of those who have been in trotting circles as long or longer puts it between 70 and 74.

One young official said his father, who now is 70, drove with Hanna when the latter started out some 30 years ago and claims Hanna was older than his dad then. Maybe ex-Ziegfeld girls aren't the only ones sensitive about their years.

One thing's certain, Hanna sets a pace that would be too much for many a teen-ager. His average day runs 20 hours during a night meeting and it isn't unusual for him to get as little as two and a half hours' sleep.

He's generally up at 5:30 a. m. and starts tending to chores around the barn. To make sure his horses get proper care, he sleeps on a cot in the tack room right by them. Unlike a jockey, a harness driver doesn't go along for the ride. It's his job to train his horses well. And training means many hours and miles on a sulky every day.

Sports Best Average Of Laurel Drivers

Funny thing is that Hanna came into the sport for his health. Raised near Bel Air, Md., he farmed there and in Virginia before becoming a merchant in Aylett. He gave up the latter occupation to get out in the open.

Evidently the arduous schedule isn't hurting Hanna. He's a strong, well-built man, weighing 180. For three decades, he's been following the half-milers from South Carolina to the Canadian border. While he's had his share of severe spills, he never thinks of the next one. "Least of my worries," he grunted.

"It's been a fascinating profession, guess you'd call it a profession," Hanna informed, "and when it gets in your blood it stays there. I've met some fine people in the sport and I'm looking forward to spending at least 15 more years in it."

Gardnar Mulloy Beats Tom Brown in Tourney

Spring Lake, N. J., July 10 (AP).—Top-seeded Gardner Mulloy of Miami, Fla., reached the championship round of the Spring Lake invitation tennis tournament for the fifth straight time today with a 10—8, 6—4 conquest of fifth-seeded Tom Brown of San Francisco.

Ike Williams Vs. Jack May Draw 35,000

Philadelphia, July 10 (U.P.).—Lightweight Champion Ike Williams and Challenger Beau Jack finished training chores with light workouts today and then settled back for their title bout Monday night at Shibe Park.

Promoter Herman Taylor predicted a 35,000 attendance and a $150,000 gate.

The fight comes on the opening night of the Democratic National Convention and delegates and visitors to the city were expected to swell the crowd.

Williams, who kayoed Bob Montgomery last August to take over both the National Boxing Association crown and the New York version of the title, planned to spend the weekend at his Grenloch Park, N. J., training quarters.

The Jack camp was cocky and confident in the face of 12 to 4 odds favoring the champion. Little Chick Wergeles, pilot of the Georgian, was confident that Beau would win for the third time the title he traded a couple of times in 1943 and 1944.

Williams, who loves his title, coolly and calmly believes in himself.

Neither anticipated any trouble making the lightweight limit by weigh-in time on Monday. Jack, who had been fighting above the 135-pound limit, was near that poundage and trainer Sid Bell said he might come in as low as 133, sound as a dollar. In fact, the Jack camp said Beau was having less difficulty making the poundage than Williams.

The fight is scaled from $12 to $4.

Redskins Swap Tackle Deeks for Fullback McKay

Fullback Roy McKay of the Green Bay Packers will join the Washington Redskins in a straight player trade that sends Tackle Don Deeks to Green Bay, the Redskins announced yesterday.

McKay, 6-foot 195-pounder, was an All-American choice at the University of Texas and has been with the Packers for four seasons. In 1945 and 1946 he led the National Football League in punting and sports a four-year punting average of 41.9 yards.

Deeks came to Washington from the Boston Yanks halfway through the 1947 season. He is 6 feet 4 inches tall and weighs 240 pounds. A member of the 1943 University of Washington Rose Bowl team, he played with the Yanks in 1945 and 1946.

Cerdan Beats Delannoit in 15

Brussels, Belgium, July 10 (U.P.).—Veteran Marcel Cerdan, gold-toothed Frenchman, recaptured the European middleweight title from young Cyrille Delannoit of Belgium tonight on a 15-round decision that may earn Cerdan a September shot at Tony Zale's world championship.

Among the 15,000 spectators in Palais Des Sports, Belgium's largest indoor arena, was promoter Andy Niederreiter of New York, who was considering matching Cerdan with Zale in September. It was Delannoit's first defense of the European title he wrested from Cerdan here on May 23.

Each fighter tonight scaled just under the 160-pound limit. Cerdan weighed 159 pounds 7 ounces, Delannoit 159 pounds 13 ounces.

Cerdan, 32, had been expected to knock out his 22-year-old opponent, despite Delannoit's upset victory in May.

Cerdan scored the only two knockdowns. In the third round he dropped Delannoit with a sharp right, but the Belgian bounced up without taking a count.

A swinging left put the kid down again in the fourth, but once more he came up swinging before the referee could start a count.

On the Line

With Considine

PHILADELPHIA, July 10 (INS)—We think of our politics as simon pure, and they certainly are when compared to the politics of most of the other countries in the world.

But how would, say, the impending Democratic National Convention stack up if arrayed, in the integrity league, against big league baseball? Or any other convention?

Considine

If the practices and ethics of politics were to enter baseball the following things might happen:

The Philadelphia Athletics, being the dark horse of the American League, would be voted out of the pennant race as an upstart. Okay, so they won a few primaries and were in the lead or somewhere around the top through most of the season.

But the big question would be, "did the A's step on any toes during the campaign period, and how would they do in the fall when the chips were down in the big pay-off competition with the rival mob?"

Or, to put it another way, suppose a fellow was signed up to play faithfully for the Washington Senators, or St. Louis Browns or Chicago bled-White Sox.

Well, sir, the Indians get out in front for the first three ballots and appear headed for the gravy train. They appear to be the certain winners, or, at least, the delegates-players on the Senators, Browns and White Sox think so.

So those delegates-players immediately go back on their pledged allegiance to their organizations and start throwing games whenever the Indians come to town.

The solemnly pledged delegates-players of still other teams decide that the Red Sox are the real power of the league and certain to come home on the ninth ballot, so they take it easy for a long time, playing it safe, then jump on the Red Sox band wagon and aid the Bostonians to the nomination.

Take it another way: the Yanks expect to win in a breeze, but they've failed to hack through the brush and round up enough strength. The Tigers start coming on with a rush, but it so happens that the Yanks loathe the Tigers and will do anything in their power to keep the nomination away from Detroit knowing that they themselves can't make it.

So they buttonhole a spokesman for the Senators, who controls the Washington votes, and form a stop-the-Tigers bloc. They do this after making a deal with, say, the Red Sox, in which the Red Sox promise to pay off with a few postmasterships and maybe a chair or two on the board of directors.

So thereafter the stop-the-Tigers bloc throws its full strength against the Tigers but uses its scrubs and nothing-ball pitchers against the Red Sox.

Horrifying? It certainly is, but these are standard and accepted practices in the pristine ranks of politics, and never cause an eyebrow to be raised when they are demonstrated.

IN FACT A delegate who jumps off a dying horse at the correct instant and comes out loudly in support of a rival whose brains he has been knocking out for months—and supports that loudness by helping his new champion—is considered a smart, seasoned fellow who will go far in his chosen profession.

If baseball were run along political lines, a man could ask for $75,000 a year in salary on the ground that he thereby promised to be another Babe Ruth, or Ty Cobb or Walter Johnson. And three or four times out of five he'd get the $75,000 and a four-year contract without a 10-day clause attached.

If he were a pitcher and happened to be selected by a majority of the delegates he would then be in a position to name his battery mate and force him down the throats of the delegates whether the delegates wanted him or not.

He could give his ragamuffin friends the choice jobs around the infield and outfield, place some relatives in the coaching boxes and run the team by himself—ignoring the fact that there were a lot of competent free agents sitting around waiting for a chance to step in and bust one.

Anyway, if it's all the same to you, I'll take baseball as it is—pure and simple.

The 15th edition of the All-Star game is upon us, with something new in the way of palls hanging over it. As usual, this grand and glorious idea is suffering—beyond the ken of the fans—from the fact that most of the players the four million United States fans voted for would prefer not to play in the contest.

The second and new fly in the sun-burn lotion is the concern of the host city—St. Louis—that it may not be able to fill little Sportsman's Park, which would be a civic blow.

This had been a nightmarish year for the St. Louis Browns at the gate. Dick Muckerman has even rushed to the radio and demanded that the fans support the Browns "or else."

This threat seemed funny to me. Somehow, I believe St. Louis would manage to continue to exist as a body politic even in the face of the shocking catastrophe of the Browns leaving town for Dubuque or other points.

HERE'S A BASEBALL MUST:

If you live anywhere within V-2 distance of New York City, buy a ticket for the July 22 game at the Polo Grounds between two teams of amputees, the "flat tires"—who have lost a leg or legs—and the "broken wings"—who left an arm or arms overseas.

Horace Stoneham has donated his grand old ball park, and every quarter of the proceeds will go into the fund being raised by the Disabled American Veterans, National Amputee Chapter No. 73, to provide a new artificial limb shop (free) and a swimming pool where men who sacrificed so much in our world wars can have a dip without the stares of the whole-bodies.

Tickets are on sale at the Polo Grounds or at Chapter No. 73, at 200 West 24th street, N. Y. C.

TIME MAY prove me 100 per cent wrong (I hope) but there seemed to be something almost venal about the signing of old Satch Paige by the Indians.

Maybe Satch still has a hop on his high hard one, but if he does then I look for a return—behind the plate—of Cornelius McGillicuddy and Cobb's return to the Tiger outfield.

Old Satchmo was running downhill as far back as 1934. Ten years ago, when I did an interview with him for the Mirror, he had been reduced to 3-inning stints in a fly-by-night colored league and had such misery in his working wing that he was resorting to an old medicine-man treatment of pouring kettles of hot water over it.

As I say, I hope he wins 20, and makes enough to buy a new fire-engine roadster with fox-tails flying from radiator cap, radio mast and hub-caps. But he must have been hired simply as an oddity, something to dangle in front of a box-office grille.

Ann Curtis Breaks Olympic Swimming Mark

She Lowers '400' Time in Final Trials

Detroit, July 10 (U.P.).—Two Olympic records were broken today as nine more of the Nation's fastest swimming stars flashed their way toward Olympic honors in the trials.

Victories by the nines brought to 27 the number picked to represent the United States in aquatic events at the London games this summer. Altogether, 51 berths will be filled in the four-day trials, which end tomorrow.

America's greatest woman free-style swimmer, Ann Curtis of San Francisco, topped the Olympic 400-meter freestyle record in 5 minutes 25.9 seconds. The old record of 5:26.4 was set by Rita Bastenbroek of Holland during the 1936 Berlin Olympics. However, Miss Curtis' time today fell short of the U. S. record of 5:21.5 which she set last year.

Nancy Jmerki Lees of the Multnomah Athletic Club at Portland, Oreg., was second with 5:28.4. Third was Thelma Kalama of Hawaii in 5:36.6.

Verdeur Also Cuts Mark

Other qualifiers were Betty Lachok of Akron, Ohio; Marilyn Shaner of San Francisco; Brenda Helser, 1946 AAU 100-meter champion from Los Angeles; Jean Gerhard of Chicago and Evelyn Kawamato of Hawaii. The eight qualifiers compete for three Olympics berths in tomorrow's finals.

Joseph Verdeur, breast stroke ace from LaSalle College in Philadelphia, broke by 6.2 seconds the Olympic 200-meter breaststroke record by finishing in 2:36.3. His time also shaved 2.1 seconds off the U. S. record set by Verdeur in 1947. The Olympic mark, held by Detsuo Hamouro of Japan, also was set at the 1936 Berlin games.

Purdue ace Keith Carter and Robert Sohl of the University of Michigan, thrashed to the finish line close behind Verdeur. Carter, who placed second in the 100-meter freestyle Thursday, was clocked at 2:39.4, and Sohl at 2:43.

Dead Heat in Breaststroke

Three women breaststroke artists gave the 5000 spectators one of most exciting races seen at the trials in the Rouge Park pools.

Jeanne Wilson of Chicago's Lake Shore Club and Carol Pence, St. Louis newcomer, both Purdue students, finished the 200-meter course in a dead heat, in 3:16.2 the judges decided Miss Wilson touched out first by less than one-tenth of a second.

Clara Lamore of Rhode Island, national women's AAU 200-yard breast-stroke champion, finished .7 seconds later for third place.

Allen Stack of Yale, U. S. backstroke king, performed true to form in winning the 100-meter backstroke final and an Olympic team berth.

His time of 1:06.9 barely defeated Navy Ensign Robert Cowell, former national AAU champ, who finished in 1:07.5. Third was Howard Patterson of Michigan State College in 1:08.9 and Robert De Groot, former national AAU 150-yard indoor titleholder, fourth in 1:09.5.

FINAL SUMMARIES

Women's 200-meter breast stroke (final)—1, Jeanne Wilson, Purdue (3:16.3); 2, Carol Pence, Purdue (3:16.2) (placing judges ruled she was second although three others said her finishing one tenth second faster than Miss Wilson); 3, Clara Lamore, Providence, R. I. (3:16.9); 4, Pat St. Clair, New York, Ohrbach A. C. (3:22.2); 5, Randall Hudson, North Carolina (3:31.9); 6, Nancy Grubb, Purdue (3:35.1); 7, Fern Clasen, Chicago Town Club (3:35.9); 8, Mary Lyons, Detroit (3:36.9).

Men's 200-meter breast stroke (final)—1, Joe Verdeur, La Salle College (2:36.3); 2, Keith Carter, Purdue (2:39.4); 3, Bob Sohl, Michigan (2:43); 4, Jose Balmoros, Hawaii (2:44.7); 5, William Schmidt, York (Pa.) Aquatic Club 2:45.4); 6, Don DeForrest, Atlantic City, N. J. (3:46.9); 7, Bowen Staufforth, Iowa (2:47.7); 8, Dave Selbold, Michigan State (2:50.4).

Men's 100-meter backstroke (final)—1, Allen Stack, Yale (1:06.9); 2, Robert Cowell, Pittsburgh, Pa. (1:07.5); 3, Howard Patterson, Michigan State (1:08.9); 4, Robert DeGroot, Ohio State (1:09.5); 5, Alan Ford, New Haven (1:09.5); 6, Robert Tribble, U. S. Navy (1:10); 7, Henry Wineman, Williams (1:10.3); 8, Fred Gaus, U. S. Air Forces (1:13.5).

TRIALS SUMMARIES

Women's 400-meter free style (trials)—1, Ann Curtis, San Francisco (5:25.9); 2, Nancy Merki Lees, Portland, Oreg. (5:28.4); 3, Thelma Kalama, Hawaii (5:36.6); 4, Betty Lachok, Akron, Ohio (5:37.2); 5, Marilyn Sahner, San Francisco (5:37.4); 6, Brenda Helser, Los Angeles (5:43.9); 7, Jean Gerhard, Chicago (5:52.5); 7, Evelyn Kawamoto, Hawaii (5:53.7).

Men's 1500-meter free style (trials)—1, James McLane, Akron, Ohio (19:40.3); 2, George (Jack) Taylor, Akron, Ohio (20:06.9); 3, Forbes H. Norris, Jr., Harvard (20:13.5); 4, William Heuaner, Jr., Northwestern (20:13.9); 5, Edwin Gilbert, Texas (20:15.4); 6, Matt Wihn 3d, Michigan (20:33.5); 7, Barney Nakama, Ohio State (20:35.6); 8, Andrew Lambert, Williams (20:45.0).

Women's 100-meter backstroke (trials)—1, Suzanne Zimmerman, Portland, Oreg. (1:17.2); 2, Barbara Jensen, Oakland, Calif. (1:19); 3, Muriel Mellon, Los Angeles (1:19.7); 4, Maureen O'Brien, Newark, N. J. (1:21.2); 5, Patricia Scott, Portland, Me. (1:22.3); 6, Donna Maddock, Michigan State (1:23.7); 7, Barbara Jungclaus, Indianapolis (1:24); 8, Lorna Doolins, New York (1:24.1).

200-METER FREE STYLE (trials, first six in Sunday's final qualify for U. S. 200-meter relay squad going to London)—1, James McLane, Akron, Ohio (2:11.7); 2, Bill Smith, Ohio State University (2:12.2); 3, William H. Heuaner, Jr., Northwestern (2:12.2); 4, George Hoogerhyde, Michigan State College (2:14.0); 5, Robert Gibe, Detroit A. C. (2:14.4); 6, Wally Wolf, Los Angeles (2:14.8); 7, Eugene Rogers, New York A. C. (2:15.0); 8, Edwin Gilbert, University of Texas (2:15.5); 9, Halo Hirose, Ohio State (2:15.8); 10, Ralph Sala, San Francisco Olympic Club (2:15.8). (McLane and Smith, first two finishers, scratched themselves from tomorrow's finals permitting places to go to Hirose and Sala, ninth and tenth.)

Claxton Bats Cleanup Against Brooklyn Boys

Georgetown Prep Star With .600 Average Will Lead Local All-Stars at Ebbets Field

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Swinging in the cleanup spot against Brooklyn Monday night, the Washington junior all-stars will have a .600 hitter who knocks in a run almost every time he steps to the plate.

The big sticker is the youngest boy on the Capital City team, 16-year-old Ed Claxton, a sophomore at Georgetown Prep School.

Influenced by Claxton's 17 runs batted in on 15 hits in 25 trips to the plate for Marx Jewelry Co., in Junior City League play, D. C. All-Star Manager Jim Munro yesterday made the announcement of Ed's appointment to the honored No. 4 spot in the lineup.

Skyscraping batting averages, and playing alongside the older boys are nothing new to the 6-foot 1-inch, 170-pound lad.

When he was only 12, three years younger than the next youngest member on the team, he was helping Government Printing Office win the junior city championship with a lusty .360 average.

High school coaches from all over the city were giving the boy pep talks before last year, hoping to lure the versatile athlete their way. But Ed, who lives near Calvin Coolidge High, and whose older brother went to Gonzaga, picked Georgetown Prep.

Although Ed's played only a year there, Athletic Director Orrel Mitchell calls him the greatest all-around athlete in the history of the school. He played quarterback on the football team, and forward on the basketball team in his freshman year.

But it was in baseball where he exhibited his greatest versatility, playing every position on the team. He won three of his four mound starts, and batted .556 in 16 games.

For Marx this season, Ed won the only game he started on the mound. He was selected on the team as an infielder, but will be started in right field.

Munro watched his crew go through batting practice yesterday on the West Ellipse, and smiled his satisfiaction as he watched his wrecking crew of Norman Wacker, Claxton and Bobby Johnson slam long liners to the outfield. They'll bat No. 3, 4 and 5 in the lineup.

Johnson, who replaced Spike Bauroth on the squad when the latter was appointed Washington's representative to a Van Buren, Ark., baseball festival this weekend, is hitting a cool .538. Wacker has the lowest average of the trio, .437, but two of his seven blows have gone for homers.

Munro gave his team final instructions, ordering them to report at Union Station Monday morning at 8:30. They'll travel big league style by Baltimore & Ohio train to Brooklyn, and be quartered at the St. George Hotel.

The squad will return home Tuesday night after being conducted on a sight-seeing tour of New York.

Italy Still Has Hope In Davis Cup Play

Milan, Italy, July 10 (AP).—Italy's Davis Cup tennis team staved off elimination from European play today when it won the doubles match from Czechoslovakia. The Czechs won both singles contests yesterday and leads 2—1 in the best-of-five series. The final two singles matches will be played tomorrow.

The winner of the series will meet Sweden in the finals of the European eliminations.

Washington Jayvees Win Crew Race

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

Princeton, N. J., July 10 (AP).—Philadelphia's young Jack Kelly and the University of Washington's junior varsity oarsmen who made up a four-oared crew with coxswain did just what was expected of them today as they turned in the outstanding performances of the final Olympic rowing tryouts on Lake Carnegie.

Kelly, son of the 1920 Olympic single sculls champion and winner himself of most of the world's top sculling honors, won as he pleased in his specialty from another young Philadelphian, Jack Trinsey. His time was 7:20.9, slower than the Olympic record.

The Washington four had somewhat stronger competition but it didn't have much trouble whipping Yale's good crew by a length and a half with the West Side Club four from Buffalo, N. Y., a distant third.

National Titles Awarded

Along with the Olympic designation, national championships were awarded to the winners of each of today's races in six divisions.

In accordance with Olympic year tradition, the championships and final trials are combined in one race while the other national titles are decided in a separate regatta, held last weekend at Philadelphia.

The other winners, all of whom automatically earned places on the Olympic squad were Yale's entries in the four-oared shells without coxswain and pairs without coxswain, the Vesper Boat Club of Philadelphia in pairs with coxswain and a combination club entry of Arthur Gallagher of the Penn A. C., Philadelphia, and Joseph Angyal of the New York Athletic Club in doubles.

Huskies' Win Stirring

Wahington's victory was the most stirring of today's six although in time the Huskies failed to match their winning performance of Friday's semifinal. Today they rowed the 2000 meters—13 yards less than a mile and a quarter—in 6:43.3 with the aid of a light tail wind.

Yesterday, with a somewhat stronger wind blowing down the course, Washington was timed in 6:35.7. Both times are somewhat better than the Olympic record of 6:47.8 made by Italy's crew at Amsterdam in 1928.

Out to square things for the Washington varsity's defeat in last week's eight-oared tryouts, the huky jayvee combination got the jump on Yale at the start, beat off every challenge and finished with a margin of about a length and a half.

Umpires Named For 'Star' Game

Cincinnati, July 10 (AP).—Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler today announced the umpires and official scorers for the All-Star baseball game July 13 at St. Louis.

Umpires—From the American League: Charles Berry and Joe Paparella; from the National League, John E. Reardon and William J. Stewart.

Scorers: Sid Keener of the St. Louis Star-Times, St. Louis; Edward H. Burns of the Chicago Tribune, Chicago, and Robert L. Burnes of the Globe-Democrat, St. Louis.

Air Force Has Tourney Here

More than 60 players from 22 Air Force bases will compete in the Eastern Air Force sectional tennis tournament at Columbia Pike courts in Arlington beginning Monday at 10 a. m.

The tourney is a preliminary for the Air Force National tournament which will be held at the Army-Navy Country Club starting July 19.

Tickets Go on Sale For Firemen's Game

Fire Chief Clement T. Murphy said he hoped for a large crowd at the New York-Washington Fire Departments' benefit baseball game at Griffith Stadium August 4. Tickets go on sale today at Washington and suburban fire stations.

Murphy pointed out that proceeds of the game will go to the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs and to selected charities in neighboring communities. The tickets are priced at $1 for general admission and $2.50 for box seats.

Bowie Loses, 16-0,

Left Gray and Melvin Perkinson each hit two-run homers as Edmonston trounced Bowie, 16-0, yesterday in a Prince Georges County Club League baseball game. Buck Fleshman pitched a three-hitter for the winners.

Mount Calvary Beats McDaniel, 11 to 10

Mount Calvary took an 11-10 decision from McDaniel Motors yesterday in an Intercity Junior League game on the Ellipse. In other league games Forestville whipped Holy Name, 9-5; McQuinn's Yankees trounced Victory Post No. 4, 8-2, and Caithness defeated Carmody Hills, 12-6.

Callahan Wins Game

Pitcher Jack Callahan's home run in the thirteenth inning gave Eddie's Tavern a 4-3 triumph over the Northeast Body Works yesterday at Rosedale.

D. C. Olympic Hopes Rest on 5 Canoeists

By Frank Wagner
Post Reporter

WASHINGTON'S HOPES for Olympic fame will sail for London Wednesday in five canoes and the S. S. America.

Five area canoemen will sail with them and, if necessary, in them as members of the eight-man United States Olympic canoe team.

Bill Havens, 29-year-old junior at George Washingtown University, and senior member of the quintet, claims his delegation will keep a close watch on their craft during the trip.

"We'll even sleep in them if the going gets too rough. All of us are much too excited about the trip to take any chances on shipboard mishaps," he grinned.

Bill, who lives with his teammate brother, Frank, at 1610 Isherwood st. ne., has been since 1936 the national tilting champion and now holds national titles in all but one division of canoe competition.

He is the champion at one-man single blade, one-man double blade, tandem singles, four-man singles and four-man doubles. Only the tandem singles title has eluded him.

Frank claims more than reflected glory in the Havens family. A 23-year old sophomore at Montgomery Junior College, he is the National intermediate titling champion and with Bill helped win the four-man singles International title at Canada last year.

Both Bill and Frank are members of the Washington Canoe Club. Two doors down the Potomac from their club is the Potomac Boat Club, which claims the other three Washington Olympic entrants.

They are Ken Clark, John Eiseman and Tom Horton, all three students at the University of Maryland. Clark, 24, lives at 3745 McKinley st. nw., while Eiseman and Horton, both 22, live at 4600 Sanford st., Chevy Chase, Md.

Clark and Eiseman, paddling partners since 1945, share the National tandem doubles title and the International and National four-man doubles championships. Horton is a relative newcomer to the sport. He is without titles but showed well enough in Olympic trials here and at Lake Sebago, N. Y., to rate a team berth.

Three New Yorkers round out the American canoe crews. Ernie Riedel, 48, of the Pendleton Canoe Club of New York City, will lead the team in age and reputation. He has been National champion in one-man double blade racing for more than 20 years.

Steve Lysac of Yonkers Canoe Club and Steve Macanowski of the New York Canoe Club are the others.

Manager of the team will be Wally Van B. Claussen, water safety division director of the American Red Cross. Emmet Lumbeck of New York City is the coach.

Patton, Ewell and Whitfield Lead Qualifiers for Olympics

1¾ inches in the preliminaries yesterday, but bettered it on his last throw today with 54 feet 1⅜ inches.

But others came up on their last throws, too, particularly Francis Delaney, who cut loose with 55 feet 1¾ inches.

It was the best mark ever made by the former Notre Dame athlete, who has grown in strength and ability since leaving college. Wilbur Thompson of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, on his next to last put, came up with 54 feet 11⅞ inches, and James Fuchs of Yale produced 54 feet 8⅜ inches, a foot better than his previous best mark.

These three made the team, with Fonville left behind in fourth place, 7 inches behind Fuchs.

Even with Fonville out of it, American prestige in the shot is in good hands. The Olympic record for the event is 53 feet 1 3-16 inches, held by Hans Woelke of Germany, and few Europeans this year have even approached 52 feet.

As if to compensate partially for the upsets, there popped up a trio of pole vaulters who showed championship class. Both Richard Morcum of Durham, N. H., and Gwinn Smith of the San Francisco Olympic Club cleared a lofty 14 feet 8⅛ inches. First place, however, went to Morcum because he had only three misses to four for Smith. Robert Richards completed the team with a vault of 14 feet 6⅛ inches.

Earle Meadows of Brownsville, Tex., who won the pole vault at the Berlin games in 1936 and was trying to make the team again, wound up a gallant sixth at 13 feet 6 inches.

Gehrmann Wins 1500

The race that Dodds didn't run in, the 1500 meters which is almost the equivalent of the mile, was a scorcher, with Don Gehrmann of Wisconsin, noted for his finishing sprint, leading the bunched pack home. He was timed in a creditable 3.52.2, with Clem Eischen of Washington State and Roland Sink of Southern California right behind.

Whitfield's victory in the 400 meters was an easy one, a good 3 yards ahead of Dave Bolen of Colorido, who had scratched from the 800 meters in order to concentrate on the shorter race. George Guida of Villanova was third.

Art Harnden of Texas A. and M. was fourth, and will be taken along to compose the 1600-meter relay team, just as Edward Conwell of Jersey City, N. J., the fourth finisher in the 100-meter dash yesterday, will join the team to complete the 400 meter relay.

The three double qualifiers of the tryouts, Patton, Ewell and Whitfield, have several things in common—height and long, space-eating strides. Each is around 6 feet and weighs approximately 150.

800 One of Day's Best

The 800-meter run produced one of the greatest races of the day, and showed Whitfield's strides to advantage. Whitfield allowed Robert Chambers of Southern California and then Tarver Perkins of the Illinois Athletic Club to set the pace. Coming into the back stretch on the last lap, Whitfield moved out commandingly.

Herbert Barten of Michigan cut loose his great sprint on the final curve, but Whitfield came home two yards ahead in the brilliant time of 1:50.6, with Chambers trailing Barten by four yards to round out the team placings. Perkins was fourth and Jack Dianetti of Michigan State a close fifth.

Three broad jumpers came forward who bettered 25 feet, pointing to a possible one-two-three sweep at London. Willie Steele of San Diego State led with an arching leap of 26 feet, 2 inches—and then jumped 26 feet, 10 inches, which is one and three-quarters better than Jesse Owens' mighty world record set in 1935.

However, the judges found he had fouled the jump off block by a scant quarter of an inch, so it didn't count. Herb Douglas of Pittsburgh did 25 feet, 3 inches and Alonzo Wright of Wayne jumped 25 feet, 1¼ inches to make the team.

Young Bob McMillen, a sophomore at Glendale (Calif.) Junior College, won the 3000-meter steeplechase in 9:18.7 despite a nasty tumble in the water hole on the last lap.

Appeal Filed In Stadium Case

Annapolis, Md., July 10 (AP).—An eleventh-hour appeal was filed today from a Baltimore Circuit Court decree upholding the right of the International League Orioles to play baseball in the Baltimore Stadium.

Attorney William Driver, representing residents of the stadium area who asked a court order ousting the Orioles because of "noise and disorder," filed the appeal in person, to make sure the papers arrived before tomorrow's deadline. The case was the latest of 58 already on the docket for the October, 1948, term of the court of appeals, and probably will not be argued until late November.

FOR BEST SERVICE PLACE YOUR ADS EARLY

The steadily growing volume of classified ads in The Post, combined with the practice of many advertisers who phone late in the day, is making it difficult to devote the time and assistance to these late callers which is needed to prepare the most effective possible copy.

To assure receiving this help from your ad-taker, please try to call during the morning or early afternoon.

All's Quiet—So Far

Pre-Convention Bustle Is Missing as Democrats Gather in Philadelphia

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 10.—"Looks like a pretty dead convention."

"Oh, it hasn't been such a bad one," answered the taxi driver defensively.

"No, I mean the Democratic, not the Elks convention."

"Oh, the Democrats," he snorted, "I hear they're going to bust the city wide open."

So far there is no sign of Philadelphia being busted open by Democrats. Except in the station, where the Pennsylvania Railroad thoughtfully tacked up a huge welcoming sign, and some small commotion in the Bellevue-Stratford lobby, the exhilarating Republican preconvention bustle is notably missing.

Three days of energetic Elks have left the City of Brotherly Love limp, its streets cluttered with paper. You see left-over Elks everywhere in maroon fezzes, in overseas caps, carrying canes, their women folk clutching souvenir miniature parasols, ditto scarlet Mexican sombreros.

Arm in arm they roll, singing, their badges confusing to the first flush of gathering Democrats. The red, white, blue badges bear a whimsical legend "Big Billy for President—Little Johnny for Vice President"—all Elk lore.

Dinner for Officials

SOCIALLY SPEAKING, Democratic opener was the dinner tendered members of the Cabinet, National Committee, and other top-drawer party toilers Friday night by Albert Greenfield, chairman of the local citizens committee. The prandial event was preceded by a cozy press conference at which three current and one former Cabinet member were noncommital targets for an assemblage of decidedly lukewarm reporters. Messrs. Symington, Snyder, Sullivan and former Agriculture Secretary Anderson sat along a narrow table centered by an uneasy radio moderator who shoved the microphone to the questioned. The inquisitioned looked sleek, prosperous in their dinner jackets, the inquisitors rumpled and discouraged.

Upon the roof the ladies trickled in gracefully. Mrs. Tom Clark, the Attorney General's pretty wife, in black lace, was with Mrs. Kenneth Royall, whose white printed dress was brightened with sequins. Mrs. Edward Foley, whose husband is the Treasury's Assistant Secretary, was there, in pale blue gray and black printed satin, its design picked out in sequins; Mrs. Leslie Biffle in a bright pink-blue-black print with a net shoulder, and Mrs. India Edwards, executive director of the women's division, in black lace with a pink underbodice matching the carnations tucked in her hair. While the grandes were sipping cocktails on the roof, things were picking up in the Bellevue Stratford lobby. Girls were giving out Douglas for President buttons and down the street, a banner proclaiming Douglas headquarters was broken out across the John Bartram Hotel facade. Democrats not giving away their choice were bursting out with huge badges which read "We did it to Dewey before and will do it again." Up on the marquee the new papier-mache donkey nodded its head, blinked its bright electric eyes while the rubber donkey blown up this morning and tethered at the side entrance was ignominously removed.

Upstairs the ballroom, formerly Dewey's headquarters, is empty, unlighted. Instead of the eighth floor, where Dewey rumors and tactics were hatched, the Democratic headquarters are on the third, while the women's committee has set itself up with considerable elegance on the first floor. The women's division, with Washington's Mrs. Edwards as its executive director, is doing a swell and politically much more comprehensive job than the Republican ladies. There are some 511 women delegates and alternates among the Democrats compared to a mere 353 Republicans holding similar high office.

V-P Race May Be Exciting

PART of the Republican's convention excitement was dashing from one candidate's headquarters to another. Since there is apparently only one serious Democratic presidential candidate, Vice Presidential possibilities will have to fill the gap. So far, the sole Vice Presidential hopeful to roll up his sleeves is Senator O'Mahoney. The Westerner has been smart enough to pick as headquarters a room adjoining the women's committee.

Third floor advance guard here since Tuesday has been "Skeeter" Johnston, Senate minority clerk, and Leslie Biffle, who is sergeant at

Friends Give Sir John Original Burns' Poem As Farewell Present

By Marie McNair

BRITISH Minister Sir John Balfour and Lady Balfour will say goodby on Thursday, hopping off that day for New York to sail later in the week for England.

Sir John—Jock to his friends—admits that some of his happiest days were spent in Washington, when he was first here a number of years ago, a young bachelor member of the embassy staff. Now he's been appointed British Minister to Argentina and after a month's holiday at home will start for his new post.

Born in bonnie Scotland in the heart of Sir Walter Scott's native heath, Sir John is more than delighted with a farewell gift, presented to him Thursday night at a little party given at the home of Robert Woods Bliss, one time United States Ambassador to Argentina, and Mrs. Bliss.

It's the original manuscript of Robert Burns' "Green Grow the Rushes O!" for which some 50 or 60 friends chipped in for the Balfours' American memorabilia.

Mr. Bliss and Norman Armour, Assistant Secretary of State, made speeches before a gathering which included, among others, Secretary of Defense James Forrestal, Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Robert Lovett, the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Belt, the New Zealand Minister and Lady Berendsen, the Canadian Minister, Thomas Stone, Senator and Mrs. William Fulbright, the Joseph Alsops, and Frank Kent of Baltimore.

HERE'S news! Mr. and Mrs. George Allen have a baby! Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice said so, and it's true! The baby is named Joseph. But he's a coal black Scottie puppy, one of a litter from Gen. and Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower's happy canine family.

The Allens were in New York recently for the Eisenhowers' wedding anniversary and Mamie Eisenhower gave Mary Allen a puppy to take home. Joe, not a bit housebroken, kept the train stewards hopping all the way down from New York. He's kept Mrs. Allen hopping ever since.

"Draper may have decorated your house," said Mary Allen brightly on the telephone to Mamie Eisenhower the other day, "but Joseph is decorating mine!"

TOWN TOPICS: Drucie Snyder, who's in Philadelphia with her parents, Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Snyder, will broadcast from the Democratic convention for local station WBBC, where she now has a daily program.

With hearts that are young and gay, Marion and Laura Mae Norris, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Brison Norris, and Louise Hamilton, the George E. Hamilton's daughter, are setting sail next Friday for a European tour. They're going to Denmark and Sweden, the Benelux countries, England, Switzerland, France and the Emerald Isle.

Meredith Howard, on Long Island for the weekend, will be in Philadelphia this week, then will take off for Mexico to see a sister who is ill.

Senators and Wives to Sail to Pacific Islands Soon

By Genevieve Reynolds

SUMMER PLANS among the congressional contingent are fluid and breakable. Majority are holding in abeyance specific commitments until all presidential candidates have been chosen. Just how many show up during the Democratic National Convention, opening Monday in Philadelphia, depends upon several factors, but mostly the heat and potential excitement. Definitely on the summer schedule, however, is a Pacific junket for a number of Senators and their wives.

Wisconsin's Senator and Mrs. Alexander Wiley sailed yesterday from San Francisco for an extensive tour of the Pacific islands under United States' trusteeship or United Nations mandates. They'll visit the islands in the Marianas, Carolines and Marshalls over which the United States is trustee and which the Navy now governs. Truk in the Carolines will be one of their inspection places. In the Marianas they'll see Guam, Saipan, Tinian and Orta. But first they'll pull anchor in Hawaii to investigate all the pros and cons of statehood. The Senator heads a committee to investigate the trustee territories. Before returning in late September the Wileys may go on for a look-see at China and Japan.

Later in the summer or early fall Senator and Mrs. George Malone will cover the Pacific, too. Nevada's Senator will head a subcommittee of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee to Hawaii. Yes, it's the statehood question—then he and his vivacious spouse, Katie, will head for China on their own.

Around November 15 the rest of the Insular and Territorial Committee members will head for Honolulu. Mrs. Millikin expects to accompany her husband, Senator Millikin. Expected to be in the group are Senator and Mrs. Edward V. Robertson of Wyoming; Senator and Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, also of Wyoming; Senator and Mrs. Zales Ecton of Montana; Senator Arthur Watkins of Utah, Senator and Mrs. James E. Murray of Montana; Senator and Mrs. Ernest W. McFarland of Arizona, and Senator Hugh Butler of Nebraska.

Committee members will get a free ride—but not their spouses. The Mrs. will have to pay her own travel fare.

THREE PROMINENT senatorial wives will be attending the Democratic National Convention. Mrs. Tom Connally, wife of the colorful Texas Senator, is now in Philadelphia for the conclave show. Affable Mildred Pepper, wife of the Florida Senator, will be one of the speakers at the campaign school which is being sponsored by the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee. Purpose of the classroom sessions is to teach delegates the practical technique of vote-getting a la doorbell ringing and precinct procedures. Mildred will give a few pointers on how to pile up the ballots.

Mrs. J. William Fulbright, wife of the Arkansas Senator, will do a double-barreled stint in the City of Brotherly Love. She'll attend conclave proceedings, and at the same time, visit her family there.

MRS. HOMER FERGUSON, wife of the Michigan Senator, will leave this week for the Wolverine State. She's been jotting down repair needs in her Westchester apartment and just resting before the Senator begins his campaign for a return engagement with the Eighty-First Congress.

A WHITE HOUSE source reveals that Mrs. Truman and Mary Margaret Truman will put in an appearance sometime during the Democratic Convention this week. Incidentally, the members of the Cabinet and their wives will be introduced en toto to conclave delegates and their visitors—probably Tuesday night.

Members of French Colony Gather at Cocktail Parties

By Elizabeth Maguire

IF IT IS a tradition for diplomats to be attractive, it would be hard to find a group more traditional than the French. Two cocktail parties last week found many of the French colony gathered together. One was given on Wednesday by Mme. Bonnet, wife of the Ambassador, and another on Thursday by Jean Beliard, attache. And at both fetes, guests were pleasing to the eye.

First of all there was the Ambassadress, who is noted for her chic, then there were Mme. de l'Argentaye, Mme. Berard, Mme. Bouillot, their husbands, and two bachelors, Capt. Pierre Lancelot, Naval Attache, and Jean Daridan, Counselor.

M. Beliard entertained atop his apartment house roof. There were cool breezes and blue skies and it was like seeing the attache off at the boat, which will soon take him to a new post in Paris. Among the guests at the Beliard party were Miss Mary Pitcairn, Miss Claire Snow, George Baker, Drew Dudley, and Colonel and Lady Prior-Palmer.

A similar farewell was made by M. Beliard this time last year, when he was assigned to St. Louis, Mo., as Consul. The assignment was changed, however, and he remained in Washington another year.

Dinner Party

A DINNER party was given Thursday evening by the Ambassador of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Thomen. Mrs. Anastasio Somoza, wife of the former President of Nicaragua, was ranking guest. Others included the Ambassador of Nicaragua and Senora de Sevilla-Sacasa, the Greek Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis, the Minister of Public Health of Uruguay and Senora de Enrique Cleveaux, and Miss Dorothy Stirling of the Australian Embassy.

The wife of the Nicaraguan Ambassador is the daughter of Nicaragua's dictator, Anastasio Somoza.

New Arrivals

DIPLOMATS are either leaving the city or delaying their arrival here.

The new Egyptian Ambassador, Karmel Bey Abdel Rahim, has been detained and will not arrive for another week. His wife will join him later. And the new Ambassador of Uruguay, Alberto Dominguez Campora, will not arrive until September. The former Ambassador of Uruguay, Juan Carlos Blanco, is now Ambassador to France for his country. Dr. Jose A. Mora, Minister Plenipotentiary, is acting as Uruguayan Charge d'Affaires.

A new secretary, C. Vreede, has arrived at the Netherlands Embassy. He has come from The Hague, where he served in the Foreign Office. Mr. Vreede will be joined by his wife and year-old son when he has found an apartment.

Mme. Van Kleffens, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador, put on her darkest lipstick last Tuesday, and with her little black poodle, Jansen, was televised on the "Meet Mrs. Markel" program. The Ambassadress televised very well, but Jansen was so dark he could hardly be seen.

The Norwegian Ambassador, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, is sailing July 19 for Norway, where he will join Mme. Morgenstierne and their two daughters, Marjorie and Solveig.

Virgin Islands Fete

THE Danish Ambassador, Henrik de Kauffmann, last week visited the Virgin Islands, where a centennial celebration in commemoration of the emancipation of slaves took place July 3-5. The Ambassador was invited to be present by the Governor of the islands, William A. Hastie, a former resident of Washington.

Denmark was suitably represented at the celebration, as it was a Danish Governor, Peter van Scholten, who freed the slaves on July 3, 1848. It was not until 1917 that the islands were sold, and the Stars and Stripes replaced the Dannebrog, the Danish flag which had flown over the islands for 240 years.

Governor van Scholten was a colorful figure. Deserted by his wife, he remained among the free-colored, ruling the islands for many years with great success. His companion, Anna Elizabeth Heegaard, a beautiful free-colored woman, influenced much of his work.

A few years after he had freed the slaves, Peter van Scholten was recalled to Denmark and severely criticized for what he had done. He was acquitted, however, by the Danish Supreme Court.

Former King Peter of Yugoslavia came and went unannounced last week, stopping at the Shoreham over Wednesday and Thursday. He is now in New York, whence he will sail for England soon with Queen Alexandra.

Mrs. Nicholas, Mrs. Larson, Are Luncheon Hostesses

Mrs. Jarl E. Larson and Mrs. William H. Nicholas of Alexandria entertained a group of their Chevy Chase and Bethesda friends at a bridge luncheon Wednesday at The Old Club in Alexandria. Guests included Mrs. T. Emmert Beall, Mrs. Horace Beall, Miss Sue Thomas, Mrs. Edward M. Willis, Mrs. W. Marvin Smith, Mrs. George Sanford Holmes, Mrs. Herbert Mitchell, Mrs. Joseph A. Guard, Mrs. Edwin F. Wanner, Mrs. Thomas E. Godfrey, Mrs. Richard E. Titlow, Mrs. Morton B. Kammerer, Mrs. George W. Troxler, Mrs. Guy McIver Hooks, Mrs. H. L. Miss Berney, Mr. Donnelly Are Married

Miss Jacqueline Marie Berney, daughter of Mrs. Daniel Edward Berney and the late Dr. Berney of Scranton, Pa., was married to William Martin Donnelly of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Donnelly of West Pittston, Pa., yesterday. The wedding was at the Church of St. Mary of Mount Carmel at Dunmore, Pa. The Rev. Francis Donnelly, uncle of the bridegroom, officiated.

Given in marriage by her brother, Daniel Thomas Berney, the bride wore imported Chantilly lace embroidered in seed pearls. Her illusion veil was finger-tip length and she carried stephanotis and white orchids.

Mrs. Paul Mark Sullivan was matron of honor and the bridesmaids were Misses Katharine Maloney, Beverly McLoughlin and Eileen Kelly.

Thomas P. Cawley was best man and the ushers were Charles F. Donnelly, jr., Neil Donnelly, James Hopkins, Eugene Cusick, jr., and Capt. Gilbert Jones.

A reception was held at the Century Club at Scranton. The couple will reside in Arlington, Va.

The bride was graduated from Marywood Seminary in Scranton, Georgetown Visitation Junior College in Washington and Marymount College in Tarrytown, N. Y. She is a member of the Junior Century Club and the Catholic Junior League in Scranton. The bridegroom was graduated from Wyoming Seminary and Columbia University. He was an officer in the Army Air Force, serving in the China-Burma-India theater during the war.

Down Virginia Way

By Nina Carter Tabb

MRS. WALTER McK. JONES entertained on Monday afternoon at her home, "Ayrshire," near Upperville, in honor of her house guest, Princess Engalischeff, who has been in this country only a few months with her husband and children. The Princess is well known in Europe where she has done some lovely miniatures. She has painted several members of royalty including Astrid of Belgium; and Princess Juliana and her husband of The Netherlands.

Alexander Carter Beverley of Cincinnati, Ohio, has arrived in Virginia for two weeks vacation and is visiting his two aunts, Miss Edith Carter and Miss Rebecca Carter, at their home, "Meadow Grove," near Marshall. On Sunday afternoon the Misses Carter gave an afternoon party for Alex, in honor of his friends, Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Adams of The Plains who were recently married in Texas.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. R. Bland Beverley of Blandfield, on the Rappahannock River.

Adamses Feted

Dr. and Mrs. Adams are being very much entertained since their arrival in Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. James Adams gave a dinner party for them Saturday evening at their home near Bethel. On Sunday evening they went with a party of friends to the Warrenton House, near Warrenton for supper.

Mrs. Archibald Smith and her daughter, Miss Beverley Smith, entertained on Sunday afternoon at their cottage near The Plains for a number of friends and the young people there went on for a drive to the Skyline Drive. Miss Harriot Fleming of Washington, spent the weekend of the Fourth of July with Mrs. Archibald Smith, at her cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. William Tayloe, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Turner, have been on a fishing trip on the Rappahannock River.

Mrs. R. Carter Beverley of Richmond and her cousins, Miss Hannah F. Washington and Mrs. May Beverley Malmo, have been staying for a week at Blandfield, with Mrs. Beverley's son William Beverley of Richmond, who is fixing up the old place and who will soon go there to live.

Visitors Entertained

Mr. and Mrs. James B. Skinner, entertained recently at their home near Middleburg in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Broun of Houston, Tex., who have been visiting his sister and brother-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. H. A. Spitler.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hill Jones, of New York, have arrived in Virginia at their farm house near Bluemont. They were accompanied here by their son, Charles Hill Jones, jr.

The Fauquier and Loudoun Polo Club played a game on Sunday at the Phipps Polo Field, on Goose Creek. They played with the Harrisburg Polo Team, from Harrisburg Pa. This is the first time the field has been played on since the beginning of World War II. Playing for Harrisburg were Dock Hempt, Max Hempt, F. Frwnfelder and Mr. Gilmour. Playing on the home team were Al Miller, Pectro Cerberos, Charles V. B. Cashman, Van Cushman, jr., and Buz Rogers. Ted Miller was referee. This weekend the team here will go to Harrisburg to play a game. The Harrisburg team beat the Fauquier team by a score of 10 to 4. Hubert Phipps entertained the Harrisburg team at a supper party after the game.

Diplomats and Families Summer at Rehoboth

By Virginia Cullen

Rehoboth Beach, Del., July 10.—Now that July has a tenacious foothold on the summer season here, established by the huge July 4th influx, come what may, rain or shine, people are here to stay. Along with most other Eastern resorts, the weather's indecision last month slowed down the normal pace of vacation-bound visitors.

Washington diplomats are beginning to arrive for vacations here. The Nicaraguan Ambassador, Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa, arrives next Thursday with his family for a two months' stay. They have leased Mon Plaisir, summer home of the late Mrs. Henry B. Thompson of Wilmington. This will be the second summer for the Ambassador at this Delaware resort. He occupied the handsome Campbell Weir house in the Acres last season. This summer that rambling pink-stuccoed dwelling has a new owner. One of the largest and most pretentious estates at Rehoboth Beach, it was built in 1930 by M. Lammot duPont for his daughter, Mrs. Esther duPont Weir. Mrs. Weir sold it to Thomas W. Murray of Dover, Del., president of the United States Aeroplane Carriers, Inc., and he and his family are now occupying it.

Terrence Eustace, Counselor of the South African Legation, has chosen the quieter Lewes Beach colony for a summer vacation for his family, where he has taken the Aull House for the rest of the season.

French Envoy Arrives

Mr. and Mrs. Christian Valensi of Washington, and their two children, Odile and Oliver, are occupying the Raymond cottage here on Columbia rd. Mr. Valensi is financial counselor of the French embassy.

Tadeusz Jaworski, First Secretary of the Polish Legation, and his family, arrived last Friday to occupy the Bean cottage on Kent st. for the rest of the season.

United States Senator John J. Williams of Delaware and his family, are summering in an apartment on the boardwalk.

Young Peter Clapper, son of the late newspaper columnist, Raymond Clapper, and Mrs. Olive Clapper of Washington, has been visiting at Willow Oaks in the Acres with Allen Beebe, son of Dr. James Beebe. The Beebes' son is a student at Princeton, where he is a roommate of Peter Clapper.

Miss Anna Heider of Washington was here for the holidays with a party of guests from the Capital.

Miss Helen V. Willoughby of Washington, who was here last season, has arrived for the rest of the vacation period.

To Star Ann Corio

The Playhouse got a good send-off with "John Loves Mary" as the initial production. Starting Monday, "Separate Rooms" will star Ann Corio. She has appeared at the Ogonquit Playhouse at Fairhaven and at the Red Mill Theater, and since 1940 has been a favorite on the Eastern circuit of summer theaters.

Miss Molly Goodrich, daughter of the J. Edgar Goodrichs of Washington, started her art class for young people Wednesday. Twenty-two students are now enrolled in Miss Oler's junior class, including two scholarship recipients from the Rehoboth school, and two from the Children's Beach House at Lewes, duPont summer home for Delaware children.

In conformity with the policy of the Playhouse to encourage and give practical experience to young dramatic talent of the Delmarva Peninsula, two awards were presented Monday night to two outstanding drama students by James R. Young, publisher of the Wilmington Sunday Star. They were selected recently by a group of drama critics at the University of Delaware Play Festival. The recipients were Lorna Edwardson of the Dover High School and Alex Rogers of the Conrad High School, Wilmington.

Dr. Carl Henning, eye specialist of Washington, is now settled with his family at their resort cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil D. Fulton of New York and Dover, Del., have arrived with their daughter, Miss Ann Fulton, at White Caps on Henlopen ave.

Phillip Blakesly of Columbus, Ohio, professor of art at the University of Ohio, his wife and two children, Ann and Gregory, have taken a cottage for the summer at 38 Maryland ave. With them are Mrs. Blakesly's mother, Mrs. Claire Smith of New York, and Miss Cecelia Griffin.

The summer home of Gen. Samuel T. Ansell, on King Charles st., is now being occupied by Mr. and Mrs. J. Reese White of Millsboro, Del., and Mrs. White's father, Capt. Thomas H. Carpenter, retired Delaware River pilot and former Mayor of Lewes.

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Doub of Washington are in the Brokaw cottage on Oak ave. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel S. Young of Washington will take the cottage for August.

Leases Cricket Heath

Richard Harkness of Washington, NBC radio commentator, has leased for August, Cricket Heath, summer home of the Harry W. Fehrs of Whitemarsh, Pa.

Approximately 75 exhibits are included in the current members show in the Rehoboth Art League Studio. The show is attracting many art-minded summer colonists, as the league is holding Sunday viewing teas again this summer to receive members and their guests. Mrs. John Stuart Gayle of Washington is assisting Miss Frances Oler in the ceramics class, and has entered a group of pottery bowls and plates in the members' show. Mrs. Gayle, the former Miss Mary Lynn Pratt of Milford, Del., is summering here at the Surf ave. cottage of her grandmother, Mrs. Frank L. Grier, along with her parents, Capt. and Mrs. J. Lockwood Pratt of Washington. Among the exhibitors of paintings from the Washington colony is Charles Hoover.

After 10 years of activity in building up a significant art colony at Rehoboth Beach, the Rehoboth Art League has decided to expand with the erection of a new studio building for classrooms and workshop. Last Friday at the opening picnic of the 1948 season, plans were approved by the building committee for the new $10,000 studio, to be built slightly to the north of the present Paynter House, a reconverted farm dwelling that had become too small for the artists' growing needs. Col. Wilbur S. Corkran, Rehoboth architect, drew the plans and will have supervision of the construction. The league now has a nest-egg fund toward the new studio, and will raise the remainder in a drive. The site is ample for the erection of cabins for artists and possibly an open-air theater at a future date. Hans Rothe, director of the resort's new straw hat theater, The Henlopen Playhouse, was guest speaker at the league's opening gathering, on the topic, "Is Theater an Art."

Hawaii Will Be Next Stop For Gen. Parks, Family

By Nicha Soure

SOMETIME in August Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks will return to Camp Shafter in Hawaii, the place he left in 1927 as a lieutenant. But this time it will be with the impressive title of Chief of Staff, United States Army, Pacific. And the entire Parks family, Mrs. Parks, Edwyna Anne, William Robinson, Floyd Junior and Basil Manly, will accompany him, equipped with the traditional "one season change of clothes" for the ideal Hawaiian weather.

The Parks children have been accepted at the Punahou School which is said to be the oldest private school west of the Mississippi, having been founded in 1855. The youngsters, incidentally, were busy Thursday celebrating Floyd Junior's tenth birthday with the General taking time off from urgent last minute duties to be with them in the evening.

Before sailing in August, the Parkses have crammed a month with plans to see America. They will leave July 25 in a station wagon from Washington with the destination San Francisco one month later.

General Parks came to Washington early in 1946 as Chief of Public Information. He had been in the Capital in 1939 for a three-year period as the Chief of Staff of the Army Ground Forces under the late Gen. Lesley McNair.

Replacing General Parks as Chief of Public Information will be Gen. Bryant Moore, who is coming from Trieste and will begin work here on July 12.

Service Wedding

IN FORT MYER CHAPEL yesterday at noon, Miss Fredda A. Reiner became the bride of Capt. Harry J. Stempin. Capt. William Fitzgerald officiated at the cermoney.

The bride is the daughter of Oliver Reiner of Reinerton, Pa., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Adams Stempin of Wilwaukee, Wis.

The bride wore a white Swiss eyelet gown and carried a prayer book with a white orchid. Her finger-tip veil of illusion was held by a halo.

Mrs. Harry Smith was the matron of honor and Major Smith served as best man.

Following the reception at the Officers Club, the couple left for a wedding trip to Canada. They will visit the bridegroom's parents in Wisconsin before they return to Washington where Captain Stempin is stationed at Fort Myer.

The bride attended Pennsylvania schools and is now with the State Department. Her husband attended Marquette University in Milwaukee, Wis. He was stationed in the Philippines at the outbreak of the war and was a prisoner of war for 3½ years.

McAuliffes' Vacation Plans

MAJ. GEN. A. C. McAULIFFE and Mrs. McAuliffe will be spending a cool summer. In the middle of July they will be guests of Mrs. Robert E. Lee, 3d, at her mountain home in Flat Rock, N. C., and in August they will be going north, probably to Canada.

Rumors have been going around that souvenir ash trays are being made in Belgium with General McAuliffe's now-famous "nuts" written on them. During the Battle of Bastogne, "nuts" was the general's terse retort to the German surrender demands. The McAuliffes know nothing about the ashtrays dedicated to the Bastogne general. But in their home they do have a brass plaque about the size of a telephone base with the figure of the general and the "nuts," given to General McAuliffe by a soldier after the Battle of the Bulge.

The veterans of the Battle of Bastogne will meet again in Chicago for their annual reunion in September. Last year the get-together was held in New York.

Campaign for Members

THE SOLDIER, Sailor and Marine League of Washington is starting an intensive campaign for new members. Members of the committee and their guests will meet at the home of Mrs. Clifton B. Cates, wife of the commandant of the Marine Corps, for a report luncheon served buffet style on July 14.

The league, which is comprised of wives, sisters and mothers of men in service, is owned and operated by wives of officers for the benefit of enlisted men. The league clubhouse, located at 1015 L st. nw., provides beds for 147 men and operates a canteen which features good home cooking. During the war, the league served 5000 men a month and now takes care of approximately 2000 men.

Mrs. Cates is the committee chairman for new membership. Her assistants include Mrs. Alfred Noble, Mrs. Truman Landon, Mrs. Homer Case and Mrs. Luther Sheldon.

Miss Forrester Becomes Bride Of H. W. Ashby

Trinity Episcopal Church was the scene yesterday of the marriage of Miss Betty Lu Forrester, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David L. Forrester of Washington, and Harry W. Ashby, son of Capt. and Mrs. Harry C. Ashby of Cleveland, Ohio. The Rev. J. Brooke Mosley officiated at the ceremony which only the families and close friends attended.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white slipper satin and her veil of French illusion was held by a coronet of antique lace. She carried butterfly orchids on her satin-covered prayer book.

Mrs. Frank Gahen was the matron of honor and Alvin Nehrenz served as best man. The ushers were William R. McComb, Frank Gahen and Herbert Sargent.

Following the wedding breakfast which was held at the home of the bride's uncle, William R. McComb, the couple left for a short wedding trip. On their return, they will reside in Baltimore.

Miss Ladley, George Seitz Wed in Garden

Miss Alice Ladley, daughter of Mrs. Edwin Jackson Ladley, formerly of Pittsburgh, and George Franklin Seitz, jr., were married yesterday at the home of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Seitz, in Kenwood, Md.

The ceremony was held in the garden at 4:30 p. m. with the Rev. Stanley Lowell officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Charles Ladley. She wore a pink marquisette gown with full ankle-length skirt over taffeta with a matching pink hat and carried a spray of pink baby orchids.

Mrs. Robert Seitz, who was matron of honor, wore an apple-green taffeta frock with ballerina skirt and carried a muff of pink roses to match the rose coronet in her hair. Mr. Seitz, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

After a wedding trip to Miami, Fla., Mr. and Mrs. Seitz will live at 532 20th st. nw.

The bride attended Briarcliffe School in New York. Mr. Seitz served five years in the Army.

The wedding of Miss Rebecca Czok, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Czok of Chicago, Ill., and John Ballard Carpenter, son of Mrs. Angie B. Carpenter of Washington, took place at 6 last evening in the First Baptist Church with Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white marquisette made with lace insets and a full train. Her veil of French illusion was held in place by orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of white roses. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Florence Czok, as maid of honor, and by the Misses Angie Carpenter and Lady Ruth Smith.

Quinton Hodges was the best man, and ushering were Preston Bowling, John R. Ellis, Leighton A. Cain, Frank Ed McAnear and Thornton Sterling.

The bride was graduated from Bryant and Stratton College in Chicago and the bridegroom was graduated from Mississippi State College.

Freeman—Winterfeldt

Zweig
MRS. HAROLD FREEMAN
... former Miss Winterfeldt

Miss Vera Winterfeldt of Washington and Harold Freeman of Brooklyn, N. Y., were married July 4 at the home of Rabbi Alfred Jacobs, who officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Lucie Winterfeldt of this city. She was given in marriage by her brother, Helmut Winterfeldt of Bethesda, Md. She wore white silk with a yoke of lace and matching long gloves of lace. Her veil was held by a crown of pearls and orange blossoms and she carried a prayer book decorated with orchids.

Mrs. T. Porges, the bride's sister, who is visiting here from Tel-Aviv in the State of Israel, was matron of honor, and Suam Winterfeldt, the bride's niece, was flower girl. Sidney Freeman was best man for his brother.

A wedding dinner was served at Hotel Kenmore. After a wedding trip to Canada the couple will reside in Brooklyn.

Hoffman—Silverman

Miss Constance Eleanor Silverman of Washington and Irving Hoffman of Newark, Del., were married July 4 at B'nai Israel Congregation, with Rabbis Silverstone and Seigel officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Silverman and was given in marriage by her father. Her husband is the son of Mrs. Louis Hoffman of Newark, Del.

Ask Anne

I have tried your recipe for strawberry preserves, and it is far superior to any other one I have ever used. I would like to have a recipe for making sweet cucumber pickles (short method, preferable) and sweet mixed pickle. The recipes I have tried just do not have the sweet flavor and crispness of commercial pickles. H. E. B.

Here is a recipe for sweet cucumber pickles which can be made in a day. To insure a crisp pickle with this recipe, start with fresh cucumbers and do not let them boil in the syrup. Just bring to the boil.

BREAD AND BUTTER PICKLES

1 gallon cucumbers
8 small white onions
½ cup coarse salt

Select crisp, fresh cucumbers (4-5 inches long and an inch in diameter are ideal for size). Wash but do not peel. Slice crosswise in very thin slices. Slice onions thinly. Place in a large galvanized pan or crock and mix salt with cucumbers and onions. Bury ice in the mix (either a large piece or smaller ones from a refrigerator) and cover with a weighted lid. Let stand three hours. Drain. Make a syrup of:

4½ cups sugar
1½ teaspoons ground cloves
4 teaspoons mustard seed
1 teaspoon celery seed
5 cups mild vinegar

Pour syrup over the well-drained cucumbers. Place on a low flame and stir occasionally, using a wooden spoon. Heat to scalding, but do not boil. Pour into hot sterilized jars and seal.

The above recipe may also be used for mixed pickle. Instead of the sliced cucumbers, use cauliflower (broken in flowerettes), green tomatoes (cut in chunks), small pearl onions, green pepper and cucumber. Also, when using these vegetables, instead of bringing them to a boil and sealing, bring to a boil, place in the fruit jars but do not seal. The next day and for a total of three days, pour the syrup off, bring it to a boil and pour over the pickles in the jar. The third day, seal.

Chilling before serving also adds to the crispness of the pickles.

Can you tell me how to remove stubborn stains on stainless steel blades of sterling silver knives? A. C.

Dust a little scratchless cleansing powder on the steel blade and rub vigorously with a soft cloth. If this doesn't remove the stain, rub with very fine steel wool soap pads.

Sometime ago, I read of a way of repairing cracked china, namely to boil it in milk for about 10 minutes. I tried that twice with a cracked china cup of mine but it still leaks. Can you give me some better advice? R. C. J.

Even firms which professionally repair china do not have a method for filling cracks which they will guarantee. Little, therefore, can be expected of home remedies. Washing in warm water and the serving of hot beverages will melt or rinse out any preparation used. If the crack gives way while the cup is in use, considerable embarrassment and even serious damage can result.

I have recently purchased a cookie press, recipes for which were printed on the outside of the box. However, there are only three such recipes and I wonder where I can find others? Also, I would especially like to get a recipe for real Swedish "Spritzen," a cookie my mother used to make but for which I have never been able to find a "true" recipe. Do you or one of your readers have one available? N. C. MaD.

If you will write to the Home Service Department of any of the well known flour companies, they will be glad to supply you with additional recipes for cookie press cookies.

There seems to be a variety of Spritz or Spritzen recipes, each of which varies from the other just a little. Here is one recipe for Spritzen:

SPRITZEN COOKIES

2½ cups sifted cake flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup butter or margarine
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon almond extract
2 egg yolks, beaten
1 egg white
1 teaspoon water
coarse sugar crystals

Mix flour and salt. Cream butter until soft; beat in powdered sugar, add almond extract and egg yolks. Gradually stir in flour mixture; chill. Pack dough in cookie press; use various forms of discs or nozzles to make shapes. Press shapes on ungreased baking sheet; brush with egg white and water, beaten together until frothy, and sprinkle with coarse sugar crystals, colored or plain. Bake in moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.) about 8 minutes, or until delicately browned. Approximate yield: 5 dozen cookies.

Do you know where I may get the recipe to a Greek pastry called "Bucklavah" (spelled phonetically). It appears to have cocoanut in it along with other ingredients. I tasted it at a Greek wedding reception. 'Tis delicious. H. C. R.

The chef of a Greek restaurant has given me the ingredients and suggestions as to how they are combined. He was not able to give the exact amounts of the ingredients, but in a recipe of this sort you can probably work the amounts out quite easily.

The ingredients for Baklava are: crushed almonds and walnuts, butter, pie crust, syrup and honey. Here is how they are combined: Make a rich pie crust, roll it very, very thin (as thin as a sheet of newspaper, the chef said) and line a baking pan with the crust. (Make enough crust at once for four or five thin layers.) Now, on top of the crust place a quarter-inch-thick layer of crushed nuts. Over the nuts spread softened butter. On top of butter place another layer of thin pie crust and continue until the pastry is 1¼ to 1½ inch thick. End with a layer of pastry on top. Before baking, cut it into serving size pieces and bake in a slow oven (325 degrees F.) for an hour or so. When done and while hot, pour a mixture of cold syrup and honey over the pastry. Set it aside to allow the syrup and honey time to soak into the pastry before serving.

Old Freight Car Answers Couple's Housing Problem

By Dorothy Draper

I HEARD a story the other day about a young couple in the Northwest who settled their housing problem with ingenuity and great flair.

Let's call them Jim and Peggy. When they first married, they bought a lot overlooking a lake and had intended building "the perfect house," but when they found out about building costs they gave up, temporarily. Or Jim did. He decided that they might as well make up their minds to stick it out with the family.

But Peggy got busy. She examined every possibility in the neighborhood. Then one day she met Jim with shining eyes and drove him down to the old unused siding next to the station. "We've just bought that freight car," she said, trying not to burst with excitement. "It's going to be moved tomorrow and we'll have it fixed up in no time."

Like all husbands, at first Jim was speechless, then he was skeptical when he began to inherit some of Peggy's goose pimples of enthusiasm. So they had the freight car moved down under the tall pine trees overlooking the water.

They soon transformed the freight car into a cheerful Bavarian Alps cottage. They painted the outside dark brown with white windows and added solid shutters painted light blue, stenciled with red hearts and flowers.

INSIDE they stained the walls and ceilings dark brown, and covered the floor with bright lipstick-red linoleum. Then they built two comfortable bunks, one above the other across one end, and inclosed them with a wooden frame, like a recessed peasant bed, painted light blue, and gayly stenciled. The opening was hung with curtains made from new red-and-white patchwork quilts with matching bedspreads bought at a department store.

Across the other end, they installed a sink, and built shelves, painted light blue, and edged with perky ruffles of white eyelet embroidery. Jim and a friend filled the wide opening of the freight car doors with a glass sash and put in three windows and a door, with a little gypsy flight of steps leading up to the "cottage."

Picture the starched white petticoat-ruffle curtains at the windows, two big school maps against the brown wall, shiny copper pots, table and easy chairs!

Although the freight car idea may sound impractical, any one-room prefabricated cottage could be made just as adorable!

On Theory That ALL Men Want Mothering, Woman Tries to Coddle Her Independent Husband, But He Has No Interest in It

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Do ALL men want "mothering," as your answers to letters seem to indicate?

I see no signs of such need in my husband. He is of a very independent nature. He needs a wife, yes; but not a "mother-wife."

I would love to "mother" him and show fond solicitude—or "make over" him, as the saying goes—in all sorts of ways; but I don't get a chance.

He has a very undemonstrative nature, due to early experiences in life, I believe. His mother has much the same nature or emotional make-up.

Is there any way a wife can break through this reserved or withdrawn attitude and help her husband express himself with some warmth and ease? E. L.

Who Says All Men Want Mothering?

DEAR E. L.: I've never said, and as yet I'm not prepared to believe, that ALL men want mothering.

What my writings have indicated is that there is a rising new school of thought amongst psychoanalysts—those to whom I refer are men,—who, having searched their own souls, and having studied the psyches of some of their candid brethren, are of the earnest conviction that men ARE babies.

That is to say, these spokesmen for the brawny sex swear and affirm that they wish women would love them as if they were babies, and yet at the same time humor them in the overt theory that they are heroes, omnipotent and all-wise.

Her Man Isn't The Cuddly Type

MY MIND is open to the idea, as to any clue which may point up new facets of truth; and as I turn the idea over in mind and test it against past and present observations of masculine reaction to various types of feminine behavior, I am rather persuaded there is something to it.

However, it certainly doesn't follow, necessarily, that because some men admit they want "mothering" in marriage, therefore all men will want the same; nor even that those who do will want an identical brand of wife-mothering.

Your husband, for instance, the self-contained son of an equally self-contained mother, would hardly be a logical candidate for warm-hearted wife-mothering. He probably would feel as out of his element in that atmosphere as a polar bear in hot water.

Respect Reserve In Kindly Spirit

ON THE one hand, there is the likelihood that, owing to his mother's "refrigerating" effect on his sensibilities in early years, he has an indifferent, if not indeed a hostile rejecting attitude, towards the mother-image. And on the other hand, assuming he is deeply imbued with amiable respect for her, then if he vaguely wants wife-mothering—his taste probably would incline to the unfussy brand to the cool competent laconic household queen.

Thus I advise you NOT to try to break through his reserve. Rather, show consideration by sympathetically respecting it. Give him—but kindly—a sense of privacy and elbow room in conjugal relationship; which is the intimate treatment best calculated to win a relaxed responsive reaction from the schizoid (or withdrawn) personality. M. H.

Do you want to rent a hat? Renee Boetschi's unusual hat shop in Beverly Hills, Calif., rents hats to women for an evening, a week-end or even for a trip. Here Miss Boetschi, standing, shows some of her rented hats to her customers, Mrs. George B. Seitz, jr., (seated left) and Patricia Browne, who seem well pleased with her selections

Lend-Lease Millinery Shop Rents Hats in Hollywood

Beverly Hills, Calif., July 10 (AP). You can't buy a hat at Renee Boetschi's hat shop.

Renee carries nothing but the finest chapeaux from the finest American and French designers, but her hats are not for sale—they are for rent.

This lend-lease hat shop was established for women who believe that variety in their hat wardrobe will do a lot for their morale, at a reasonable price. Because it's variety that counts, Miss Boetschi plans to have new hats flown in regularly from Paris and New York in addition to those she buys in California.

Something Different

It was the combination of high prices and the added stimulus of "something different" that prompted Miss Boetschi to open her unique hat service.

"Many women," she says, "want to look chic, but cannot afford special hats for special occasions or costumes. By renting their hats they can have three for the price one would cost."

You can rent a hat for an evening, a weekend or for a trip; even a group of hats for an entire wedding party. Each hat is disinfected by a new light ray method before being sent out again.

Prospective renters must leave a deposit and sign a contract agreeing to return the hat or hats within a specified time. Charges are based on the number of hats and the length of time they are kept. Domestic hats rent for $5 for 24 hours; it's $7.50 for an imported model.

To eliminate the embarrassing possibility of a client recognizing a hat she has worn the week before, Renee keeps a detailed file on each customer. There are no duplicate hats in the collection. Many of her customers are Hollywood actresses, and other fashion-conscious women in Los Angeles, Hollywood and Beverly Hills who say they've found the shop a practical solution to their hat problems.

Decorator for King

Born and educated in Brussels, Renee studied to be an interior decorator. Her last job before leaving Belgium for the United States was assisting in the decorating of a miniature Swiss castle on the estate of King Leopold as his Christmas gift to his children.

Her arrival in this country and the outbreak of the war occurred almost simultaneously, so she settled down to interior decorating—until she hit upon another way to make a living, renting hats.

The Family Scrapbook

Summer Play for All The Family

Dr. Ernest O. Osborne

Most children enjoy having Mom and Dad participate in some of their play activities.

Summer is a particularly good time for play in which all the family can participate. If it's a trip to the beach, youngsters get a "big kick" out of having Dad help them build a sand castle, especially if it is constructed at the edge of the surf so that it can keep the water out. The beach is particularly suitable for ball play, too, and again all the family can get in on this.

Fishing in stream, lake or surf is another activity that family members can enjoy together. Hiking and swimming are "naturals" for family centered activity. Indeed, almost all the things that are fun to do in summertime can be enjoyed by the entire family.

Quiet Pre-Convention Mood in Philadelphia

arms here. With handsomely tanned Senator Scott Lucas, who is a possibility for Vice President honors, and Senator Myers of Pennsylvania, the Senate glamour boys were the center of attention in the Bellevue-Stratford lobby. Surrounded by press and politicians they stood in front of President Truman's photograph, which is nicely sloganed "Our goal must not be peace in our time but peace for all time."

Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, sister of former Senator Guffey is the convention's official hostess. Wives of delegates and alternates will have a whopping time. The ladies program starts with a sightseeing tour of Valley Forge on Sunday, gala opening of the women's committee headquarters in the Burgundy Room Monday at 8:30 a. m., a Philadelphia scrapple breakfast with "prominent speakers" as sauce for scrapple, and a tea and musical at International House Tuesday. But biggest social treat will be a reception for Cabinet wives that same afternoon. Working down through Wednesday there's a millinery show in the women's headquarters, a fashion show and tea the following afternoon at John Wanamaker's.

Contract League Meets

Bridge Experts Compete At Annapolis Tourney

Annapolis, Md., July 10.—The twelfth annual Carvel Hall Duplicate Bridge Tournament for national master points of the American Contract Bridge League brought many notables of the bridge world to Annapolis last weekend. The tournament opened the night of July 2 with the women's pair and men's pair events. Local players and Naval Academy Club players joined in the competition with the visiting national masters, who included defending champions William E. McKenney, Charles H. Goren, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Solomon and others.

Mrs. A. M. Bowen, jr., entertained at a bridge-luncheon on Tuesday at the home of her parents, Prof. and Mrs. Charles H. Rawlins, in honor of Miss Enid Vose, who with her parents, Rear Admiral William C. Vose and Mrs. Vose left Annapolis this week for their new home in Amherst, N. H. Guests at the party included Mrs. Hubbel Y. Davidson, Mrs. Reginald S. Workman, Mrs. William Spiegel, Mrs. Donald E. Rockwell, Mrs. William C. Vose, jr., Misses Sally Welch, Mary Gilmore, Virginia Compton and Jane C. Ward.

Capt. Charles L. Freeman, former commander of the presidential yacht Williamsburg, took command the first of this month of the United States Naval Station here. The station covers all the subordinate activities of the Severn River Naval Command except the Naval Academy. Captain Freeman succeeds Capt. Wallis F. Petersen, who turned over his command at ceremonies attended by Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., superintendent of the Naval Academy and station personnel. Captain Petersen will shortly take command of the light cruiser Manchester.

Farewell Parties Given

Captain and Mrs. Petersen left Annapolis during the week, after many parties given in farewell to them by their numerous friends on the station. Among the parties was one the officers attached to the naval station and their wives gave. It was a supper party in the recreation room at the Naval Engineering Experimental Station.

The first in a series of buffet suppers was held on Sunday evening from 6:30 to 8 o'clock at Alumni House. When weather permits, these suppers are served in the patio, a pleasant setting for warm summer evenings.

Ann McCormick Stribling, infant daughter of Lieut. John W. Stribling, jr., USN, and Mrs. Stribling, was christened on Sunday in St. Anne's Church with the Rev. C. Edward Berger, rector, officiating. Godparents for the baby, who is named for her paternal great-great-grandmother, were Lieut. William H. Alexander 2d, USN; Miss Serena Simmons of Charleston, S. C., and Mrs. Thomas Nelson Coppage of Washington, D. C.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Stribling, sr., entertained informally at their home.

Mrs. Wells Hunt and Mrs. C. Rosse of Severna Park, were hostesses at a miscellaneous shower given at the home of Mrs. Rosse in honor of Miss Betty Rosina Piehler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick William Piehler, who was to become the bride of Leonard Joseph Myers, jr., July 10.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Rawlings of Arundel-on-the-Bay, announce the marriage of their daughter, Helen Belva, to Arthur Gambrill Jarboe, son of Mrs. Eugene Jarboe of Sherwood Forest, and the late Mr. Jarboe.

The ceremony was performed on Friday night at St. Alban's Rectory, Glen Burnie, by the uncle of the bride, the Rev. Gilbert Hill, jr.

The young couple are on a wedding trip through the Shenandoah Valley and upon their return will reside in West Annapolis.

Newlyweds Return

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Baldwin, jr., who were married in June at the home of the bride, the former Miss Eleanor Mead Griesemer, of Chevy Chase, Md., have returned from a wedding trip to Martha's Vineyard, Mass., and are now at home here. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Elmer T. Fisher, pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Bethesda, Md.

Don't Simmer In Summer

"It's only a state of mind," people say about the heat; and they are often right. Hide the fireplace behind a cool green screen of flowers and plants in sweltering weather and you banish a constant reminder of heat

"Is it hot enough for you?" is an idle question these days. Here are practical suggestions from the Construction Research Bureau, which will make your home more comfortable for the dog days ahead.

First, to feel cool you must look cool and look at cool things. Store winter rugs, heavy draperies, bric-a-brac and dust-catching pictures, and your rooms will appear cooler. Light-colored slipcovers on all furniture and even on radiators will add to that North Pole effect.

Use cool colors such as ice-blue, sea-green, snow-white; place lots of green growing plants, sprays of greens and cut flowers in your rooms. These will remind you of cool gardens, and the moisture given off by the plants actually helps to cool the air. Insulate the house with mineral wool.

Hide all heat-reminders, including fireplace, heaters, blankets. Not only will the house be easier to care for during the hot weather, but the psychological effect will also aid in making you feel cooler. Notice adjoining photos for other cool suggestions.

Your home can be made as much as 15 degrees cooler in the summer if you insulate with full, thick, mineral wool. This helps prevent the flow of the concentrated heat of the summer sun from entering your home

Use electric bulbs of smaller wattage wherever possible during the summer months, they give off less heat. Bulbs with pale blue light appear cooler than stark white bulbs

Wring out bed sheets in cold water; hang before open windows. Warm air coming in will be cooled by the moisture and lower temperature

RIGHT:

An electric fan isn't of much use if it merely circulates warm air. Place a bowl filled with ice cubes in front of the fan. This will both cool and humidify the room

LEFT:

Do the family ironing during the cool, early morning hours of sweltering days

90 New Homes Planned for Silver Spring

Local builders broke out in a rash of building plans here this week, topped by plans for 90 new homes in the Glenmont Forest section of Silver Spring, Md.

The 90 new homes are part of a planned 265-dwelling project of two-story frame and asbestos-siding homes.

Other announced home building plans included:

Forty-eight two-story brick houses in Oak View, on New Hampshire ave. extended, in Montgomery County, Md., by Parkview Builders. Sub-bids are already being taken.

Thirty two-story brick homes, also in Oak View, by Light Development Corp. Sub-contractors are now submitting bids.

Sixteen homes on Northfield st. and nine on Huntington pkwy. in Greenwich Forest, Md., by Ornstein Construction Co. A building permit has been issued for the two-story brick homes. The floor area is 29 by 24 feet.

Five homes by Richard F. Claggett; two will be erected on Broxburn dr. and three in the 9500 block of Page ave., Bethesda, Md. Homes will be 1½ stories, of brick, measuring 45 by 32 feet.

Permits for three more homes in the Alta Vista Terrace subdivision, off Old Georgetown rd., Bethesda, have been issued to Charles Howard of Cambridge Construction Co.

Bowling and Gardiner will build eight two-story brick homes in the 5300 block of McKinley st., Glenwood, Md. A permit application has been filed.

An Altoona, Pa., building firm, Moyer Bros., submitted the low bid of $426,000 in competition for a contract to erect the 34-bed Garrett County Memorial Hospital at Oakland, Md. Jas. J. Baldwin of Washington is the architect.

Lustron Firm To Announce D. C. Dealer

The local distributor for the Lustron Corp., producers of a revolutionary-type porcelain enamel steel prefab house, will be named next Saturday or Sunday, it was indicated yesterday.

Rumors that the dealer would be revealed today set off a flood of telephone inquiries to this newspaper last week, with prospective customers anxious to get their names in first to the new dealer.

A Lustron model home has been on exhibition for several weeks at New Hampshire ave. and Rock Creek pkwy. nw., with the Veterans of Foreign Wars as sponsors.

Informed sources in the prefab field said the new dealer would be a newcomer to the local real estate and building circles. A corporation is now being formed to build and sell the unique homes locally.

Broyhill to Build

Herbert C. Broyhill will erect eight two-story brick homes in the 2500 block of 23d st. N., Arlington, under terms of a recent building permit.

'Monterey Modern' Soothes Builder's Headache

Hilly Lots, Aspirin Tablets Go Together

This is how it will look when finished. Estimated price is $16,500

Stone's "Monterey-Modern," under construction in Hillcrest Gardens, Md.

ROLLING ground and aspirin tablets often go together in the building game. Erecting a home on terra firma with a roller-coaster complex has given many an engineering headache to local construction crews.

Builder Paul P. Stone has evolved a "headache-less" floor plan, with credit to Mexican architecture, especially designed for hillside lots. The home, already under roof, will be a star attraction in the coming "Homes of '48" exhibition sponsored by 10 builders, 10 furniture stores and The Washington Post.

Priced at an estimated $16,500, it will be furnished by the Wm. E. Miller Furniture Co.

As previously announced in The Washington Post, the exhibition of furnished homes will open September 12 for a four-week run. Homes are located in all sections of the metropolitan area, priced from $15,000 to $45,000.

BRADY

Stone's "Monterey-Modern" is his answer to steeply graded lots. Entrance is on the ground floor through a 15-by-15-foot reception recreation room. Two sliding-closet arrangements, one for clothing, one a cleverly concealed bar, take care of storage and refreshment problems.

A built-in garage and large furnace-laundry room complete the remainder of the ground floor. The stairway to the first floor features a large glass block wall. Glass block is also used in two panels at the ground floor's recessed entrance.

The Mexican influence is predominant in the first floor recessed balcony, enclosed by decorative iron grill work. The 13-by-17-foot living room opens into the cool balcony, where the family can enjoy prevailing breezes on a hot summer day.

A ceiling-to-floor picture window serves as a wall between the dining room and balcony. The liv-The home is situated on a 60x110 lot.

The "Monterey-Modern" is located at 3603 28th ave., one of 95 homes completed or under way in Stone's Hillcrest Heights-Hillcrest Gardens subdivision, off Branch ave., in nearby Prince Georges County, Md. Around 450 homes in all are planned for the large development.

John Miller, general manager of the William E. Miller Furniture Co., is attending a furniture show at Chicago's famed Merchandise Mart, where he hopes to pick up scores of novel furnishings for the Stone home.

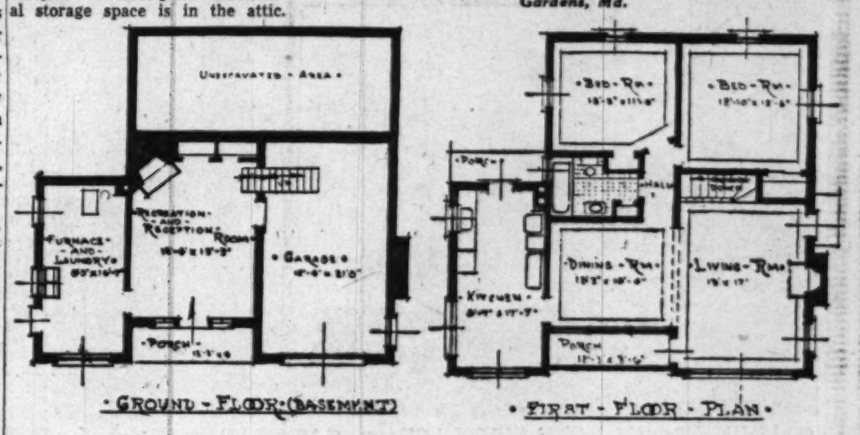
Other builders and furniture dealers in the huge "Homes of '48" furnished-home exhibition are working steadily on plans for their exhibit homes. As previously announced the homes will not be opened to the public before 12:30 p. m., September 12. Admission will be free and printed copies of a map and route list will be furnished by The Washington Post.

LOCAL AND NATIONAL housing leaders have unanimously indorsed the event. The latest comment came this week from Hobart C. Brady, Wichita, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. He said: "Expositions such as this do much to keep the public informed of the tremendous strides accomplished by the home-building industry in general.

"Despite shortages, rising living and construction costs, and Government interference we are proud to publicize the fact that since VJ-Day over six million people have been provided with new housing," he emphasized.

ing room also boasts a huge picture window looking out onto the street.

A FUNCTIONAL "U"-shaped kitchen, with breakfast nook, plus two good-sized bedrooms and bath complete the floor plan. Additional storage space is in the attic.



Park Lane Remodeled

The Park Lane, 270-unit apartment building at 21st and Pennsylvania ave. nw. is converting four of it 11 floors for use by doctors, dentists and other professional men, it was announced Saturday.

New medical facilities, including pathological, dental, X-ray and radiologist laboratories will be complete within six months, according to the Leo Bernstein Co., agents.

Home to Build Addition

A $197,000 addition to the Asbury Methodist Home for the Aged, in Gaithersburg, Md., will be erected by Zerkel Construction Co., 1011 20th st. nw.

Kelley Lumber Co. Reopens

The J. Frank Kelley Lumber Co., Inc., 2121 Georgia ave. nw., opened its new building this week, 14 months after fire of undetermined origin put it out of business on May 4, 1947.

A $90,000 reconstruction program put the firm back in business. The main building is two stories, built of brick, steel and concrete, with a 75-foot frontage on Georgia ave. Samuel Alpher was the builder, Charles W. Koch, architect.

Established in 1921 under the firm name of Taylor & Kelley, the corporation has expanded into one of the largest lumber firms in the area. Since the death of J. Frank Kelley in 1937, it has been operated by J. S. Kelley.

Webster College Plans One-Story Addition

A one-story brick addition to the Marjorie Webster Junior College, 17th st. and Kalmia rd. nw., will be erected by Martin Bros., builders. Sub-bids are being taken.

Historic Fabrics On Display Here

A special showing of historic American fabrics, reproductions of Colonial Williamsburg, the White House, Monticello, Kenmore and other historic buildings are on display at Top Recker, interior decorating shop at 115 S. Royal st., Alexandria.

The reproductions are by Scalamandre Silks and F. Schumacher. They will be on exhibition until July 31.

Jap Petunia Seeds Due Here in Fall

Imports of double petunia seed, which produce rare plants bearing double blossoms, will be received from Japan this fall for the first time since before the war, according to the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations.

It is estimated that Japan will export in October about 10 pounds of double petunia seed. None will be sold in Japan. A 20-pound harvest is planned for 1949, which will about equal the amount exported annually at prewar prices ranging from $250 to $300 an ounce. An ounce contains about 280,000 seeds.

Japanese horticulturists have monopolized world production of double petunia seed since developing the garden oddity in 1900.

Solar Heat Explained

Solar houses use any common type of heating system which permits shutting off heat quickly when solar heat is coming in, yet supplies heat rapidly when solar heat is not available, according to heating experts.

Realty Roundup

"THE OUTLOOK FOR CONSTRUCTION" will be discussed by Ewan Clague, Commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, at the luncheon meeting of the Washington Building Congress, 12:30 p.m. Monday at the Mayflower Hotel. Clague will answer questions at the end of his talk.

CLAGUE

Commissioner Clague started his Government career in the Bureau of Labor Statistics, making statistical studies of labor productivity in industry. After association with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., Yale University and Social Security Board, he became head of BLS in 1946.

Construction Forecast: The value of new construction this year is expected to total about 16.4 billion dollars, according to a revised forecast prepared by Miles L. Colean, economic consultant. The report said more materials are available, with the exception of metals and millwork. No prospect for cost reductions this year were seen.

PERSONALS: Victor Wickersham, head of his own realty company here, was returned to Congress by voters in the Seventh Congressional District in Oklahoma during the recent primaries. Winning the primary is equivalent to election. . . . He will keep his realty interests here, however. . . . J. Wesley Buchanan, builder, has been named a judge in a Nation-wide contest to select the best residential communities, garden apartments and suburban shopping centers. Sponsored by the National Association of Home Builders, the contest is designed to stimulate construction of better residential communities. Models and pictures of the national winners will be displayed at the 1949 Home Builders Exposition in Chicago next February. Buchanan is well known for his interest in community planning.

BUCHANAN

NOTES FROM ALL OVER: Herb Nelson, NAREB'S executive vice president, writes from Copenhagen, Denmark: "All vacancies in rental property here are reported to official local committees, which parcel them out to tenants on the basis of a priority system. Families with children get first call on vacancies. This has resulted in a curious social development. Some couples decide to start their families before marriage so they can be eligible for a high priority for an apartment as soon as the wedding bells ring." . . . Lustron has come out with another full page ad in Life, July 12th issue . . . Washington Building Congress members are still recovering from their summer outing on Friday at Manor Club.

Congress Apartments Plans Near Completion

Final building plans are in progress for the 550-unit Congress Apartments project to be erected at Congress and Savannah sts. se., by O'Driscoll Construction Corp. of New York. No date has been set for ground breaking, however.

At Home Show:
Dustless Furniture Is Trend

CHICAGO, July 10 (AP).—Furniture makers are answering the housewife's two big postwar problems—a smaller home and lack of household help.

A trend toward smaller and more double-duty furniture and toward lighter finishes that do not show dust was observed at the International Homefurnishings Market this week at the Merchandise Mart.

Three trade officials discussed the trends at a news conference. They were Burton R. Tuxford, vice president and sales manager of the Drexel Furniture Co., Drexel, N. C.; Frier McCollister, merchandising manager of the Simmons Co., Chicago, and Elliott S. Wood, president of Heritage Furniture, Inc., High Point, N. C.

McCollister told the conference that high building costs have forced new home owners to reduce the sizes of their houses and that consequently "You must make space work for you 24 hours a day."

This, the three men said, has led to a revival in popularity of sofa beds, hide-away beds, drop-leaf and extension tables, and smaller living room furniture.

Wood said large, overstuffed furniture now is the hardest item in the field to unload.

He also said functional qualities are being introduced into traditional designs because many consumers want double-duty features but do not want their furniture modern in styling.

For the housewife who cannot find household help, furniture makers are developing more and more pieces with smooth surfaces and lighter finishing.

Asked about price trends, the speakers agreed there is little possibility of lowering prices.

Tuxford cited figures to show that since 1939 furniture costs have risen 72.3 per cent, as compared with a 243.1 per cent rise in wages and a 244.5 per cent boost in lumber costs.

Asked whether the supply can meet demand at the show, Wood said, "We are closer to taking care of the supply now than we have been for a good many years."

New Type Wallpapers Resemble Everything Except Wallpaper

"Bamboo Weave" wallpaper goes fine with reed furniture

The Washington Post

"Scenics," resembling large murals, are highly popular

By Conrad P. Harness

WALL PAPER that looks like everything except wall paper is the latest temptation to the family budget.

Knotty pine walls for the boy's room, American walnut grain for the living room, a dainty marble for a first-floor powder room, a marble grain for the upstairs bath, a bamboo weave for the sun porch, all are available in lithographed wall paper that looks like the real thing.

Called "Tru-grain," it is so photographically perfect the result is startling—the effect breathtaking. The manufacturers aren't missing a bet. To cash in on the vogue for rattan and reed furniture in living rooms, playrooms, rumpus rooms, or sun porchs, they've put out a bamboo weave which you have to feel before you can believe it's not the real McCoy.

Since executives have always gone overboard for expensive wood paneling, Tru-grain American walnut wall paper has made its debut. The cost is a trifle compared to genuine wood.

THESE AUTHENTIC reproductions are made by highly trained artisans and modern equipment. The original panel of wood or selected marble is photographed by one of the world's largest cameras which makes a negative the exact size.

Enlargements or distortions are thereby eliminated. Copper etchings made from these negatives impress the photographic image directly on the paper. The result is a realistic facsimile of the original panel.

Plastic inks are used in the printing, and a covering layer of cellulose plastic over the entire surface. Junior must wear out the plastic coating before he can play havoc with the printed surface.

The wall coverings are guaranteed water and alcohol resistant, stain, grease and scuff proof and sun fast. Soiled wall papers are given new life with a rich lather of mild soap and warm water. Wax, varnish and valspar can be applied on the top of Tru-grain papers, although it isn't necessary.

The name "wall" paper doesn't cover all possibilities.

Applied to an office floor, Tru-Grain has stood up well for 16 months. It was coated with four applications of clear varnish which was renewed six months later. Each weekend it was scrubbed with soap and water for cleaning.

ANOTHER NEW SMART postwar fabric, easy to clean, is Sanitas wall paper. Formerly used only in the kitchen and bath room, it is now decorating the remainder of the home. Its claim to fame is based on its fabric base which makes it a permanent washable covering. It will preserve and strengthen plaster surfaces, and minimize cracks and patches. Fine patterns are available for under $3 for a 3-yard roll, 48 inches wide.

The wall covering business is booming in Washington. Miss Hildred Natalie Royston, head stylist for Union Wallpaper & Paint Co., a large local outlet, said the industry's technical progress has won it customers.

In addition, scores of colorful patterns unavailable during the war have reappeared. A shortage of pigments left the wallpaper industry with only soft pastel shades to show customers during the war years. Now the buying public is choosing bright, oversized patterns, she explained.

Scenics, those large hand-printed pieces which look like murals, have become best-sellers. Ranging in price from $25 to $111 (in sheets covering a lineal wall space of 13 feet 6 inches), they add a touch of distinction to any home.

Typical subjects for scenic murals are: a Devonshire hunt scene, tropical foliage, Old Salem waterfront, huge hydrangeas, Chinese mountain scenes of Ming design, Louisiana mural of the old South, floral designs, etc.

Miss Royston said a favorite use of scenics was as one unit on the most important wall, with complimentary paper or paint on the other walls.

Typhoon Fighters Consider Dry Ice

MANILA (AP).—Science may be summoned to the aid of the Philippines in the age-old struggle against typhoons.

Congress is considering a proposal for the establishment of a typhoon commission which, with a million dollars behind it, would assemble a board of scientists and experts to study and (they hope) eliminate the typhoon. The proposal suggests that the commission find ways and means of:

1. Dissipating the destructive force of the typhoons.
2. Deflecting their paths from the country.

One suggestion, made by the scientist, Dr. Irving Langmuir, was that the course of a storm might be altered by starting another small artificial storm near the path of the larger one. Or if dry ice pellets, silver iodine or some other cooling crystal were tossed into a typhoon's swirling center before it hit the islands, condensation of the vapor should result in nothing more than a downpour at sea.

Pest War Moves Indoors

Aerosol Fog Dooms Insects Inside Home

Fog dissipates slowly until windows are opened

By Eloise Davidson

NEW YORK, July 10.—One of the newest and most practical methods of attacking household pests and insects is an aerosol fog. This method has been well tested out of doors, but only recently has it been used to any extent in homes.

Any insects on the wing—flies, mosquitoes, book lice, silverfish, roaches, weevils, moths—that come in contact with this aerosol fog are speedily killed. There is no evidence that this fog has enough penetration to render eggs or larvae inactive. But there is considerable evidence that pests which have hidden away during a fogging meet their Waterloo when they crawl over surfaces covered with the invisible residue left after the fog has cleared away.

This fog is generated under heat and ejected by special fogging equipment made by Todd Shipyards. It is composed of a finely divided solvent in which insecticides are dissolved. The dense fog is generated by a machine called "Todd Insecticidal Fog Applicator" or "Tifa."

This machine works on a jet propulsion principle and ejects a fog persistent enough to hang in the air and penetrating enough to get into cracks, crevices, behind pictures, baseboards, into corners. A whole house can be fogged in one half to three quarters of an hour. The mist hangs in the air and deposits an invisible film on all surfaces as long as the house is kept closed.

Vapor Is Stainless

THE solution from which the fog is made is fed into a generator from containers on the back of the jeep or truck. A blast of hot air generated by a gasoline-driven engine atomizes it into billions of tiny particles, forming a dense white vapor. This vapor is introduced into the house through a sizable hose until all the rooms are filled to overflowing. The fog is dry and leaves no stain or discoloration on clothes, silver, walls, carpets. Bouquets of flowers and leaves in the house shown in the picture were not affected by it.

The Tifa fog generator has been used on beaches, race tracks, resorts, ranches, garbage dumps, warehouses. It's been used to free yards, parks and estates from annoying insects and garden pests, to rid a garden of bugs for a party or an outdoor wedding. Laundries, warehouses, dairies, delicatessens, restaurants use it to kill flying moths and roaches. Farmers have relied on it for plant protection.

Jones Beach is fogged regularly to free it of mosquitoes and sand flies. Playgrounds in some areas are sprayed regularly as a health measure and for the comfort of the children.

Only recently have custom foggers been spraying homes. Here's how it is done in New York: Contact a custom fogger for an estimate of what it will cost to have an aerosol fogging given to your home. Decide on a suitable time and make arrangements to have people and pets out of the house.

Smells of Pine

AT THE appointed time the custom fogger will arrive and park his bright red jeep as near as possible to a window or door through which he can insert a fogging hose. The machine is started and the house is filled with heavy white fog that smells slightly of pine—filled till it seeps out around the tightly closed windows.

All inside doors and closets are left open so the fog can circulate easily. When the house is filled, the fogging ceases but it is allowed to hang in the closed-up house from three to six hours or longer. In factories, restaurants, delicatessens, commercial establishments it often is left all night. The longer it remains the more lasting the effect.

This fog dissipates very slowly until windows and doors are opened so it can be carried out by a draft.

To get some idea of cost, we checked on the fogging of a house in lower Manhattan. It was estimated that there were 75,000 cubic feet of space in the five-story brownstone which houses six families. The fogging solution used in this instance was 10 per cent DDT, 5 per cent chlordane in a special aromatic fog oil. About one and one-half gallons of the mixture was used. At $1 per 1000 cubic feet, the cost was figured at approximately $75, which is about what a custom fogger would charge in most localities.

Looks Like Smoke

WE WATCHED with great interest the fogging of this house. One sidelight was that when the fog leaks out of windows and cracks in walls, etc., the house looks as if it were filled with smoke. The fire department was advised to ignore alarms telephoned in by neighbors.

Tests reported by New York State entomologists in fogging out a moth-infested wool warehouse in Albany and a roach-infested public building in Sampson, N. Y., convince one that the future of

Dust in City Air Increases A-Bomb Blast

Iowa City, Iowa, July 10 (AP).—Dust and smoke in city air can make an atomic bomb explosion a little more destructive. The blast drives the tiny particles of dirt and dust with sand-blasting effect against buildings. Thus Pittsburgh would suffer more from this kind of additional damage than a city like Miami.

At Hiroshima, the dusty air sandpapered pieces of granite at distances of a quarter mile to a mile away from the center of the explosion, says Dr. Allen C. Tester, professor of geology at the University of Iowa. Professor Tester, then with the Army Engineers, visited Hiroshima 10 months after the bombing. There were reports then, he said, that the heat of the bomb had blistered roofing tile at distances of 4000 feet, and had blistered or fused granite at great distances.

But Professor Tester believes that the fireball formed by the bomb didn't affect buildings at distances of much more than 500 feet. The heat waves did affect humans at much greater distances. Paint on a steel radio tower 500 feet from zero was not blistered. But some steel objects were given a polish by the fast-moving dust and air. Concussion rather than heat was the main force responsible for the major strains and weaknesses that damaged building materials, Professor Tester said.

Planes 'Keep 'Em Down On the Farm'

By Dwight McCormack

DES MOINES, July 10.—"How ya gonna keep 'em down on the farm?"

"Just buy them an airplane," says Norbert Locke.

Locke, director of the Iowa Aeronautics Commission, cites 2500 farmer-aviators in Iowa, a large portion of whom have their own planes.

"A plane takes the monotony out of farm life," he explains. "The city no longer is far away, even with automobiles. And a plane has social advantages as well as practical benefits."

Many farmers have landing facilities in their pastures and have their own small hangars.

Many are members of a three-year-old organization known as the Iowa Flying Farmers Association. At the group's most recent State convention, 500 air-minded farmers arrived in approximately 200 planes.

"The airplane is making life on the farm a lot easier," Locke said, "and the use of a plane is becoming more and more practical.

"The average flying farmer makes about 100 trips a month to cities near or far for parts or supplies. In the harvest or planting seasons he'll use his plane more times than that.

Sometimes flying farmers take eggs, cream or other such items of similar bulk to market by plane. This speeds up the trip and gives the farmer extra time for other duties.

Most every sizable town in the State has at least a landing field, and cities generally have well-improved airports. Many farmers have found a plane can be used to advantage in dusting fields of crops or in making surveys for drainage, weed control and erosion projects.

Clew Found To Cut Heavy Grain Losses

By Kris Kreeger

New Orleans, July 10 (AP).—By slowing down the breathing of seeds, government scientists have found clews to saving millions of dollars a year in losses of stored grains.

Chemical sprays, developed in years of research, have nearly eliminated the deterioration process in the laboratory and in some commercial experiments.

Heat produced by breathing causes most of the deterioration. Chemicals prevent heat slowing down or stopping breathing by action on enzymes, organic substances in all living matter, which affect vital processes.

In tests on cottonseed and rice, a single spraying has been as effective as many repetitions of the mechanical cooling methods in general use.

Directing the work is Dr. Aaron Altschul of the Agriculture Department. The problem of storing grains and seeds is an acute one, particularly in the Southeastern area where average temperature and humidity are both relatively high. Dr. Altschul estimates 20 to 50 per cent of stored cottonseed may be subject to loss.

The matter is so important that Mills in Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana and Texas are testing commercial sprays. Seeds "respire' or breathe much as human beings do. When quantities of seeds are piled in storage, the breathing creates a warm, moist atmosphere "like a room full of people." The heat breaks up the chemical composition of the seed. For instance in cottonseed fatty acids might be produced, making the seed useless for food oil and fit only for soap. The heat might even parch the grain.

In a laboratory test in preserving cottonseed for planting, 64 per cent of the chemically treated seeds sprouted into plants as compared with 34 per cent of those stored under usual conditions.

The scientists still have plenty of work to do on proper combinations of chemicals, cheap production for commercial use, effects upon taste and other factors.

Ireland-to-Scotland Tunnel to Be Debated

BELFAST, Ireland (AP).—The Ulster House of Commons has agreed to debate a proposal to link Scotland and northern Ireland with a 19-mile tunnel under the North Channel.

John W. Nixon, Parliament member, estimates the cost at 400 million dollars. He argues that mail, milk, butter, eggs and other freight now flown from Ulster to Scotland and England could be sent so much more cheaply by tunnel that the project would justify its cost. A north Ireland government spokesman pooh-poohed the idea, however. "In this air age," he said, "I think the provision of a tunnel is a hopeless absurdity."

Pointed Finger, Magic Touch Stops Elevator

New York, July 10 (AP).—The squealing noise the old radios used to make when your hand got too close to a dial is now harnessed to signal elevators.

This substitute for push buttons was announced by the Otis Elevator Co. The first one is going into the 21-story Universal Pictures Building on Park ave.

The control is electronic. When your finger touches a round, flat transparent plastic plate the touch signals the elevator. It sets the controls so that the elevator stops when it reaches your floor. You don't push the button. If you do push it the plastic does not move. But push or not, the thing works.

Some electrical influence from your hand passes through the plastic into a vacuum tube, which is visible under a small light behind the plastic window. The tube actuates the control mechanism by static electricity instead of the usual juice.

The purpose of the new signal is mainly to save electric wiring. The amount of signal wires is cut about in half.

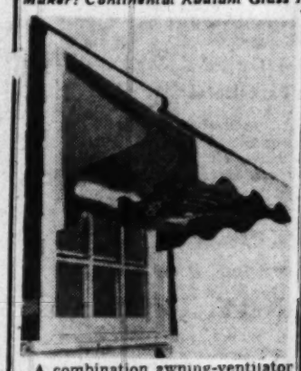
RADIANT GLASS HEATING PANEL

IT'S GOODBY to bulky basement furnaces, blowers, coal trucks, unsightly radiators and expensive hot-air heating systems. At least that's what the developers of new radiant glass heating panels maintain.

The new system, born in France for use in Maginot Line forts, is now heating American homes. The radiant glass heating units, one to a room, provide thermostatic control with different temperatures in each room, if desired. Units are merely fastened to walls and plugged into the nearest electrical outlet.

This is how the system works: An aluminum element fused into tempered glass emits heat which causes no film or soot, emits no fumes or gasses. Its developers claim it causes no dehydration of the air, doesn't burn up oxygen, allows more wall space and greater opportunity for harmonious interior decoration. Installation costs for a typical six-room house are approximately $344, plus labor, according to the developers who claim the cost of heating a six-room house in Knoxville, Tenn., by the new units was only $38.92.

Maker: Continental Radiant Glass Heat Corp., 521 Fifth Ave., N. Y. C.



A combination awning-ventilator to suck out stale, hot air and draw in cool breezes is now on the market. Made of metal with glass panels, it is attached to the outside of the window. Only one unit is necessary to cool the average size home, the makers claim. It operates by plugging into regular electrical outlets.

Maker: Stone Heating & Ventilating Co., Washington 7, D. C.

One answer to "dishpan hands" is a new home dishwasher installed on the kitchen sink in place of standard taps, combining water, air and soap detergent to produce plentiful, hot suds. It is said to remove grease, dried food, egg yolks and other stubborn substances. The detergent leaves no soap film. The operator pushes a button on the brush and a fresh flow of suds follows. Hot rinse water, also flowing through the tube, completes the job.

Synthetic Vitaman A Can Benefit Tropics

NEW YORK (AP). — Man has learned how to make vitamin A synthetically, instead of getting it from fish liver oil. Each of three manufacturers has a different process.

Vitamin A is essential for growth and good vision, and is an aid in protection against various diseases, including the common cold. Some physicians prescribe huge doses of the vitamin at the first sign of a cold—up to 200,000 units the first day, and half that amount the following day.

One of the greatest benefits from cheap, abundant vitamin A may be for populations in the tropics and Far East. Deficiency of vitamin A is more common among such peoples.

A Few Wipes Cleans This Modernized Kitchen

LIKE AN old pair of shoes, an old kitchen may be comfortable, but more than ordinary measures are needed to put new sparkle into it. If it has taken abuse over the years, even the best cleaning methods cannot do much to cure its dingy looks.

A little modernizing goes a long way in making such a kitchen as fresh and bright as a day in early summer. Good places to start are the old counter tops, areas which are badly splashed or stained by grease, and the drainboard of the sink.

If the counter tops are marred or worn, a good idea is to replace them with a durable, waterproof material. One of the most satisfactory of these is ceramic tile, easily cleaned, impervious to moisture and colorfast. About 100 colors are now being manufactured in tile and a wide range of patterns and sizes can be had, according to the Tile Council of America.

Grease or water splashed areas around the sink or the stove mar the appearance of any kitchen, and often another coat of paint is only a makeshift solution. Just a few square feet of tile is enough to give these areas a lasting, stain-free surface, and the tile will be as easy as a dish to clean and keep clean.

Old sinks with exposed piping and deteriorated drainboard surfaces can easily be modernized, too. The addition of a cabinet sink front does wonders in such a kitchen, while tiling the drainboard fills permanently the need for a sanitary, waterproof finish there.

Keeping this kitchen clean and bright is a simple matter, thanks to the easily cleaned tile counter tops and wainscot beneath the cabinets. Colorfast tile is impervious to water and unaffected by grease

Time to Trim, Disbud

Lovely Autumn Dahlias Require Hard Work Now

The results of summer dahlia culture

By James H. Beattie

SUCCESS with dahlias depends almost entirely on the care given the plants during the next few weeks. Trimming, disbudding, insect and weed control and adequate feeding of the plants are highly important.

Dahlias rank high with Washingtonians and their popularity would increase further through a better understanding of problems facing the grower. The plant is very well adapted to this area and there are almost numberless fine varieties, stock of which may be obtained at very low cost. The fine exhibition staged each autumn by the National Capital Dahlia Society and other organizations supply ample proof of its popularity.

Most dahlia plantings are now well established in the yard or garden. Systematic care and attention will produce fine blooms that will give the grower a wonderful feeling of accomplishment and even win coveted prizes offered by local clubs.

Dahlia growers agree that best results are obtained by keeping the soil well supplied with organic stakes. This fast method makes it possible to set the stakes to a depth of a foot or more, rendering them wind proof.

When divisions of last year's clumps are used for planting, more than one stem is liable to develop. Some growers remove all except the strongest one or two. The method to be followed depends on the grower's desires. If a limited number of exhibition blooms are desired trimming must be more severe. For a large number of medium-sized flowers for general ornamentation more stems may be left.

The tip of the stems should be pinched out after two pairs of leaves have been formed. Branches arise in these leaf axils, and these, too, should usually be pinched out after two pairs of leaves have formed. The buds arising in these leaf axils develop into strong stems that grow to the full height of the plant. Some must be removed to pervent the plant from becoming too bushy.

MANY growers prefer to remove all flower buds until quite late in the season. Blooms formed during hot weather are liable to be of poor quality, and it is difficult to protect them from Japanese beetles. When it is desired to al-

Lack of Rain Hampers Fall Vegetables

Summer sowings of vegetables are in a way the most important of the year. Upon their success will depend late summer and fall crops of all short-harvest vegetables.

These vegetables occupy garden space during spring and early summer, then their first crop is over. Unless they can be sown again there will be no second or third harvest, and the soil will usually lie idle.

It is not difficult to succeed with summer sowing if a few precautions are taken. Failure is chiefly due to lack of moisture in the surface soil and the formation of a hard baked crust over the seeds, which the tiny and delicate sprouts cannot penetrate.

Both these difficulties can be overcome by shading the ground, and giving the seed a covering which will not crust. Never cover the seed with soil which contains clay, unless some method of shading the row is used.

Make the seed drill deeper than in the spring, and let water run into the drill until the soil is soaked deeply. Then sow the seed. If peat moss is available, cover the seeds with a thick layer, using no soil, water the moss thoroughly, and keep it moist until the seeds sprout.

Now's Time to Trim, Disbud Dahlias

low the blooms to open, select vigorous buds and take off all other buds for two or three joints below it. Other branches will grow up from below, and the disbudding can be continued throughout the season.

The plants should be tied to the stake or other support at intervals of a foot or a little more, the distance between the ties depending on the characteristics of the variety. Strong-stemmed sorts require less support than is the case with the more delicate ones. It is important to start the tying early to prevent the plant from becoming crooked. Heavy, soft twine or strips of cloth cut from feed sacks or other sources of material should be used.

The tie should be placed below a leaf or another stem and the plant drawn to within a few inches of the support. It is well to wrap the tie around the stake to prevent its slipping. The plant stem should always have enough room to continue its growth. Trimming, tying and disbudding are usually done at the same time.

The Japanese beetle, mites and virus diseases deserve particular attention. The Japanese beetle is probably the worst. Fortunately, the best dahlia blooms come during autumn after the worst of the beetle infestation is over. Excellent control of the beetle may be obtained by using a DDT dust or spray. Some dahlia growers have obtained excellent control by using a spray made with 50 per cent miscible DDT powder in combination with mite control material. DDT alone usually makes it possible for a buildup of the mites, particularly red spider, a situation that may easily ruin a fine planting.

Unfortunately DDT must actually come in contact with the beetles. If they alight on freshly opened blooms they are able to feed without injury, and the only remedy is to give daily "spot" dustings or spraying of the blooms. This can be accomplished quite readily by using a small hand duster or sprayer.

Virus diseases, sometimes referred to by dahlia growers as "stunt," cause much trouble. Insects, including aphids and leaf hoppers, spread the virus. The leaf hoppers may be controlled by the DDT treatment, but it is ineffective against most aphids. Fortunately they are not too serious in their attacks on dahlias. Certain varieties do well regardless of virus infection, but those which are not tolerant should be removed and destroyed.

Plants Need Inch of Water Weekly for Proper Growth

At least one inch of water every week should be available to garden plants, both flowers and vegetables, to obtain vigorous growth. If this quantity does not fall in rain, it should be made up by watering with the garden hose.

Water from the hose does not seem to go as far as rain, so more than an inch is actually needed during dry spells when most of the water is supplied artificially. This probably has a simple explanation. In dry summer weather it is hot and sunny, so more water evaporates than in cloudy weather, when it rains, thus making the rain more effective.

If this is the case, then it makes all the more important the need for getting water down into the soil as deep as possible. This cannot be done by sprinkling a brief period every day; that is bad watering practice because it moistens only the top few inches of soil and encourages root growth near the surface where the soil dries out quickly.

Let the hose run without a sprinkler, so that the water falls upon a board which scatters it and prevents washing out a gulley; or use a canvas hose which leaks all along its length and serves as a portable irrigation ditch.

But let the soil dry out between drinks. A good soil holds both water and air at the same time. These are held in space between the soil particles, called "pores." When there is an excess of water, air is driven out, and the plants suffer for the lack of it. This occurs in gardens when water stands on the surface; and is the reason why quick drainage of excess water is so important.

This well-constructed fine brick home is substantial. It does not appear so large from the exterior as it really is inside. The living room (with fireplace) and adjacent music room together make for comfortable living. The dining room is quite large, the modern kitchen is very sizable with plenty of cabinets, all in fine condition. Center-hall plan with large porch off living room. Redecoration is necessary, i.e., papering and painting of the kitchen ceiling.
Two of the 4 bedrooms take twin beds, 2 baths serve 2nd floor; the 20 x 20 recreation room is really nice with asphalt tile floor. Attic is finished for real storage with cedar closet and good inclosed space. Nice garage in basement. To appreciate this house come in to inspect it Sunday. Priced at $25,750 for ready sale. Your Physician is the Only Person Qualified to Examine Your Ears and Prescribe a Hearing Aid

Important! Physicians Often Find "Deafness" Caused Only by Dried Ear-wax Deposits. When This Is Removed the Patient Hears Again. By All Means See Your Doctor!

OF COURSE your doctor is the man to see—if you are hard of hearing. Your ears are far too precious to gamble with.

Your doctor knows, through years of study, how to examine your delicate hearing mechanism. How to diagnose your particular case, and prescribe the necessary help or correction.

Often your doctor may find that what you think is "deafness" is only a natural accumulation of wax within the ear. Such deposits should be removed only by your doctor, to restore hearing to normal.

Your doctor also knows, that when hearing is impaired, there is a way to bring genuine, lasting relief in a majority of cases.

He knows the great strides that have been made in the modern science of radionics — and how new discoveries have been applied in the constant improvement of hearing aids.

And today, thanks to the recent progress made in the great Zenith Radio laboratories—most people who are hard of hearing may benefit by these discoveries.

DON'T BUY A HEARING AID UNLESS YOUR DOCTOR SAYS YOU NEED ONE

If you do, your doctor can tell you it is no longer necessary to pay $150 to $200 for a good hearing aid. You can now buy, with safety, for $75, the new Zenith "75"— the hearing aid backed by the engineering experience of Zenith Radio laboratories that have produced hundreds of millions of dollars worth of fine radionic devices.

A NEW KIND OF HEARING AID A NEW WAY TO SECURE IT

And you don't risk a penny! For we invite you to test the New Zenith "75" in your home, your church, in the theater, at work. Compare it against other makes. If you don't believe the New Zenith "75" is the most efficient and finest hearing aid ever made at any price, return it within 10 days of receipt and Zenith will refund every cent you paid. Our confidence in our product permits this 10 day money-back trial.

MADE POSSIBLE BY ADVANCED PRINCIPLE

The New Zenith "75" can be sent to you direct from Zenith — by mail — because it employs an advanced principle that eliminates the need for "fitting" a hearing aid. It is Zenith's "Full-Range Audio" principle, designed to amplify the full range of sounds covered by the instrument. Thus you — yourself — can instantly emphasize the range of sounds for your best hearing in any surroundings, with Zenith's Fingertip Control! The correctness of this principle was recently confirmed in U.S. Government-sponsored research at Harvard University.

SAVES YOU OVER $100, TOO!

Because the new Zenith "75" Hearing Aid comes to you complete and ready to wear, you save "fitting" expense and excessive high-pressure sales commissions—costs that would make this finest-quality instrument sell for $195 instead of $75. You save the big difference —over $100 cash money!

MAIL COUPON—10 DAY MONEY-BACK TRIAL

TO ORDER, SIMPLY MAIL CONVENIENT COUPON BELOW

Come out of that world of silence! You owe it to yourself, your friends, your family. Take the first step toward new happiness and success in living by consulting your doctor about your hearing. If he prescribes a hearing aid, send for your New Zenith "75," as tens of thousands have already done. Use the convenient coupon below to order yours direct from Zenith, or check coupon for details of our convenient time payment plans if you prefer to purchase on easy terms.

Only the New Zenith "75" Gives You All this

- ★ Single-unit—no separate batteries . . . compact, light in weight, jewel-like in beauty.
- ★ Amazing Life-like Tone—new depth and realism.
- ★ Selective 4-Position Tone Control—no "fitting" needed.
- ★ Powerful—with selective control . . . for severe or moderate needs.
- ★ Fingertip Volume Control.
- ★ Thrifty to Operate—cost for batteries averages less than ¾ of one-cent per hour. ("B" battery runs 300 hours, "A" battery 80 hours.)
- ★ Money-Back Guarantee — with liberal trial period. No high-pressure selling. You are the sole judge.

Historian Recalls Birth of Our Theater

By Richard L. Coe

ALTHOUGH YOU CAN scarcely call Monday night's opening of the fourth "Oklahoma!" visit a "First Night," it will be, in all likelihood, the last evening approaching such excitement for a spell. May it, by some miracle, be a brief spell.

At all events, "Oklahoma!" is a grand exhibition and it will certainly bring down the curtain in a sheen of glory.

We've come across (in a Philadelphia second-hand shop) an account of the opening of Washington's first theater. It differs in several important particulars from accounts given in official histories of this city, but because it was written by an eye-witness and published by him, on his retirement from the theater, in 1855, you may find some of his recollections interesting.

The writer is one William B. Wood, described as "late director of the Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Alexandria Theaters." Wood was a lively one in his long day. He became "connected with the Drama," as he puts it, in 1798 and wrote his memoirs in his seventy-sixth year. Like all who look back, in 1855 he wrote "Undoubtedly the stage has recently been in a miserable state." Evidently a precise man, Wood kept his diaries and letters and used them freely in his recollections.

Foray Into Federal City

OTHER RECORDS indicate plays were performed in the Federal City as early as 1798 and some the winter of 1800. Alexandria and Georgetown had had their plays, but here we come to Wood's reports on the Philadelphia manager, Thomas Wignell, and his foray into the new Federal City, with Wood as a member of the company:

"In the spring of 1800 Mr. Wignell received a pressing request to establish a theater at the new city and to facilitate this purpose, fortunately, a building was offered every way suitable, situated nearly in the center of the new metropolis.

"A company of gentlemen had erected, but not completed (for the purpose of a large hotel originally), the extensive building, subsequently known for many years as the post office and patent office, unfortunately afterwards destroyed by fire.

"It consisted of a large, spacious center building, with two extensive wings. The former was offered by the proprietors as an eligible structure for our purpose; and its capacious size offered ample space for such accommodations as would be required in furnishing dramatic entertainments to the citizens of Washington, Georgetown and Alexandria, as well as of the extended neighborhood around.

"In the size and loftiness of this central edifice, Mr. Lenthall found full scope for the completion of his purpose, while the manager prepared, at Philadelphia, scenery, an artifical dome and the embellishments of the audience part, so as to have them in readiness to be put up without delay upon their arrival at Washington.

"But poor Wignell's ill-fortune, constant to him on all occasions, did not fail to check his plan, so well contrived and at a large cost. On the way to Washington a furious storm of rain invaded the wagons and drenched the tasteful labors of the painters so seriously as to make it necessary to repaint nearly the whole, besides occasioning a considerable delay in opening the house.

"Not a jot discouraged, however, this excellent man persevered in his exertions; and after innumerable difficulties incident to the unprovided state of the place and at great expense, he at length

Video-Wise Democrats Will Likely Sod Sad Sam's Scintillating Dome

THE BOYS from the South may not make up with President Truman this coming week in Philadelphia, but the television boys stand ready to step in and make him up.

Harry S. has been informed through channels, as has every other Democratic big-wig who is scheduled to face the pitiless stare of video, that, if he wishes, he can have his face painted like a combination chorus man and brave-on-the-warpath.

The boys in general learned a lot about television at the Republican Convention. Madame Luce, for instance, wore the wrong kind of outfit and war-paint and showed up on the screens looking like a stand-in for the ghostly Leonora Corbett in "Blythe Spirit."

Tom Dewey looked okay to the people on hand who heard him accept the nomination, but the television lens imbedded itself into his face and brought out a blue-black 5 o'clock shadow that made the sterling former prosecutor look a bit like some of the fellows he sent up the river.

Repaint Jobs Due

THE DEMOCATS had a spy in every corner of Republican Convention, especially in the cool and delightful bar of the Variety Club in the Bellevue-Stratford, making notes on how to put on a better show than the Repubs. Their chief concern was television, and how to make their battlers look better on it than did their rivals.

So we may have our first made-up candidate on view next week, plus some repaint jobs on such venerable donkey serenaders as dear Alben Barkley and sad Sam Rayburn.

'Pancake' Needed

SAD SAM MAY need some special attention. As is the case with many brilliant men (and some not so brilliant) he is as bald as an egg, and through the years his fine head of scalp has taken on a bright sheen that is the envy of the finishers' union. We may need a little "pancake" on that gleaming noggin, to prevent flashbacks on the television screen.

Don't think all this is nonsense. Conventions are not only run to find nominees and to pay off the faithful by letting them wear badges, make seconding speeches and permit them to present homegrown gavels to the permanent chairman.

Conventions, in these days, also are run with an eye to the air waves and print shops. They start at certain times not because the times are natural but because the radio is ready to receive them. They worry about how a man or a lady looks on television because millions of potential voters will be scrutinizing the speakers in saloons and homes.

They release their speeches and news stories to the press at times best calculated to get the most circulation.

Caught Snoring

YOU can bet your bottom buck that if the Democrats-for Truman believe it will help their tiger to look prettier to the bar and fireside trade, the prez will come to bat with an inch of brown paint on his good Missouri kisser and his lips touched up to a ruby red.

But look out for that runny mascara, Mr. President.

The Repubs unwittingly got themselves laughed at by the ever-expanding television audience, and the countless millions of newsreel addicts. The pitiless cameras snapped delegates snoring with their mouths agape, reading papers or yawning during speeches.

Ken Fry, in charge of radio and television at the Democratic National Convention, has issued sharp orders to delegates to look alive during the speeches, no matter how drugged they are, and thus off-set the prying cameras.

And that's not just reaching for a straw. That's 1948.

The newsreels you saw of Dwight Green making his keynote speech at the Republican convention were taken in an empty convention hall the day before the convention opened. They figured the films would come out better if the crowd wasn't there.

The shot of Joe Martin gavelling Dewey into the nomination was not the real gavelling. Seems the newsreels missed it, so he had to do it all over again.

Elizabeth Arden may yet become a factor in the making or breaking of nominees, and Coty and Helena Rubinstein become powers behind the throne.

By International News Service.

Cantinflas, Mexican screen comedian (left), strums the guitar during a fiesta. Listening is Hilda Keeuger, German screen actress. Some critics say he is a master of pantomime ranking with Chaplin. He will soon go to Hollywood. Below is Alexis Smith, who has got her film censored and her Kinsey rating raised

Because studio heads don't think "Gene Roberts" fits her personality, this young actress must change her name. If you've got a suggestion, send it to "Miss X" of Criss Cross Co., Universal City, Calif.

Mexican Comic Takes Aim at Stuffed Shirts

By Carlos R. Escudero

NEW YORK, July 10 (AP).—This fellow Cantinflas is "a blabbermouth trying to stay afloat in a flood of words—his own words."

That's Mario Moreno's description of himself. Moreno is Cantinflas, Latin America's favorite comedian. On his way home to Mexico from Europe, he paused to look carefully at New York and Broadway and to talk about Cantinflas.

The Mexican comedian has ways that are very much his own. Cantinflas burbling full speed ahead sounds like the tea party in "Alice in Wonderland," all by himself.

In a few months Cantinflas will go to work in Hollywood, but he does not make any more sense in English than he does in Spanish. He talks with his elbows, he pleads with his face. His language is in gestures rather than in words. The words are a sort of juggler's act with sound. His sly thrusts come in fitful starts, half sentences and wordy bursts.

Mentioned With Chaplin

SOME say he is a master of pantomime in a class with Charles Chaplin. He is popular from California to New York by way of Texas, from Mexico to Argentina and in Spain. The Brazilians know him, too.

"In dubbed Portuguese," he says, "I just have a different kind of mushmouth."

Cantinflas is a great spoiler of stuffed shirts and a politician's gadfly. He is part of the Mexican tradition of clever lampooning in caricature and political skits.

Mario Moreno was a law student in Mexico City before he took to the boards. His confused first performance as emergency replacement for a missing actor was a success. He ad-libbed desperately, coming up for air with a wisecrack when he could think of one. The name he chose, Cantinflas, represented his idea of inflated singsong.

Cantinflas is now 34. He spent three years in the theater and has been in pictures for 10. Seven years ago he became actor-producer.

He is slight, of medium height. His eyes are expressive. His large mouth curves upward. His ears are large, set high.

He can be impertinent and deceptively meek. The character he represents is the Mexico City "pelado," a man-in-the-gutter type, roughly equivalent to an adult dead-end kid in New York.

His costume is a pair of dirty trousers always on the point of disaster, a collarless shirt of cheap muslin, perhaps a vest, and a straw hat. More often than not he wears sandals rather than shoes.

Dubious Business

A TENEMENT dweller or sleeper-in-doorways, his business is manual labor of any kind or dubious business in general.

Moreno says Cantinflas is not like Chaplin's little man. He is happy. His philosophy when things get tough is that "he does not give a mother," a peculiar Spanish expression which means roughly "Well, what the heck!"

"He will argue about anything and gets tangled up in big words. He can spot a phony miles away. He will steal anything not nailed down. He will steal that if he has a hammer. All in all," Moreno says, "Cantinflas is a good Joe."

Army Radio Show Puts Out the Bait

By John Crosby

EVERY summer the charms of the United States Army are trumpeted about the air almost as persistently as are the qualities of soap during the regular season. But the War Department doesn't throw its money around like Procter & Gamble. The talent—and very well-known talent—usually comes free and the air time is usually on the cuff, too.

MEREDITH
. . . emcees the show

This year the Army has come up with the Armed Forces Review (N. B. C.—WRC, 8 p. m. Thursdays) which promises to offer an impressive rollcall of talent as the summer unfurls.

On the opening show the Army produced Irving Berlin, Marlene Dietrich, and the comedian Joey Faye, along with Burgess Meredith, the regular master of ceremonies. It was a luminous gathering, all right, but I'm afraid the entertainment didn't add up to the sum of its names. In an attempt to be as nice as possible to my former employer (who may decide to employ me again) I'd say the Army show was tuneful, sometimes pleasant and frequently irritating.

Songs by Berlin

IN DEFERENCE to Berlin's presence, the producers dipped heavily into his reservoir of more or less military tunes. An organization known as the Smoothies performed gracefully on "This Is the Army" and also on one of the most lilting airs Berlin ever wrote, "Mandy," which was heard both in "Yip Yip Yaphank" and "This Is the Army." Berlin himself lifted what is left of his voice in his perennial "Oh How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning."

While those melodies are certainly appropriate to an Army show, the messages contained in their lyrics are hardly inducements to enlist. With congressional approval of the draft, I expect the Army feels it doesn't have to gloss over the grimmer facts of Army existence.

The Army always succeeds in gathering together some of the brighter performers but the writers either remain

How Opera Didn't Come To Our Town

By Paul Hume

NOW that the smoke and fury of ticket refunds have cleared away, it is possible to examine artistic factors, with footnotes on economic matters, brought into question by Washington's most recent operatic venture.

An opera company, whose name bore no resemblance to its background, personnel or mailing address, sent a publicity agent to town to blow the trumpet for three evenings of opera.

A schedule was set up: Wednesday, Carmen; Thursday, Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci; Friday, Butterfly. Ticket sales were good and in the case of Carmen and Butterfly, excellent. Wednesday it rained. Thursday's operas went off on schedule. Friday it rained. Saturday it rained.

Sunday morning, the gifted young artist engaged to sing Carmen, who had been waiting Washington's weather pleasure to make her appearance, announced that it would not be possible for her to wait longer. (She was either plenty smart or psychic.)

So Sunday evening, the weather being propitious for outdoor sports, Carmen was finally presented.

Censors Are After Her

She's No Ice Cube, Alexis Insists

By Aline Mosby

HOLLYWOOD, July 10 (U.P.).—Alexis Smith has taken a drastic step to convince moviegoers that she is not, as rumored, a walking ice cube. She got herself into a movie the censors are after.

It worked for a couple of other ladies. Jenifer Jones was the soul of purity after "Song of Bernadette." Boss D. O. Selznick, horrified at her reputation, spent several million bucks on "Duel in the Sun" to prove she was something else. The movie got censored—success.

Jane Russell got her censored movie early. She'll never have to worry. Columbia squeezed Rita Hayworth in low-cut things to raise her Kinsey rating. The censors hollered, and look where she is now.

Miss Smith had a problem: the movie that made her a star, "The Constant Nymph," had her a blonde, statuesque, cold fish. After that she played ladies who stroked horses' necks, mothers who patted moppets on the head, wives who soothed hubbies' brows. She was Mrs. Mark Twain in wrinkles, Mrs. Cole Porter in stays.

Too late the studio uncovered the truth. To the public, Alexis was sexless.

Long Drink of Woman

WARNERS tried. They got Alexis named the girl the Thirty-fifth Battalion wants to be lost in a foxhole with, etc. They had a local sculptor, Yucca Salamunich, announce she has the sexiest head in Hollywood.

This wasn't fibbing. Alexis is a slinky, long drink of woman with bedroom eyes and a boudoir laugh. Did the fans believe that?

"Fans say to me, Miss Smith you're so blonde and statuesque," snorted Miss Smith, who is. "I never want to hear those two words again."

Alexis took matters over. She asked to act with Joel McCrea in "South of St. Louis." The part is that of a loose lady who sings bawdy songs and spits whisky if it isn't 12-year-old grog.

"The bosses screamed, 'Oh, no, not Alexis,'" grinned Miss Smith. "They finally let me test for the role."

The night before she stayed up half the night to practice spitting.

"I leaned against the bathroom door in a pair of old pajamas. I pretended I was dressed up. I tried spitting with water. It went all over the walls. I couldn't aim right without drooling."

Next day, however, Alexis spewed whisky to perfection. She got the part.

Today on the set Miss S. was up to her purty green eyes in sex appeal. In a red curly wig and in fancy Civil War day duds she doesn't look statuesque. She bounced two glasses over the heads of drooling suitors and chirped a ditty that'll make the Johnston office shudder.

JANE RUSSELL RITA HAYWORTH
. . . their Kinsey ratings raised

They already have, over the script.

"They censored two lines," reported Alexis in glee. "I was to say, 'My name is Baton Rouge but call me Rouge. You wouldn't call a lady Bat, would you?'

"The other was after I conked some gunmen in a brawl, I said, 'Any you other boys want some lovin'?'

"Maybe the picture'll be banned in Boston," said Alexis, hopefully.

'Art' Wins

Radio's Stars Won't Yield Theme Songs

ARTHUR GODFREY'S morning radio show opens with Chesterfield's theme song, "Smoke Rings," followed immediately by Godfrey's own theme song, "Seems Like Old Times," which he whistles.

This clash of identities between big business and the individual is becoming increasingly frequent on the radio.

The respective theme songs of Allen and Ford have jostled one another, neither yielding an inch, since the first of the year. Fred Waring and Green Giant Peas both give their own musical symbols, one after another.

The friend of the common man should be pleased to learn that so far the corporations have lost this war of identification hands down. Godfrey was there before Chesterfield, as was Allen before Ford.

No corporation has yet succeeded in affixing a melody to itself with anything like the permanence of, say, "Rhapsody in Blue" to Paul Whiteman. In this respect at least art has triumphed over commerce, the man outlasts the institution. —J. C.

'Oklahoma's' a Career

POSTCARD GIRLS: With the return of the well-loved "Oklahoma" to the stage of the National Monday night also comes the return of Jud's "postcard dreams," those ladies of the Agnes DeMille ballet who've done so much to change the form of American musical comedy

THE Broadway Company of "Oklahoma!", opening Monday night at the National, is headed by a score of principals, for many of whom "Oklahoma!" has become a career. Some of these Theatre Guild performers change frequently from the road to the London to the New York company.

The Theatre Guild's policy of auditioning and training a steady stream of fresh, young talent certainly has paid off in the case of Carolyn Tanner, who plays Laurey, at the National for the next three weeks.

Theresa Helburn and Rouben Mamoulian, Theatre Guild directors, heard Carolyn at a Hollywood audition and signed her for the most famous of musical shows. Pretty Carolyn was well-equipped in voice and training. Already she had scored in junior roles with the Los Angeles Civic Opera. She had studied voice since a wee one and done some movie work while attending Hollywood High.

'20th Century' Opening On Tuesday at Olney

THE Olney Theater is presenting Eugenie Leontovich and Jose Ferrer in "Twentieth Century" for the stanza beginning Tuesday night.

Action takes place on a train—the "Twentieth Century Limited"—Chicago to New York, and concerns the madcap escapades of Oscar Jaffe, theatrical producer, and his estranged love, Lily Garland, actress.

LEONTOVICH

"Twentieth Century" was written by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, and is based on a play by Charles Bruce Millholland. It was first produced at the Broadhurst Theater in New York City in 1932.

Miss Leontovich plays Lily Garland as she did in the original cast. Ferrer, who plays Oscar Jaffe, is noted for his portrayal of "Cyrano de Bergerac," as well as for establishing a permanent repertory group at New York's popular-priced City Center this past season.

This afternoon and evening are the two final performances of the new musical, "Hand in Hand," which features Lenore Lonergan.

First Play Well Received

opened The First Theater in Washington.

"With an appropriate address, written by the late Thomas Law, Esq., who continued to aid the enterprise not only with his pen and his influence, but with his purse; he was ably seconded by several other gentlemen of liberality and taste.

"The opening play of 'Venice Preserved' was well acted by Messrs. Wignell and Cooper and Mrs. Merry and warmly received and applauded by an audience, more numerous, as well as splendid, than can be conceived from a population so slender and so scattered.

"The encouragement continued to exceed his expectations, yet fell very far below his expenditure as his company consisted of every one of the persons who composed the Philadelphia establishment.

"Mr. Wignell's main object was to obtain a footing in Washington where he might keep together his company during the summer, in the event of a recurrence of the pestilence which was regarded as but too probable.

"It may be justice to add that he ever expressed a degree of pride at having established a theater at the metropolis of our country and acted on the first night of any performance at the foundation of what was properly entitled The National Theater."

Site Dates to 1835

ALL THIS, of course, was long before the opening of the first theater on the site now occupied by the National. That came in 1835; a good many disasters occurred in those successive buildings. That's another story.

Coming Attractions

Warner—"The Emperor Waltz," Bing Crosby plays a Victor record salesman at the court of Franz Joseph and falls in love with the titled Joan Fontaine; opens Thursday.

Palace—"Easter Parade," Fred Astaire, Judy Garland, Peter Lawford and a packet of Irving Berlin songs, old and new, make up the summer's most beguiling musical; opens Thursday.

Capitol—"Ruthless," Zachary Scott, Diana Lynn and Louis Hayward in melodramatics; on the stage former Louisiana Gov. Jim Davis takes over with hill-billy songs; opens Thursday.

Keith's—"Return of the Badman," Randolph Scott, whose name is virtually synonymous with a Western, costars with Anne Jeffreys; opens Wednesday.

Metropolitan—"The Noose Hangs High," Abbott and Costello get mistaken for a pair of detectives; opens Thursday.

Dupont—"Paisa," an Italian screen version of the Victorian Sardou drama; though the voices of Tagliavini and Mafalda Favero sing several of the Puccini opera arias, this is mainly the Sardou play; opens Wednesday.

Little—The H. G. Wells double bill, "Things to Come" and "The Man Who Could Work Miracles" is doing so smartly, it's too soon to figure on when and what next.

Playhouse—"The Pearl," Steinbeck's story, filmed in Mexico, is slated to follow "Anna Karenina."

Hippodrome—"Man of Evil," Phyllis Calvert, James Mason and Stewart Granger join forces for an English costume melodrama; opens Saturday.

Shirley Temple on Loan For Baltimore Story

David O. Selznick has lent Shirley Temple and husband Jack Agar to RKO for "Baltimore Escapade."

Because of this arrangement the Robert Golden production "What Every Young Bride Should Know," which will star Shirley Temple, Guy Madison and John Agar, will start in July.

Sit-Down Actors In Rio Put on Free Performance

Rio de Janeiro, July 10 (AP).—Under threat of being forced to abandon the theater, a group of independent actors played free the Brazilian version of "Tobacco Road" and refused to leave the theater.

The owner of the theater, who gets 35 per cent of the net profit from plays, decided to charge more when the contract was to be renewed. But the company, led by Sandro Polonio, refused to sign the new contract. The actors staged a "sit-down strike" for "the battle of the theater to liberate actors from exploiting managers who enslave the companies."

When people arrived at the theater they found the box office closed. Front doors were also closed. The audience entered through a service door to the stage on invitation of the cast. A half hour later the theater was crowded with one of the most enthusiastic audiences it ever had. The artists were welcomed with wild ovations and "Tobacco Road" continued.

Rousing's the Word for Eddy

aloof or are not asked. The comedy on this show had a resolute, determined air about it like the outthrust chin of a colonel reviewing his troops. Among other things, Miss Dietrich engaged in an excruciating game of post-office with Joey Faye which represented radio comedy at its worst. These kissing games between movie stars and radio comedians provoke a certain amount of embarrassed laughter from the studio audience; at home we get only the embarrassment.

One more thing. As summer lays its scented mantle on the air waves, it is the custom for nonradio talent to come out of the night clubs, the theaters and the movie lots and try their luck in radio. By early fall they crawl back to their lairs to lick their wounds. These entertainers are quite skillful in their own fields and their radio efforts should be viewed with a certain amount of charity.

Take Nelson Eddy

NELSON EDDY, whose big baritone is a sort of permanent summer replacement for the Kraft Music Hall, is back again where Al Jolson normally is (N. B. C.—WRC, 9 p. m. Thursdays) and this year he has the hefty assistance of Dorothy Kirsten, Metropolitan Opera soprano.

EDDY

It's a pleasant musical program. Many of the items fall about midway between popular and traditional concert music. Eddy's selections, for example, range from "June Is Bustin' Out All Over," of wide jukebox memory, to a river chantey which, I imagine, few persons have ever heard. Rousing is as good a word as any to describe the Eddy baritone. He's a great

DIETRICH

BERLIN

Rudolph Friml and Rudyard Kipling man, at his best when baying about the open road or the regiment marching off to the wars.

When Eddy's heartiness palls, there is always Miss Kirsten's pure warm soprano to fall back on. Not the least of Miss Kirsten's recommendations is the fact that you can understand every word she says, a rare accomplishment among concert singers. It may be a trend and, if it is, heaven help the concert lyrics, many of which won't be able to stand the clear light of pronunciation.

In spite of her imposing reputation, Miss Kirsten can sing almost anything well, her repertoire extending from opera to the most singable of Gershwin.

When the two singers aren't at work, the Music Hall offers Robert Armbruster's Orchestra and Armbruster's piano, which dwells heavily on Debussy, Chopin and some of the lighter classics. The only thing I can't indorse on this program are the comic passages between Ken Carpenter and Eddy, who, the other night concerned themselves with President Truman's piano, Margaret Truman's soprano and Governor Dewey's baritone. The Dewey baritone joke will be with us, I'm afraid, at least through the election and maybe for years—depending on how things work out.

Capital Could Have Opera of Its Own

dinner to make Butterfly on time. Arriving at the Watergate, we saw the abject spectacle of thousands being sent home. No opera. Why? Well—it was an old story.

The promoters had borrowed $5000, and then $3000 more, to stake themselves until their run was over. When it became apparent that expenses of keeping chorus and orchestra, stage hands, and all the rest of it for the extra rained-out days would exceed the box office take, the loaner called his note.

Many people were disgruntled, had to arrange for ticket refunds, and blamed the whole realm of outdoor opera, if not opera as a whole. And there were those who, through no fault of the local ticket selling agency, never did get a refund. The agency came out on the short end, too, having done four weeks' work for nothing, there being nothing left for them after settling up the claims.

Substantial Prices

THE OUTDOOR opera provided by the ill-fated company was not artistically satisfactory in the two performances finally produced. They came to Washington charging substantial prices (up to $3.60) and promising fine singing, scenery, costumes, and the rest.

What we actually saw and heard was a fine Carmen, Don Jose, Canio, Nedda, Tonio, a good Micaela, Turiddu, and Alfio, and a poor Escamillo. Santuzza was Indescribably bad. The unrehearsed sound of the chorus, composed of old, routine singers who have been grinding out the same notes for decades, was shameful.

Scenery was gathered from various scraps of this and that with pseudo-Byzantine style brushing against what purported to be late 19th-century Sicilian villageoise. Furthermore the same scenery was made to suffice for a mountain pass outside of Seville in Spain which was to be used for the garden outside of Madame Butterfly's little house in Nagasaki, Japan.

Action Started

THESE ARE THE marks and obvious externals of a traveling troupe of outmoded operagivers. They have little contact with our musical world today, and ought to be hurried into oblivion. The hastening process has come in various communities through the resolution of local groups to go about presenting opera in reputable fashion. Such a move is now under foot in Washington, with recent announcements of the Columbia Light Opera Company.

This company, begun and nurtured through the good offices of Ethel Manning, has prospered for 11 years, and this year distinguished itself by a competent reading of Carmen, importing two leading singers from New York, but employing local talent for other roles, chorus, orchestra and stage hands.

That company now hopes to expand its efforts to include activity in ballet, dramatic productions, and light and grand opera. With the apparent disappearance of a legitimate theater from our midst within a few weeks, their plans may represent our only theater for a time.

What to Do

THE Columbia Light Opera Company's excellent chorus should learn the choral portions of four or five standard operas, and at least one worthy novelty, perhaps by Handel or Gluck, whose operas need no recommendation of greatness beyond their proper interpretation.

A repertoire for the year should be announced, and all roles but those for which satisfactory local singers cannot be found, be allotted to members of the company, or others on the basis of competitive auditions. Competent direction should be placed in charge of all ballet and dramatic aspects of the operas, and along with the necessary singers, a conductor, skilled in opera tradition, should be imported in time for not less than two complete stage and orchestral rehearsals.

The orchestra must be augmented to proper, though not excessive, proportions, and costumes and scenery (which were more than adequate for this year's Carmen) must be arranged. With proper publicity, preparation and management, we believe Washington will support such opera.

Roosevelt Auditorium has housed previous ventures, but involves less than ideal financial adjustments. If Lisner Auditorium can be made available on a nonsegregated basis, it would be excellent, though its orchestra pit needs expanding. But the goal is worth working for, and is not too far distant.

Humane Societies Are Behind New Program on Radio

Humane societies and similar groups dedicated to the welfare of pet animals are the moving factor behind a radio program, "Animal World Court," Monday through Friday at 6:05 p. m. over WMAL. The five-minute transcribed program is sponsored by Chrysler Dealers.

One of its purposes is to find homes for pets that must be given up by their owners, and to find pets for persons seeking them. Another is to aid owners in the care, training, feeding and medication of pets.

In all cases, the actual placing of pets is done through Washington welfare agencies. Although the program has been on the air a short time, many pets have found homes through its broadcasts.

Agi Jambor Plays Tonight at 'Gate'

ENTERING their second week, the Sunset Symphonies at the Watergate bring popular soloists and composers this week.

Howard Mitchell has designed programs of high interest, with a Viennese-inspired list tonight, headlining Agi Jambor, Washington pianist. Jambor will play Chopin's variations for piano and orchestra on the duet "La ci darem la mano" from Mozart's Don Giovanni. Chopin, like Richard Strauss and Tschaikowski, revered Mozart above all other composers.

JAMBOR

WILD

The variations were included in Chopin's first Paris concert, and were among the compositions which brought him early recognition from other musicians of his time, notably Schumann.

Tonight's concert also includes the famous "Unfinished Symphony" of Franz Schubert and bright moments from Kreisler, Johann Strauss and Mozart.

Wednesday is Bastille Day, Fourth of July to the French people. For that occasion Mitchell has drawn up a wonderful program, featuring Albert Spalding, noted American violinist. Spalding will play Lalo's Symphonie Espagnole, while the orchestra is set to work over Debussy's Clair de Lune, and Festivals, the Ravel Pavane, and Jacques Ibert's witty Divertissement.

Friday night will equal if not surpass the earlier evenings in appeal. Favorite music by Richard Wagner, from Lohengrin, Rienzi, Tristan and Die Walkuere before intermission time, and afterward, Earl Wild playing the second and most popular concerto of Serge Rachmaninoff.

Word from American University states that Jacques Donvez, French lecturer, composer and pianist, will play the first of three recitals on Thursday evening, July 15, at Mary Graydon Hall on the university campus. Donvez is to lecture on French music and art during the summer session. His recital Thursday, open to the public, will consist entirely of music by Gabriel Faure, which means that it will be one of the most beautiful concerts of this or any season.

Radio Notes

Networks Put Emphasis on Young Men

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK, July 10 (AP).—The accent is on youth in the radio broadcasting industry.

The average age of the four network presidents is 48 years and for the four executive vice presidents 40 years.

That's in keeping with the youth of the industry itself. However, only two of the network presidents had been born when Marconi first sent messages by wireless shortly before the turn of the century. And the executive vice presidents still were schoolboys when the radio broadcasting industry was born nearly 28 years ago.

At 40, Frank Stanton of the Columbia Broadcasting System is the youngest of the network presidents. The ages of the others are: Mark Woods, American Broadcasting Co., 46; Niles Trammell, National Broadcasting Co., 54, and Edgar Kobak, Mutual Broadcasting System, 53. They also head their companies' television activities.

Dr. Allen B. Dumont, head of Dumont Laboratories, which operates the Dumont Television network, is 47.

The ages of the No. 2 men of the radio networks, the executive vice presidents, are: Charles R. Denny, N. B. C., 36; Robert E. Kintner, A. B. C., 38; Robert Swezey, Mutual, 41, and Joseph Ream C. B. S., 44.

The emphasis on youth is even more pronounced in the lower echelons. For instance, when Denny was promoted recently at N. B. C., he was succeeded as general counsel by Gustav Margraf, 33, who also was given the title of vice president.

David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America of which N. B. C. is an affiliate, says radio and television require "well-trained young men with energy and initiative, and a record of accomplishment even at an early age."

Canadian P. O. Adopts New Stamp Sale Policy

By William M. Stuart

UNITED STATES stamp collectors will be interested in the new policy adopted by the Canadian Postoffice Department regarding the sale of stamps through its philatelic agency. In all future general issues stock will be retained in the agency sufficient for two years after final distribution of stamps to postmasters throughout the country. The department believes this will give collectors ample time in which to obtain all desired stamps. All stamps will be removed from sale at the agency not later than two years after they have been exhausted by the postoffice department at Ottawa.

In Canada it is the custom to remove from sale at the agency all stamps having been on sale for a period of six months. It remains to be seen whether this innovation will be acceptable to collectors generally.

The method used by the Philatelic Agency of the United States seems to work very well, although not restricted by the length of time stamps have been on sale. The average commemorative is printed in lots of 60 million to 115 million and remains on sale until removed by exhaustion of stock. Only a few days ago a couple of stamps having been on sale since 1945 were taken from the list. This plan seems to be most acceptable.

JOHN D. HARDY, Deputy Second Assistant Postmaster General since September 22, 1946, retired on June 30, and was tendered a banquet at the Mayflower on July 9. He entered the railway mail service on April 26, 1902, and was appointed general superintendent of the Railway Mail Service on May 1, 1939. He is an enthusiastic stamp collector and specializes in United States issues.

On Monday the Postmaster General of the Commonwealth of Australia will issue a 2½-d., denomination to commemorate William James Farrer, who by his pioneer research in wheat breeding was responsible for the high place wheat has taken in the commonwealth. The stamp is vertical, red, and 17 by 15 perforations. Its watermark is the multiple crown of C. of A. The stamp will be printed in sheets of 160 and will be on sale for three months. The stamp will be on sale at all postoffices in Australia.

THE Capital Precancel Club will meet tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the home of its president, Rolston Lyon, 217 Rittenhouse st. nw.

At the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., Tuesday evening, an auction sale was the feature, Ellery Denison acting as auctioneer. Next meeting Tuesday evening at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw. A speaker from the Embassy of Pakistan will exhibit the new stamps and tell of this first issue. All collectors are invited.

AIR MAIL SERVICE will be inaugurated on July 15 at Lafayette-New Iberia, La., on Route A M-15. A special cachet will be provided. No provision will be made for point-to-point covers, but at the request of collectors, covers receiving the cachet will be given directional service only to a terminal or junction point designated by the Regional Superintendent, Air Postal Transport, and served by the first flight in each direction for backstamping.

Hotel and Inn Rates Are Leveling Off; Food Prices Climb

By Alexander R. George

SUMMER vacation travel is rolling toward a new high mark, but travelers are doling out dollars more cautiously than they did a year ago.

Increases in living costs have made many motor tourists expense-conscious, says the American Automobile Association. The AAA reports these indications:

1. There are more auto vacationers than in 1947, but a larger proportion of travelers are trying to hold down vacation costs.

2. Rates at summer hotels, inns and cabins, which climbed in 1946 and 1947, are beginning to level off.

3. Food prices are higher in many sections of the country than last year.

The National Park Service reports that meal rates in many parks have increased from 10 to 15 per cent. The park service says "there is little or no change in lodging rates, although there have been a few slight increases."

Demand Heavy

MOTOR transportation rates in the parks are said to be the same as last year. Saddle-horse rates are also about the same. Lodging facilities in many parks are very limited, the heavy demand offsetting slight increases in accommodations for overnight guests.

In the 1947 travel year (October 1, 1946, to September 30, 1947) a record 25,265,229 persons visited the parks, historical sites and recreational areas controled by the park service. Officials expect from three million to five million more this year.

The Alaska highway, open to general travel for the first time this year, provides access by auto to Mount McKinley National Park. Officials call it a trip for the venturesome. The park can be reached from the States also by a combination of steamship and railroad and by airplane.

About $28 a Day

AAA travel experts figure that for a long vacation trip by auto the average cost for a family of three will run about $28 a day. That's $5.50 for car operation, $9 for lodging and $13.50 for food and refreshments.

For a single person, they estimate the average cost of a similar trip is about $13 a day—$5.50 for car operation, $3 for lodging and $4.50 for food and refreshments. These average figures, of course, exclude staying at expensive resort hotels.

If the car has been given a good checkup before starting, out-of-pocket expenditures on the car should be only for gas and oil. If 300 miles is traveled in a day and your car gets 15 miles to the gallon an average, gasoline costs will be about $5.

Oil consumption will depend greatly on the condition of the car and average driving speed. The AAA allowance for this item is put at 50 cents a day.

Lodgings $3

LODGINGS are figured at about $3 per person. When staying at hotels, you should figure an additional 75 cents to $1 for garage and $1 to $1.50 for tips. Neither of these items is involved, the AAA people say, when staying at a motor court.

Food can be an elastic item in the budget, but traveling tends to increase appetites so a generous allowance is made. Say 75 cents a person for breakfast, $1 for lunch and $2 for dinner, plus around 50 cents in tips, bringing the regular meal costs per person to $4.25 a day.

Motor tourists like snacks of ice cream, beverages and so forth. Twenty-five cents per person per day is allowed for this item in the budget.

The AAA says tourists can cut vacation costs in various ways without going on an "austerity" basis.

One is to get an early start in the mornings. This has two advantages:

First, it makes possible covering planned daily distances at a moderate speed, which will save gasoline and oil.

Second, it makes it easier for the tourist to "shop around" for good accommodations at reasonable prices.

Another way to make a motoring vacation less expensive and probably more enjoyable is to go if possible at some time other than the height of the travel season. Off-season travelers have a better chance for good accommodations at lower prices.

Watch That One Per Cent

NEW YORK, July 10 (U.P.).—Americans are on the biggest vacation spree since the advent of the automobile, a survey of travel agencies reveals.

About 40 per cent will point their radiator caps toward resorts west of the Rockies. Some 25 per cent will choose New England, while 16 per cent light out for Florida and the Gulf Coast. Ten per cent will abide their time in the north central States and 8 per cent will tour the Appalachian highlands.

That totals 99 per cent, leaving 1 per cent to get lost at various cross-roads in the country.

Rich Lodge Now Stands Alone

Whaleshead Club, on Currituck Sound, N. C., lies in lonely speculation, while Currituck Light stands watch

By Bill Sharpe

COROLLA, N. C., July 10.—One of the most unusual homes on the seacoast has rarely been seen except by fishermen bobbing in Currituck Sound or by a handful of sportsmen who come here for the waterfowling. And it cost its owner not a dime.

Sitting on this lonely sandbank, the Whaleshead Club is a mute monument to a plush era of splendid spending. Built many years ago by Edward C. Knight, jr., it reputedly cost over $360,000 and could not be duplicated for perhaps three times that much. It was large enough to house 400 men during the war.

Its gabled roofs rise with magnificent serenity above a little island reached by a bridged moat, and the place seems incongruous among the shifting sand dunes, rugged old Currituck Light, and the hardy fishermen who set their carp nets in the shoaly waters nearby.

Romantic History

THE CLUB had a romantic little history. Originally, there were some crude buildings on the property owned by a group of Northern sportsmen who used them during the waterfowl season. The club would not permit women on the premises, so Knight, smitten by love, bought the property and erected the magnificent building in which to house his youthful wife.

When Knight died, his heirs, apparently much disinterested in a piece of property which was so remote and costly, put it up for sale, and Ray Adams, Washington business man, bought it for $25,000.

The Knight heirs were apparently a little hasty in their deal, because in a short while Adams sold off around $30,000 worth of antiques and art objects from the property, putting him in the nice position of getting a $400,000 house for less than nothing.

It now is an exclusive hunting and fishing club to which Adams and a few members repair for a few weeks in the year for waterfowl and bass.

Erected in 1875

THE lighthouse was erected in 1875 to fill a dangerous gap between Cape Henry and Bodie Island.

But only three years after the light was turned on (January 31, 1878) the steamer Metropolis was wrecked 3 miles south of the light with a loss of over 100 lives.

Stories were told of how the survivors were looted by hoodlums of the region, with even the dead being stripped of their clothing and jewelry. Some people think this incident started the legend that professional shipwreckers operated along the Carolina Banks, luring ships inshore with a lantern tied to the neck of a horse (hence, "Nags Head").

At any rate, many of the victims of the Metropolis lie buried in the shifting sands to this day, as do the victims of other wrecks in the vicinity.

Beware the Blister

Essay on Dangers Of Taking Vacation

JULY and ensuing months when vacationists are bustin' out all over are not purely lyrical periods, Quincy Howe, Columbia Network's "Frontiers of Science" broadcaster warns.

For the unfettered city slicker seeking renewed strength through quick, violent communion with mother earth, every two-week vacation odyssey is beset with threats of sunburn, sunstroke, heatstroke, insect bites, poison ivy, alimentary disorders, hayfever and drowning.

"More than seven million Americans will miss a day or more of their vacations during the next three months because of sunburn," Howe predicts on the basis of available statistics. "They'll have to stay in bed either because they remained in the sun too long or because they did not use the sunburn protections developed by wartime research."

"Two chemicals, contained in sun creams sold at drug stores, are now recognized as the most effective shield against severe sunburn. They are titanium dioxide and phenyl salycilate. The first scatters the sun's ultra-violet rays which come at you from all directions, and the second acts as a filter to absorb some of the rays that get through the dioxide barrier," says Howe.

Watch the Diet

"BUT don't stay out in the sun too long," he continues. "Sunburn usually causes nothing worse than temporary pain, but sunstroke or heatstroke can lead to more serious trouble. If perspiration cannot flow freely your temperature may go up to 105 or even more. Loose-fitting, loose-knit summer clothing helps to ward off sunstroke. Avoid tight, form-fitting clothes, wear cotton rather than silk fabrics.

"And watch your diet. Most of us don't work so hard during the summer and therefore we don't need to eat so much. During hot weather, a lot of blood goes to the surface of the body to ward off heat. If you eat a big meal your blood has to do double duty. Either you fail to digest properly, or your temperature goes up. The same thing happens if you swim just after eating. There again your blood supply is overtaxed because it is called upon to digest and to circulate more rapidly through your arms and legs. The result is cramps, indigestion or both."

Howe says those "old wives' tales" about mixing peaches and pickles, lobsters and ice cream, cherries and milk, fish and celery are the bunk. Any two foods that agree with you separately can be eaten together. But food spoils quickly in summer. So keep cold dishes in the ice box and serve small helpings. Don't leave large dishes of cold foods on the table for a half-hour or more.

Another summer superstition debunked by Mr. Howe is that a good tan is a protection against sunstroke. And you don't have to go out in the sun to get sunburned. The sun's rays bouncing off water while you are sailing, or radiated even by a fog, can give you a severe burn.

What About Bites

"HOW about insect bites and poison ivy?" Mr. Howe continued. "Military doctors developed many insect repellents during the war. You can buy many of these under trade names, each for a special purpose. They won't hurt your skin, but they will dissolve plastics, including rayons, nylon and finger-nail polish. Boy Scouts treat poison ivy with a 10 per cent solution of tannic acid. No treatment is sure-fire. Some people respond to one, some to another. And, by the way, you can pick up poison ivy from animals, tools, clothing as well as by direct contact with the plant."

Two new drugs that have proved helpful to hay fever sufferers, Howe notes, are Benadryl and Pyrabenzamine. With these—which must be prescribed by a physician—and air-conditioning, most hay fever sufferers have to be content, unless they can go some place where there is no pollen, and that's hard to find.

On the subject of mosquitoes, Howe reports, it is not true that they are allergic to some people and don't bite them. They bite everybody. It's the people who are allergic, and some suffer more than others. Blondes and redheads are extra sensitive to sunburn, poison ivy and certain heat rashes.

Whistle Stopping

Big Sports Events On Slate at A. C.

By Orval Hopkins

FLEXING its muscles and going through warm-up motions, Atlantic City announces it has scheduled next month "the greatest sports calendar in its 94-year history." The Women's National Open Golf Tourney starts August 12 at the Atlantic City Country Club. On August 24 will be held the National Lifeguard Championships, renewed for the first time since 1941. The International Moth Boat Regatta will be held August 25 . . . Ada Taylor, whose shining bicuspids you see here, has gone to London as a member of the administrative committee of the American Olympic team. Miss Taylor is an official of Atlantic City's Claridge Hotel. Says here she is also "the author of two books on philosophical essays." So there.

TAYLOR

STAND BY for some thunder: American President Lines has made "one of the most important terminal decisions of its history." All APL freighters will utilize the modern facilities of Hongkew Wharf, in downtown Shanghai. Hongkew? Well, Hongkew . . . United Air Lines is now calling the Cheyenne Frontier Days "the biggest and most exciting rodeo in the West." Be careful there, podnuh. You're in the presence of an old rodeo . . . California Mission Trails Association, Ltd., says that along the coast "there isn't a city or camp without plans for some special event." Perish forbid that a town should go an entire summer without one of those meretricious celebrations . . . The Tioga County Fair will be held at Owego, N. Y., July 25 to August 1 . . . Here's one from Phoenix, Ariz.: "Are you worried about summer's inevitable hot spells? There's no need to fret if you know where to go to escape the heat." It's the overpowering logic of these things that defeats one.

ON THE MENU at Chowning's Tavern, Williamsburg, Va., is Brunswick stew. I remarked about this to our cooking expert, a Miss Skillet, and inquired where one could obtain some Brunswick for the stew. Would you believe it? She didn't know . . . Proceeds from the Rhododendron Ball, held yesterday in Asheville, N. C., go to the Asheville YMCA Clean Life Club for Boys . . . Fire hazards have lessened and travel restrictions have been lifted in northern and northwestern Ontario.

THE ANNUAL BABY PAGEANT, to be held at Ocean City, N. J., already is attracting entries, and 10-year-old boys are catching sea bass from the 11th st. jetty, according to Norman Sargent, who is a great guy for a change of pace . . . Party from New Mexico writes that the fishing in the Sangre de Cristo and Jemez Mountains is the best in years. "As luck would have it," continues this bland missive, "most of the dude ranches, mountain lodges and inns are deep in the heart of the best sections." Ah, fortune . . . The AAA says hotel space in London and vicinity is virtually sold out for the period of the Olympic Games . . . At the Railroad Fair in Chicago this month the Timken Roller Bearing people will show visitors how with one hand they can move a heavy freight car on standard rail and road bed. All a matter of roller bearings.

Hikes to See Freedom Train

Pueblo, Colo. (AP).—Ernest Edwards, 14, of Canon City, started to walk 40 miles through a rainstorm to see the Freedom Train when it stopped at Pueblo. He got a ride after hiking 15 miles along the highway. "I just had to see all those documents that I read about in my civics class," he told newsmen who learned of his determination to see the famous train.

Asked which document on the train he considered most important, Edward named the Declaration of Independence "because I've read so much about it."

Bermuda Is Now Only 3 Hours From Baltimore

FOR the Washingtonian, Bermuda is now easily within reach, for Speedbirds of B. O. A. C. flying from Baltimore arrive in Bermuda three hours later. With the present departure time of 4 p. m. from Baltimore, the Washingtonian can leave his office at noon and be in Bermuda by 8 o'clock that evening (local time).

A favorite pastime of the visitor interested in "doing" the beaches is to bicycle from his hotel or guest house, taking along a picnic lunch and spending the day in the sunshine. Most hotels have arrangements for putting up picnic lunches and groups of guests often band together for outings.

The golfer will find 18-hole courses at the Belmont Manor, Riddell's Bay and the Mid-Ocean Club. In addition, the St. George Hotel maintains a 9-hole course.

Rates for hotel and guest house accommodations range from $8 a day on up to $24 a day. All prices include meals.

With the increase to $400 of duty-free merchandise which can now be brought into the United States, the visitor will enjoy shopping in Hamilton, where he will find English doeskin materials and gloves, cashmere sweaters and scarves, Staffordshire jewelry and statuary, "Lili" perfume made in Bermuda.

B. O. A. C. return flights leave Bermuda at 10:30 a. m., arriving in Baltimore at 2:10 p. m. Flights in both directions are on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. The round trip fare is $126 plus tax. No passport is required of the U. S. citizen—only proof of citizenship.

Virginia Beach in 'Back Stretch'

VIRGINIA BEACH, VA., July 10.—The surf, sand and sunburn season on the Virginia Riviera has entered the "back stretch" after a gala Fourth of July weekend.

Vacationists and tourists from nearly every State, plus a sprinkling of Canadians and Europeans, have descended upon this Tidewater resort. The visitors are finding a variety of recreations.

There's daily tea dancing and nightly semiformal dancing on the outdoor Show Boat Deck of the Cavalier Beach and Cabana Club. Dick Jurgens' Orchestra is on the Cavalier bandstand, and Ted Weems is holding forth at the Surf Club.

Golfers play on the courses of the Cavalier Yacht and Country Club and the Princess Anne Country Club. Water sports enthusiasts are sailing, speedboating and water skiing from the basin on Linkhorn Bay.

Riders are exploring the wooded trails along Linkhorn and Broad Bays and through Seashore State Park's pines and dunes.

Groups from Virginia Beach are attending two historical pageants written by Pulitzer Prize Dramatist Paul Green. "The Common Glory" is in its second season at Lake Matoaka, near Williamsburg, and "The Lost Colony" has entered its eleventh season at Manteo, N. C., some 50 miles south of Virginia Beach.

June Festival Weeks in Zurich

Zurich.—Zurich's 350,000 people in the summer enjoy the traditional "festival weeks" which draw thousands of visitors from foreign lands to this largest city in Switzerland. The Municipal Theatre offers a full program of opera, symphony and concert performances featuring world prominent conductors and soloists. The Kunsthaus Museum and the Museum of Applied Arts also show painting, graphic and plastic art exhibitions.

Practical Psychiatry Exercised on Luxembourg Tourists

Echternach, Luxembourg.—Since the thirteenth century, Whit Sunday in Echternach, one of Europe's oldest cities, has been marked by a strange procession of dancers attracting thousands of spectators. Playing various instruments, the dancers make the tour of the old city to propitiate St. Vitus.

At The Bridge Table

Capital's Parish Stars In Carvel Hall Meet

By Marian H. Barre

LIKE GREEK meeting Greek was the Washington versus Baltimore engagement called the Carvel Hall Tourney in Annapolis last weekend.

The star of the match was our Mr. Parish, known in national bridge circles as Life Master 133, John J. Parish. Playing with Fred L. Karpin, another Capital luminary, John captured the ranking open championship and was a runnerup in three events.

A hard-fought match for team supremacy went to a Baltimore lineup by half-a-board, Hunter, Behrend, Denny, Whittaker, and Surrock, representing the Monument City which defeated local defenders Parish, Boschan, Newlands, and Johnson. The men's pair fell to James G. Stone and Lewis Tubbs, both of Washington, with Parish and Johnson second; Miss Margaret Hamilton and Arthur Schlessinger, Baltimore, led the mixed pair field, in which Mrs. Edward Cotter, also of this city, and Parish were second.

But as usual in distaff-fields the Capitalites bowed to Baltimore gals, winners being Mrs. Allan Rutherford and Mrs. Sarah Zeskind, with Mesdames Whittaker and Behrend, second. Third place for Mrs. Amy Ashmead and Mrs. Edna Evans was the single local showing.

SCORES IN THE Washington Bridge League's annual Individual Tourney became official on July 7, after a one-week protest period. W. A. Poissant won the master's section, H. W. Steinbach led the juniors; runnersup were Mrs. Frederick Vosburgh and E. J. Harris, jr.

In the master-point team game played at Hotel Roosevelt on the seventh top awards went John Moore, Roy Healy, David Murray, and Larry Reynolds, who were 1½ boards up on Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Rosson, W. S. Benedict, and Col. John Geddes.

A note of variety in the current week's schedule is the Federal Bridge League offering Tuesday evning at Pierce Hall when men's and women's pairs play in separate sections.

Among master point games is the Connecticut Bridge Club's this evening. National award winners there on July 1 were Miss Kathleen McNutt and Charles Geier, Mrs. George King, jr., and Emanuel Haynes. Mrs. E. A. St. John-Mrs. T. E. Turner, Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Blasgame, ranked second in their respective positions.

Euclid Studio's own monthly matinee will be played July 17, beginning at 1 p. m.

Next feature at Arlington Farms Club will be a knockout team of four contest, carrying three master point top awards. Registrations are now being excepted; call GLebe 3347. Meanwhile, there is a game held at the clubhouse every Friday evening, Arlington Farms alternating with the Walker Club.

SEVERAL duplicate series were concluded at the Capital City Chess Club in the last week of June, but the new champion's name can't be engraved on the bridge plaque until one of three tied members wins a Thursday game. The contestants are Dr. Gregg Custis, Miller Roberts and J. G. Stone. A corresponding contest for guests was won by Mrs. M. Boschan, with Mrs. J. D. Boyd second.

The second-quarter Sullivan award for Thursday series went to C. C. Johnson; Stone was runner-up; and the Saturday quarterly fell to W. A. Poissant, with Dr. Custis second. In the Saturday point match Mrs. Custis tied Dr. J. G. Wooley . . . In all these events new contests started the first week in July.

Dr. C. C. McDonnell captured the Agriculture Bridge Club's season prize for the 1947-'48 series, with O. R. Mathews, runner-up. The club's summer season at Euclid Studios starts Tuesday with a match open to nonmembers. All Agriculture games hereafter will be held on Tuesdays.

No angling license is necessary to fish in Oregon's Crater Lake, the Nation's deepest lake, 2000 feet. Fish are stocked in the blue waters by the National Park Service.

July 11, 1948

Like most men, Sam R. Hay was astounded to see all the things he puts in his pockets. About the only one he frequently uses is the insurance rate book, and that's because he is assistant manager of agencies for the Great Southern Life Insurance Co.

MEN'S POCKETS —INSIDE OUT

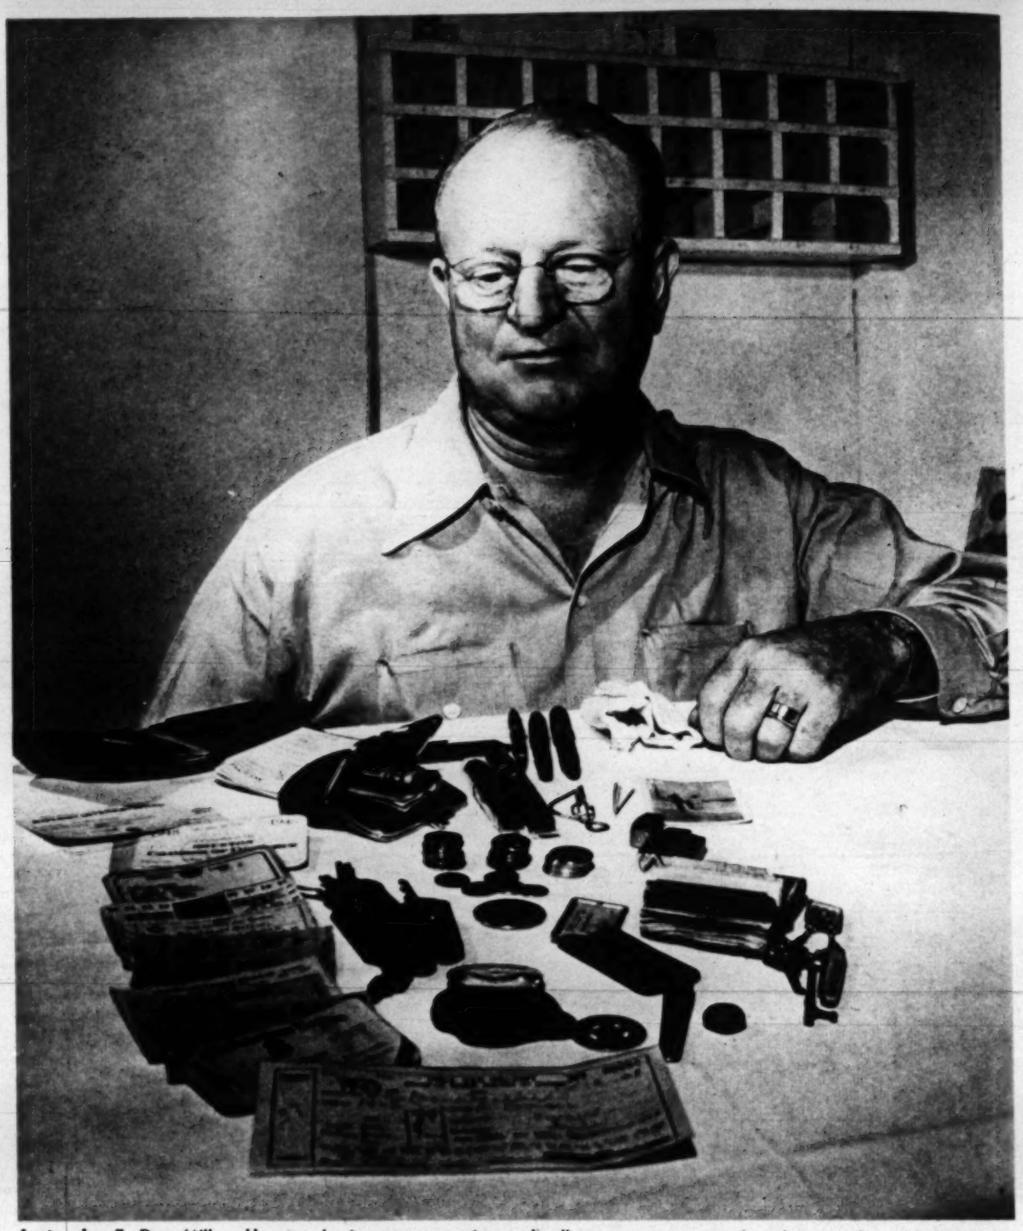
TRADITIONALLY, THE AVERAGE youngster's pockets are filled with fishhooks, marbles, tops, string, jackknives and an occasional toad. But what do they contain when he grows up?

To find out, PARADE unceremoniously dropped in at a recent luncheon meeting of the staid Kiwanis Club in Houston, Texas, and asked a half-dozen of the club's members to empty their pockets while a photographer recorded the scene.

The result was amazing. It proved, for one thing, that the wear and tear on a youngster's pockets aren't altered much by maturity.

For another thing, the test should silence at least in Houston, jibes about the contents of a woman's handbag. The Kiwanians emptied all their pockets—trousers, coat and shirt—which for all practical purposes are somewhat comparable to a woman's bag, her sole means of carting around accessories.

The result of the Houston performance shows that a man puts into his several pockets as many objects as does a woman into her handbag. Barring preferences of sex, there doesn't seem to be much to choose, either, about the import of their respective contents.



Just why E. Don Miller, Houston businessman, carries this fine collection in his pockets, not even he can tell. It all serves a purpose, though, even the odd chinquipin seed—a talisman he received from an old Indian chief.

There was some question whether A. H. Penland, head of the Penland Printing and Stationery Co., had the biggest collection of pocket fodder or whether the distinction belonged to Miller. By count and by weight, the decision went to "Andy" Penland.

Now, here is a conservative collection, even including the long key chain and box of cigarettes. But, this isn't particularly surprising, for to his fellow Kiwanians, Chesley Brooks, Texas Company sales executive, is known as a conservative person.

J. C. de la Moriniere, vice president and General manager of the E. A. Hudson Transfer and Warehouse Co., was the only one of the six persons selected by PARADE to empty their pockets who could give a logical reason why he carried all the objects.

Former manager of the asphalt division and now historian of The Texas Company, L. W. Kemp has his own system for memorizing pertinent matters—witness the rolled up, empty tube which is to remind himself to buy a new tube of shaving cream. THE END.

DR. WENDELL JOHNSON

He is one of nation's leaders in fight against speech disorders

IN 1939, Dr. Wendell Johnson, director of the Speech Clinic at the University of Iowa, discovered that he had twelve stutterers in his class. As one who stuttered himself, Dr. Johnson joined with them in forming the Demosthenes Club, named for the Greek orator who cured himself of a stammer by filling his mouth with pebbles and shouting at the sea.

To Johnson, stuttering is not remote . . .

The purpose of the Demosthenes Club was not to rid its members of their speech afflictions, for this can't always be done. Instead, Dr. Johnson and his "council of 12" decided to bring the stutterer out of his tower and into the world of free association. "There is no reason," he said, "why a man who stutters should have to retire to the back row of life. We are trying to find some way to help him compensate for his handicap. That helps his speech, too."

Speech Therapy Changed Lives

The Demosthenes Club caught on. Chapters were formed on other campuses and the members of each unit met, talked over their problems, made speeches to each other and held parties, picnics and dances to which non-stutterers were invited. Soon they found that their self-consciousness was melting away and, consequently, their speech was improving. The therapy, painlessly self-applied, was helping them change their lives for the better.

All his life, Dr. Johnson has been fighting the same kind of battle. When he was 12 he found himself faced with the prospects of a lifetime of stuttering, for it seemed impossible for him to find anyone who knew enough about his stutter to help him overcome it. So he determined to fight it himself. Like Demosthenes, he orated loudly to his own reflection. At college, he earned his Ph.D. in clinical psychology and speech pathology, and by the time he was 22 he had all but conquered his stutter.

Today Dr. Johnson is recognized as one of the nation's top authorities on speech imperfections. He is editor of the Journal of Speech and Hearing Disorders, a member of the American Speech and Hearing Association's Executive Council, the author of several books and a director of the Speech Correction Foundation, established in 1946 to raise funds for research essential to the advancement of speech correction.

Because there are at present five million Americans suffering from speech defects, Dr. Johnson believes the foundation's work to be the most important he has ever engaged in.

"If you don't think these people need our help," Dr. Johnson said recently, "try going into a store and asking for some sh-sh-sh-shirts and t-t-t-ties and s-s-socks and then ask yourself how you'd like to have to talk like that the rest of your life."

ON PARADE...

Jacob Lofman, the photographer who took the Federal Bureau of Investigation pictures (pages 5-7), is a man of infinite patience.

In taking the picture of an F.B.I. laboratory technician making a plastic replica of a human hair—preparatory to photographing the cast with the electron microscope—"Jack" Lofman was beset by a number of problems. He wanted actually to show the single hair in the picture.

The first problem was to get the camera close enough to the slide. Solving this one was relatively simple. Jack affixed a "Proxar" supplementary lens over the regular lens on his Rolleiflex, thereby shortened the camera's focal length.

The next problem was that of lighting. Jack wanted to be sure that, even if he missed photographing the hair, he would at least catch its shadow. Since the exact angle at which the light of a flash bulb will strike an object cannot be foretold, he ruled out its use. But light was, of course, necessary. He spotted a small, microscope spotlight and decided to use it.

After manipulating the light and camera angle for some time, Jack finally saw the hair on the ground glass screen of his camera.

Correct exposure was the next problem. A light meter solved it.

Last headache to be resolved was the position of the technician's hands. They could not be allowed to obscure the hair. More re-shuffling took place. And exactly three hours and 25 minutes after he started working, Jack Lofman was ready to click the shutter.

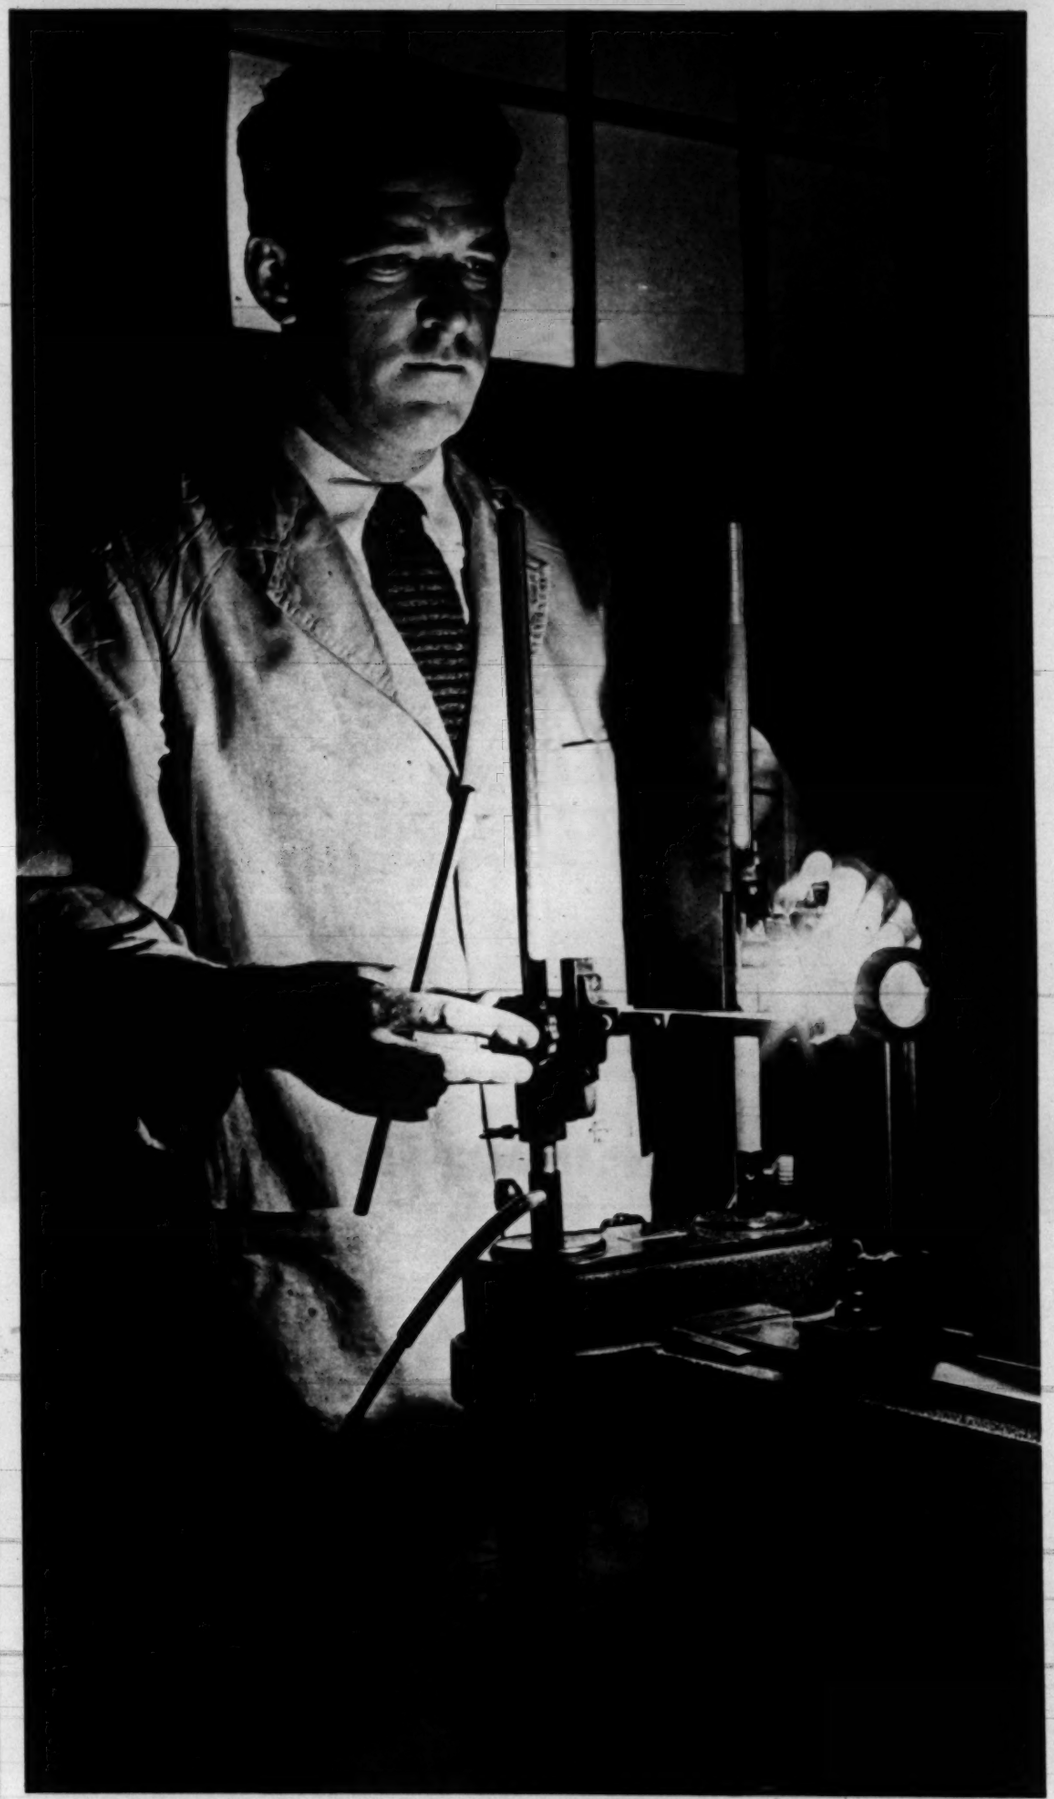
THE COVER . . .

The unchanging spirit of boyhood (pages 19-21) has seldom been better typified than in Robert L. Shaen's picture of his seven-year-old son Leighton on a tree stump fishing with a bent pin. The pail of worms, the straw hat, the store-bought cork float have not changed very much since the days of Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn. But the modern Tom, according to his father, spends his spare money buying model automobiles at the five-and-dime for his collection. Mark Twain probably wouldn't recognize the cars. There is little doubt that he would understand the boy. Photo by Shaen-Cotterell.



Science is the strong right arm of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in its fight against crime. This spectrograph determines composition of inorganic matter and is one of the many instruments used in the F.B.I. laboratory.

CRIME CAN'T PAY...

BY J. EDGAR HOOVER

Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation, as told to JAMES B. GOLDEN

JOHN EDGAR HOOVER, F.B.I. head, was appointed to his position in 1924. Forceful, yet patient when necessary and a believer in science at all times, he discusses the latter as applied to law enforcement work in this article.

SCIENCE IS RELENTLESSLY approaching a point where it will be almost impossible for a criminal to commit a crime and escape undetected.

Although crime throughout the country is at a high peak, the criminal is trying to combat the old economic law of diminishing returns. With every scientific discovery or invention, whether in industry, medicine or elsewhere, and with the perfection of new scientific aids, the criminal's chance of going undetected and unpunished grows less and less.

The spectrograph is a good example of a scientific instrument we borrowed from industry and adapted to crime detection work. It is an optical instrument used to determine the composition of many inorganic materials, and it has proven particularly effective in "hit and run" cases.

One case that comes immediately to mind happened in Maryland. A driver hit and killed a boy riding a bicycle, and kept right on going. Paint from the bicycle adhered to the automobile, and paint from the license plate on the front of the car adhered to the rear mud guard of the bike.

The driver of the car abandoned it, evidently in the hope that his crime would go undetected. But local police located the car and took paint scrapings which they sent to the F.B.I. laboratories, together with the bicycle and car's license plate.

Paints Clinch the Case

SPECTROGRAPHIC EXAMINATIONS of the red and white paint taken from the car's radiator grill revealed it to be similar in composition to the red and white paint from the bicycle. The green paint found on the bike was found to be similar to the green paint on the car's license plate. The information was given to the local prosecuting attorney. The suspect pleaded "Guilty."

In many such cases, when a suspect is confronted with the finding of our laboratory examinations, he changes his "Not Guilty" plea to a plea of "Guilty" and asks for the mercy of the court.

Conversely, spectrographic examinations of evidence have proved that persons suspected of crime were, as a matter of fact, innocent. To me, it is more important to prove a man innocent of a crime than it is to prove a man guilty.

But the spectrograph is only one of the many instruments we are using in the F.B.I. laboratory. We have reached into almost every scientific field for equipment and techniques to help us in our work, and we will continue to do so. For only by so doing can we succeed in our unrelenting fight against crime.

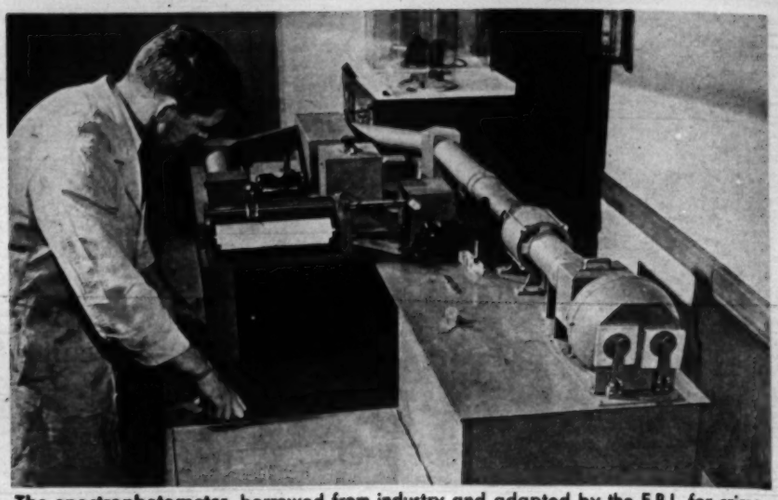
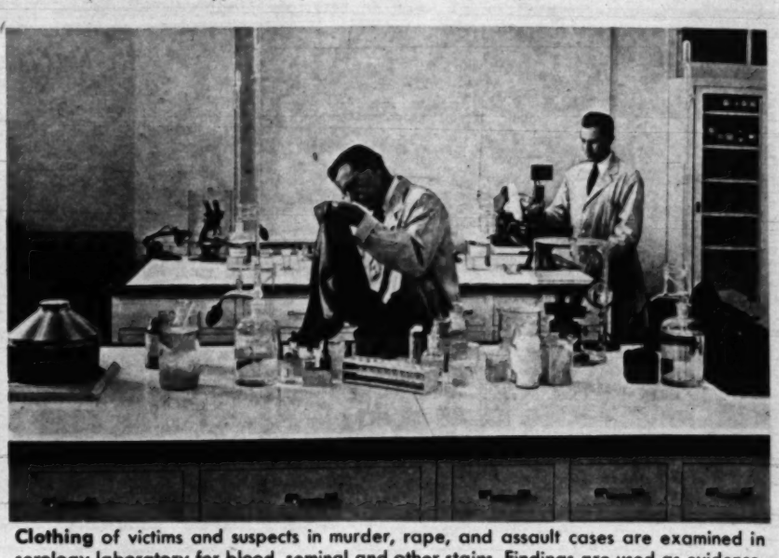
Bullet fired into cotton from gun found at crime scene is microscopically compared with bullet in victim. If marks on each match, the F.B.I. knows gun was murder weapon.



The spectrophotometer, borrowed from industry and adapted by the F.B.I. for crime detection, determines types of dyes and coloring matter, either natural or artificial.



Clothing of victims and suspects in murder, rape, and assault cases are examined in serology laboratory for blood, seminal and other stains. Findings are used as evidence.

The F.B.I. Turns to Science in its War

CRIME DETECTION, as we know it today, was undreamed of in 1924 when I was appointed director of the Bureau. The chief scientific technique used in the F.B.I. at that time was fingerprint identification. And even this was in its infancy because relatively few sets of fingerprints were on file in this country. These, to make it worse, were decentralized.

The famous "West Brothers" case at the Leavenworth (Kan.) Penitentiary, in 1903, had exploded the Bertillon method of criminal identification which relied on a system of physical measurements. It was supposed to be a positive and scientific means of identification. But it wasn't.

What happened was this: "Will" West was committed to Leavenworth, and a few days later was taken to the record clerk to be classified according to the Bertillon system. The clerk asked Will if he had ever been in the penitentiary, and Will answered "No." The clerk doubted the reply and checked his Bertillon files. He found a file on a "William" West, who had been committed to Leavenworth for life, two years before, on a conviction of murder and was still in the penitentiary.

The Bertillon measurements on both men, who were unrelated as far as it was known, were almost identical. The front and profile photographs of their faces were so strikingly alike that it made positive identification impossible. But their fingerprints were entirely different. The two criminals were then brought together, and at that moment the Bertillon system of criminal identification died.

Laboratory Advances are Spectacular

BY 1932, THE F.B.I. Laboratory was established but it was a one-man operation. The improvements which have been made in the techniques and instruments used in 1932 are spectacular, to say the least.

We felt there were many instruments used in industry, the field of medicine and other professions which might be adapted to the detection of crime.

This has proved to be true. We have adapted to our own use, as we did with the spectrograph, a great number of instruments and techniques which have helped to solve crimes and convict thousands of criminals who otherwise might have gone completely undetected and unpunished.

We have invaded the fields of physics, chemistry, engineering and even biology in our work. In the field of physics, in addition to the spectrograph, we use the spectrophotometer, which is an instrument designed primarily to determine types of dyes and other coloring matter, either natural or artificial. Two other instruments in related fields are the metallograph and the magnaflux which are used to examine metals in a great variety of cases.

Many mysteries have been solved through firearms identifications. This branch of our laboratory work has been established for many years and is well known, but should never be overlooked as an important part of applied physics in any scientific crime detection laboratory.

Over the years, we have adopted a great number of chemical techniques to serve the specific needs of law enforcement work. Murder, assault, poison, and arson cases have been solved in the chemical test tubes of the F.B.I. laboratory.

Statistics are cold and boring in most instances. But I think it is important and significant to realize that last year the F.B.I. laboratory conducted 73,753 examinations on 63,336 specimens of evidence submitted to it in 17,229 cases. And, going further than this, it is startling to realize that 1,665,110 major criminal offenses were committed in the United States last year. This means that one major crime was committed in our nation every 18.9 seconds.

Statistics are Challenging

SUCH STATISTICS ARE not cold and boring to the F.B.I. They challenge it to be constantly alert for any further scientific advances made in other fields which might assist in meeting this tidal wave of crime.

Our most recent adoption is the electron microscope which has been used for some time in the fields of medicine and biology. Nothing definite, as far as our work is concerned, can be said about it at this time, but we feel that its possibilities in the law enforcement field are limitless.

Until we obtained the electron microscope, the highest magnification prac-

This female fingerprint technician examines paper treated with silver nitrate under carbon arc light. Male technician is "dusting" gun to bring up possible fingerprints.

The metallograph, shown here, permits scientists to study the micro-structure of metals. The bright area on the ground glass is the magnified view of a sliver of steel.

The electron microscope is latest addition to the F.B.I. laboratory

F.B.I. scientists are experimenting with the electron microscope. Because it magnifies 20,000 diameters they feel its possibilities are "limitless" in crime detection.

Against Crime . . .

tical in our work from optical microscopes was about 2,500 diameters. The electron microscope will magnify 20,000 diameters.

There are a number of experiments being conducted with this particular scope, some of which I feel it would be improvident to talk about at this time. However, in order to give you an idea of what we hope to accomplish, I'd like to tell you about two experiments we are now conducting.

One is with human hair. We feel this experiment is of great importance because hair is so often found at the scene of a crime. At the present time, scientists can determine whether or not the hair is animal or human; and if human, whether or not it comes from the head of a member of the Caucasian, Negro, or Mongolian race and from which particular part of the body. Frequently, however, we find two specimens of hair so different in their structure that it can be stated they did not come from the same human head. On the other hand, when two specimens of hair have identical structures, most that can be stated is that they could have come from the same person's head.

Thus far, considerable study has been made in our laboratory of the outside surface and the inside structure of the hair. But under magnification of the electron microscope, we hope that it will be possible to attain absolute identifications. In other words, we hope eventually to prove that a particular hair came from a particular head with the same scientific exactness that we can now identify fingerprints.

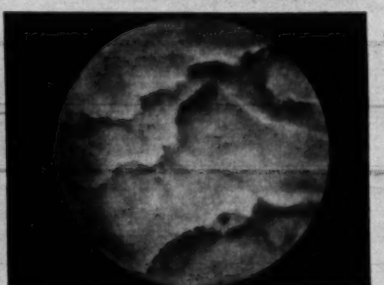
Another type of experiment we are conducting deals with the residue of explosives. With our present equipment, we can determine only whether an explosion was caused by a high or low velocity type of explosive. With the electron microscope we hope to be able to determine exactly what caused a particular explosion: dynamite, nitro-glycerine, fulminate, or some other explosive element, whatever it might be.

Our present scientific accomplishments were undreamed of 20 years ago. If we can go as steadily forward in the future, as we have in the past, certainly there is every reason to believe that science will convince the criminal that the old adage, "Crime Doesn't Pay." must be revised to, "Crime Can't Pay." THE END.

Preparing hair for electron microscope is an intricate task. First, plastic replica of human hair is made on glass slide.

After plastic replica has been heat-hardened it is removed from slide in water, and a small section is mounted on metal screen.

The hair replica on screen is then placed in vacuum section of microscope and the photograph is taken by action of electrons.



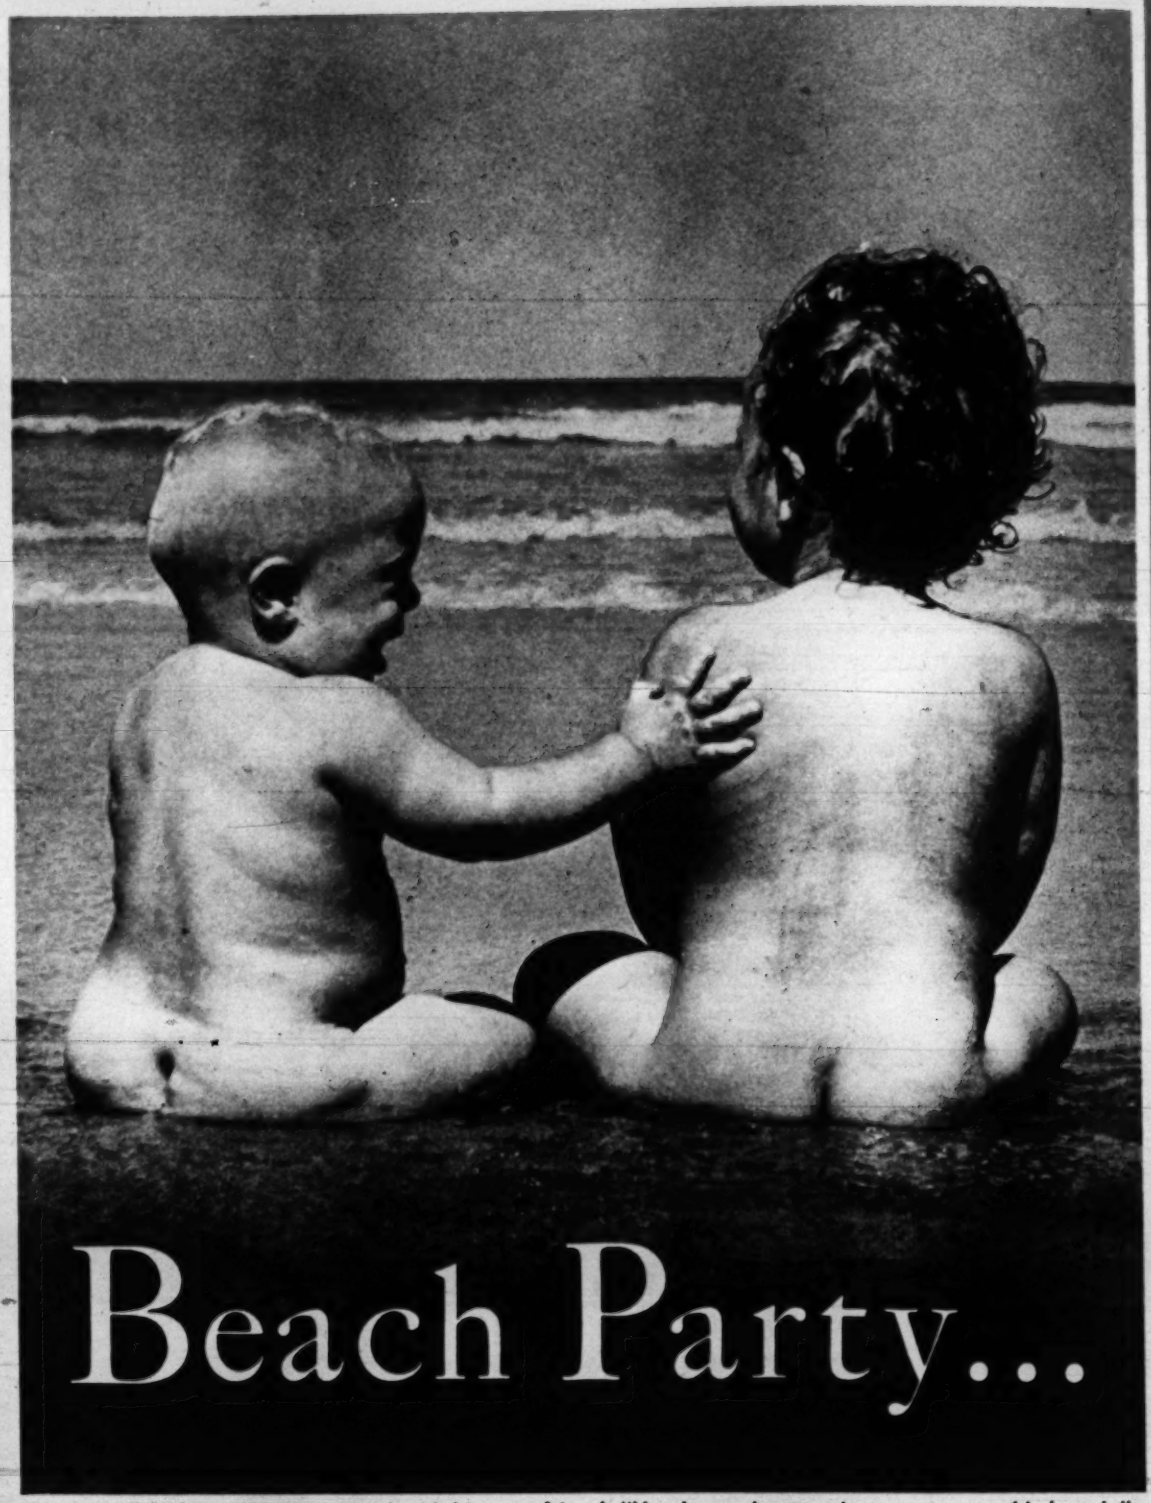
The result, a photo of hair surface magnified 4,000 times, is unimpressive to laymen but important to the F.B.I. THE END.

"Mighty big bathtub," baby concludes, viewing sea for the first time. "Better explore . . ."

"Looks like bubble bath or daddy's shaving lather. Mm, 'taint black gold either . . ."

The romance with the sea is short lived after he spies mermaid nearby with nice tan . . .

"Gotta get acquainted. Wonder what approach will get the best results. Let's see . . ."



Beach Party...

"Hi there." Baby gets acquainted with his new friend. "You have the prettiest sun tan on this beach."

Seashore visit introduces baby to the biggest bathtub he's ever seen

A GALA OCCASION IS the baby's first visit to the seashore. Heretofore, his bathing has been confined to the carefully prepared, temperature-controlled bathinette. Mother worries whether her baby boy will be frightened, whether he will like the cold, salt water. "Don't worry," daddy says. "The whole thing is nothing more than a big bath tub to him. Watch him swim like a fish."

But when mother gently dunks baby's stern, the child's piercing cry of protest quickly clears the immediate neighborhood of bathers. Mother tries again and again, but baby's siren screams drive her back onto the dry beach. "I can't understand it," she says. "He simply loves his bath at home." To which Daddy adds. "Oh well, don't let's rush him. Maybe next summer's time enough?"

Baby is left alone now, to wonder about the mystery of the receding shore and incoming waves. The sand which sparkles after it is washed fascinates him. Then, gradually, his curiosity aroused, he crawls to the pools at the ocean fringes. Finally, he clutches the sparkling stuff. His parents watch the baptismal bath, awed by his progress—which is made under his own steam. THE END.

Big tasting program shows millions

WONDERFUL DIFFERENCE

in Heinz Soups

There is definitely a difference in canned soups! A recent nation-wide sampling program showed Americans that Heinz Soups are outstanding for richness and homespun flavor!

TO REALIZE fully the deep-flavored true-tomato goodness, the creamy richness of Heinz Cream of Tomato Soup, TRY it—COMPARE it—some day soon! Here is tomato soup made the small-batch home way, from great, red-ripe tomatoes and rich, thick cream — the kind of cream you'd save for shortcake.

HEINZ CHEFS use those famous pedigreed "Aristocrat" tomatoes, grown to sturdy, full-blown plumpness and harvested at flavor peak. Heinz spices are out of the ordinary, too — rare, imported seasonings — and used with infinite skill.

SERVE BRIMMING, rosy bowlfuls of Heinz Cream of Tomato Soup for lunch or dinner. Only Heinz skilled chefs prepare canned soup as rich and creamy and perfectly seasoned as this. Try Heinz other favorites, too. See what a WONDERFUL DIFFERENCE there is in Heinz Soups!

Sweeny's pub is the county seat on the day of the livestock fair

Sale of livestock is backbone of business at an Irish Fair. Pigs bring as much as $20 apiece when a man is in right mood to sell them.

On the women's exchange, materials and clothes are bought and sold by farmers' wives. In Eire's rural markets $2 buys a housedress.

Away from the crowds and a little apart from the show in streets, old men sit and watch the bargaining with sharp-eyed anticipation.

Inside the town's crowded pub, deals are brewed and consummated between sips of stout. Sweeny, bartender, is court of highest appeal.

From the window of an office, the camera looks out over a corner of an Irish Fair. Pipe-smoker (center) has just made offer for a farmer's pigs. Farmer (in cap) withdraws hand, declining deal. Soon he will counter with a new demand. When terms are met they will shake hands. This is standard operating procedure at Irish Fairs.

IRISH COUNTY FAIR

From 20 miles around farmers come to look and barter.

IN THE SMALL, GREEN, hill-shaded town of Grange (population: 400) in Eire's County Sligo, Fair Day is the most exciting day of the month. For in Grange—as in most of Ireland's tiny rural communities—Fair Day is always a fine day for barter and a good mouthful of talk, and a fight now and then, and maybe a sip of the stuff down at Sweeny's.

On Fair Day—usually held once a month—the farmers from the valleys behind the hills that ring Sligo start coming to town before dawn. Most of them walk and drive before them their cattle, sheep and pigs. But some of them—the wealthier ones—come in carts drawn by donkeys or in wagons hauled along by pairs of ponies with stock stringing along in the rear. No one is ever in a hurry to get to the fair, for this is a leisurely business, this earning your living in Sligo.

By noon, perhaps a thousand farmers have crowded their way into town and set up their carts along the roadsides and in the doorways and beside Finnegan's market and Sweeny's bar, the two busiest spots in the town. Then the barter begins.

An Irish Fair — unlike a state fair in Iowa or Kansas—is primarily a sale. Farmers sell their stock to one another, and their wives sell the clothes they have made. Mingling among them are the hucksters with dried fish and baubles and candy for sale. But, although the sale of these goods is an economic necessity to most of these people, few of them think of the fair in these terms alone.

To the typical Irish farmer, the fair is a great day for social pleasantries. So, after parking his cart and his stock in a doorway, he usually spends more time looking over and discussing his neighbor's goods than he does selling his own.

Business is Casual

OCCASIONALLY HE RETURNS to his stand, pulls one of his cows off the street to let the Dublin bus through and listens to the bid of a customer. But if he doesn't like the customer or the looks of his money, he's quite likely to turn down his offer and saunter off again by himself.

Like the price of commodities everywhere, the price of cattle, sheep and pigs in Sligo is higher than ever before. The Irish farmer gets top rates for his stock—but on the other hand, spends more than ever before for the things he needs on the farm. Consequently the Fair today profits him little.

Although Fair Day won't make him rich, he keeps coming back, for it's the one day in the month when he may talk with his friends, have a drink with them, and dream.

Street scene in Sligo. Fair Day in rural Ireland brings farmers from 20-mile radius to buy, sell goods. When day is done, few are any richer. THE END.

The INTERNATIONAL PEACE ARCH ASSOCIATION offers . .

$23,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES!

IT'S FASCINATING! . . . IT'S FUN! IT MAY BE YOUR TURN TO WIN!

The International Peace Arch

Just north of Bellingham, Washington, standing astride the world's longest unfortified border, the Peace Arch commemorates over 100 years of peaceful and prosperous relationship between Canada and the United States. Bearing the stirring inscription, "CHILDREN OF A COMMON MOTHER," it is a constant reminder of the ancestral ties and heritage of freedom which bind together these two great English speaking nations.

SPEND YOUR VACATION IN THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST

Cast aside your cares in this Enchanted Evergreen Playground Paradise. Thrill to the sapphire-blue beauty of lovely land-locked lakes . . . of flashing trout in tumbling mountain streams . . . of sunny days and clear, cool nights. Come, relax, see Grand Coulee, the mighty Columbia, American and Canadian National Parks . . . visit the Peace Gardens and Arch. We'll cheerfully supply FREE information about the Pacific Northwest States, Alberta or British Columbia.

Study the map below of the Pacific Northwest . . . North America's Great Evergreen Playground. Can you connect by a continuous path, the names of towns or cities in which the letter "A" appears one or more times? It sounds easy, but it's not as easy as you think . . . in fact you probably will find it quite a problem to connect all of the "A" towns. In solving the puzzle, you must draw your path with pen or pencil, in straight lines, from the dot representing one "A" town to the dot of another "A" town. You may mark your path over the dots of towns not containing an "A", or over any part of the name of any town, but your path MUST NOT CROSS OR TOUCH ITSELF AT ANY POINT and MUST NOT CROSS OVER WATER (indicated in blue on the map). Towns of two words, like "Soda Creek," where the letter "A" appears in one or both words, are also "A" towns. Go in any direction you choose—North, South, East or West—up, down, diagonally, or sideways—but the line connecting one "A" town to another must be straight. The object of the puzzle is to connect the highest possible number of "A" towns in the manner described. Your continuous path MUST START AND END AT BELLINGHAM (but count Bellingham only once).

Enjoy the Thrills of an International Contest

Open to Every Peace-Loving American!

$23,000 CASH awaits you and other Americans who join together to rededicate in the eyes of the world a perpetual living monument to Peace—a monument which marks the border that separates our country from that of our Canadian friends, but not our hearts!

Here is a twinfold opportunity: Qualify for financial independence while you help the International Peace Arch Association in its high purpose of fostering a greater friendliness among the world's peoples with the new, magnificent Colonnade of Nations shown above.

In this Colonnade of Nations, facing westward upon the famous Peace Arch between British Columbia in Canada and Washington in the United States, the nations of the world may participate. On guard through the years, in each country the Colonnade will stand as a permanent memorial to the men and women who gave their lives that the spirit of freedom and the dignity of man might prevail throughout all nations.

When you enter this contest you will not only participate in the Colonnade, but your contribution will help development and beautification of the International Peace Arch Gardens and Recreation Area . . . and in the long-range Peace Program, which includes the construction of a magnificent International Memorial Auditorium for International gatherings at nearby Bellingham, Washington, host city and sponsor of the program.

During these troubled days, the people of the Pacific Northwest cordially invite you to join with them so that this fitting and proper monument may be realized . . . that, here, we may memorialize for the eyes of the world, the way in

The Bellingham National Bank

March 22, 1948

International Peace Arch Association, Inc.
Bellingham, Washington

Gentlemen:

In accordance with the instructions contained in your letter of March 20, we have today opened a Special Prize Winners' Trust Account in this bank, showing a credit of $25,000.00 in cash.

It is our understanding that your directors have adopted this plan to guarantee to the public that the necessary funds will be on deposit and available at the close of the International Peace Arch Association contest, for the payment in full of all prize money.

By establishing this Special Trust Account to be used exclusively by your Board of Judges to pay the cash prizes, your Directors have shown their desire to protect the public in every way and to insure that each and every winner will receive his or her prize money promptly when the contest closes.

Yours very truly,

President

A GEMEROY-SUPERVISED CONTEST

Thousands of contestants will be happy to know that the International Peace Arch Association has appointed America's foremost contest man, G. F. GEMEROY, to supervise this campaign.

Read what some contestants say about GEMEROY-SUPERVISED CONTESTS

"My hat is off to you for a job well done . . . let's have more of the same." J. Shinno, $10 prize winner, North Braddock, Pa.

"Let me congratulate you on the fine way you handled the contest." Mrs. E. M. Bader, Kerrville, Texas.

"The contest was conducted with eminent fairness—we enjoy your contests immensely." Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Meeker, $30 prize winners, Los Angeles, Calif.

"I have won a few small prizes before, but never anything to compare with this." W. D. Johnson, $5,000 prize winner, Krotz Springs, La.

"It was the most fascinating contest ever activated." Mrs. Mary Stratton, Memphis, Tenn.

"I certainly appreciate the fair and square way in which you supervise your contests." C. C. Kicklighter, $15 prize winner, Jacksonville, Fla.

"It was an interesting contest and served a good cause." Charles Horak, Corvallis, Mont.

"I hope you will notify me, and my friends of all your future contests." Mrs. K. Strang, Valhalla, N. Y.

11th to 40th (30 prizes) $50.00	81st to 130th (50 prizes) $15.00
41st to 80th (40 prizes) $25.00	131st to 235th (105 prizes) $10.00

NOW WAITING IN THE BANK!

READ THESE RULES CAREFULLY

1. Contest is open to any resident of the United States except persons who have won $200 or more in any previous Gemeroy-supervised contest, or who earn a living through contests, or accept aid from such a person. Campaign Committee members, trustees, contest employees and their families are also excluded.
2. Each contestant is invited to send $3.00, $5.00 or $10.00 with his entry, as a free-will contribution to the International Peace Arch Association. The size of your contribution has no bearing on whether or not you win, but does determine the amount possible for you to win. NO FURTHER CONTRIBUTION WILL BE NECESSARY AT ANY TIME TO WIN FIRST PRIZE OR ANY PRIZE.
3. Since the "A" TOWN Puzzle is a qualifying puzzle, only those who submit the correct solution to it will be eligible to take part in the "tiebreaker" Puzzle. The tiebreaker will be a fascinating word-building problem requiring words with individual letter values, selected from a given master word list and arranged in a manner so as to produce the highest possible total. First Prize will be awarded to the person having highest score to the tiebreaker; Second Prize to second best, etc. Thus, the entire amount of the prize money will be paid to the highest 235 contestants, according to their score in the tiebreaker. In the event of ties, additional puzzles will be supplied to those tying, but no additional money will be required.
4. Do not accept help from anybody. The top winners will be required to make a sworn statement at the close of the contest that they did not receive help from any other person (except members of their immediate families).
5. Should a contestant find he can improve his score at any time, he may submit a new answer, provided it is accompanied by an additional contribution of not less than $2.00. All money previously remitted on a lower score will be automatically transferred to the contestant's best score.
6. Only one prize will be given to any contestant or to members of the same family or household. We cannot assume liability for charts, solutions or other material which may go astray in the mail, whether mailed by us or by the contestant. Likewise, we will not be responsible for clerical errors although every precaution to avoid such errors will be taken.
7. By entering the contest, each contestant agrees to all of the rules of the first and tiebreaker puzzles and agrees to accept decisions of the judges as final in all matters that may arise.
8. Failure to comply with all rules will disqualify your entry. Final results and winners' names and addresses will be mailed direct to all contestants after close of contest.

Here is our own version of the amazing new chiffon cake, delicately flavored with apple juice and lime.

APPLE-LIME Chiffon Cake

CHIFFON CAKE HAS SWEPT the country! Made with shortening, the cake, amazingly, has a fluffy, sponge-cake texture. The recipe was invented by a man, developed by a well-known milling company for its own enriched all-purpose flour. The use of cooking or salad oil for shortening, plus a new mixing technique, produces a cake that rises to airy heights and that must be handled with great care until it is cold. If you follow directions exactly, you cannot fail. Our version, delicately combining the flavors of apple juice, almond and lime, dusted lightly with sugar, and served with Apple Sparkle, is a real treat the whole family will enjoy.

Apple-Lime Chiffon Cake

2 cups sifted, enriched all-purpose flour
1½ cups sugar
3 teaspoons double-action baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup salad oil
7 egg yolks, unbeaten
¾ cup apple juice
1 teaspoon almond extract
2 teaspoons grated lime rind
1 cup egg whites, (7 or 8)
½ teaspoon cream of tartar

Sift together into mixing bowl flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Make a "well" in flour mixture and add, in order, salad oil, unbeaten egg yolks, apple juice, almond extract and lime rind. Beat with a spoon until smooth. Whip egg whites with cream of tartar until they form very stiff peaks—much stiffer than for angel food or meringue. Pour first mixture gradually over egg whites, gently folding with rubber scraper, until just blended. Pour into ungreased 10-inch tube pan, 4 inches deep. Bake in moderately slow oven, 325 F., 55 minutes, then increase heat to moderate, 350 F., and bake 10 to 15 minutes longer, or until top springs back when lightly touched. At once, turn pan upside down, with extreme outer edges of pan resting on two other pans. Let hang, free of table until cold. Loosen from sides and tube with spatula. Turn pan over and hit edge sharply on table to loosen. Dust top with powdered sugar.

Apple Sparkle

Squeeze juice from ½ lime over ice in each tall glass. Fill glasses with equal amounts apple juice and sparkling water. Stir gently to mix.

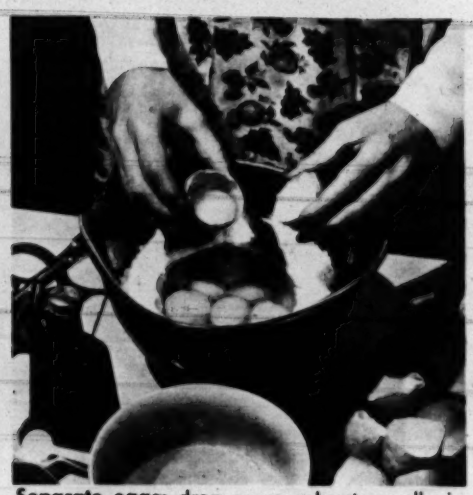
Sift measured dry ingredients into mixing bowl. Make a "well" in flour mixture; add cooking oil.



Separate eggs; drop seven unbeaten yolks in "well." Add apple juice, almond extract, lime rind.

Rest extreme outer edges of pan on two other pans. Leave until pan is cold to touch. THE END.

INGENIOUS SOLUTION to that problem of storage in basement, attic or garage is a new kind of shelf hanger which lets you keep adding shelves as you need them. Suspend the first pair of these metal devices from a few nails and thereafter you can hook on more without disturbing existing shelves. All hangers are identical, designed for shelves up to twelve inches wide. The devices are as easy to remove as to install.

AN ALL-PURPOSE BOON FOR BABY, this air-cushioned device serves as bath-tub. It becomes a portable mattress, crib or auto seat when slipped into a special cover which has tabs for attaching to other surfaces and a chest strap to hold baby.

GROOMING YOUR LAWN is simplified with a new lawn edger that neatly trims sidewalk edges, lawn borders, beds and bases of trees to desired depth. The shoe of the inexpensive tool slides on grass as you push forward in easy retrace strokes.

Run stopper for hosiery and other conveniences:

TROUBLESHOOTER FOR WOMEN'S stockings is a new colorless liquid. Easily applied to tiny snags and even to actual run-starts, the liquid is said to form an invisible mend that remains effective through many washings. It can be used on fine rayons, nylons and silks without harm.

A CLEVER NEW TAPE has been devised to take the place of painted strips for decorating kitchen, bath and nursery walls. It's inexpensive and a resin adhesive makes it removable, washable and reusable. Available in eight colors, it's said to be useful, too, for adding color to cabinets, furniture and accessories and for mending lamp shades and labeling books.

GRILL THAT MAKES outdoor cooking more fun is made of durable cast iron, is weather-proof and requires neither masonry nor building. It can be assembled in a minute and slips apart for moving. The device rotates 360 degrees, so when smoke blows your way, you just swing it towards the wind. It has an ash shelf to keep home lawns neat and a warming area and utensil rest to help simplify outdoor cooking.

FOR HOUSEHOLDERS, a magnesium rod promises to solve old problem of the rusting hot water tank. Easily installed in any type of water heater, it becomes self-sacrificing and itself disintegrates in place of the usual tank walls. It lasts up to six years before a replacement is needed.

Seashore Mystery – how some women swim every day

The answer is Tampax — modern sanitary protection invented by a doctor for internal use

Some girls and women swim every day that weather permits. Not for them any "monthly" excuses — because they have discovered that Tampax removes fear of embarrassment in bathing suit wet or dry. For this modern monthly sanitary protection is worn internally and absorbs internally....Everything about Tampax is simple and dainty. Belts, pins and external pads are discarded. The hampering bulk is gone. No revealing edge-lines. No chafing. No odor....Invented by a doctor, Tampax is made of pure surgical cotton compressed in applicators for easy insertion. In place, it is actually invisible and unfelt. Changing is quick; disposal no trouble....Have Tampax ready for next time needed. Sold at drug stores and notion counters everywhere. Three absorbencies (Regular, Super, Junior). Only 1/15 the size of the external pad — an average month's supply slips into your purse. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

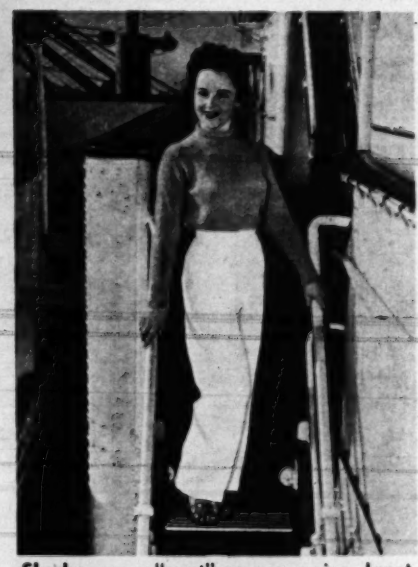
Secret of a successful cruise wardrobe, according to radio actress Janet Waldo, is packing plenty of separates like this aqua sweater of lightweight wool, full white gabardine skirt.

Janet's "gangplank outfit" was this trim oyster white jacket, navy blue skirt, both in gabardine, both useful in other combinations. Her accessories: white straw hat, over-the-shoulder bag, spectator pumps.

For deckchair sunning: a two-piece play suit in yellow cotton with brown and white print. Suit has ruffled, halter top, a matching coolie coat. Beach basket and shoes are in aqua, Janet's favorite color.



Slacks are a "must" on any cruise. Janet chose hers in white sharkskin, wore them with a red turtle-neck sweater, gold sandals; sometimes added a man-tailored jacket in lightweight navy wool for chilly days.

Ten Days at Sea

Ideal cruise wardrobe is small, expansive in character

IMPORTANT AS YOUR CRUISE reservation itself is a wardrobe that telescopes into small space for convenience, yet expands to meet all the exciting occasions of a vacation spent at sea.

Janet Waldo, pretty star of "Meet Corliss Archer," summer replacement for the Bob Hope show (NBC, Tuesdays, 10 p.m. E.D.S.T.) recently went on a cruise, invited PARADE to photograph her compact wardrobe. In her suitcase Janet carried plenty of matchmates—clothes that interchange—including two jackets, two sweaters, two skirts, a play dress, sunsuit, two swim suits and an evening gown. She kept everything in harmonizing colors, depending on many gay accessories to multiply costume possibilities. (Pictures were taken aboard the S.S. President Wilson of the American President Lines.)

Pert Janet Waldo (she's 5' 3", weighs 110 pounds) packed two swim suits: a sleek, one-piece suit in white lastex (above) and a strapless dressmaker suit in white sharkskin.

Watermelon pink and green striped sun dress has tight-fitting, strapless bodice, full skirt and a flattering stole. With it, Janet wore her gold sandals, tucked a bow in her hair, a ribbon around her neck.

When Janet and her playwright husband, Bob Lee, went dancing under tropic skies, she wore all-white evening gown, its laced bodice sequin-trimmed, its bouffant skirt of crease-resistant nylon net. THE END.

One Permanent Cost $15...the TONI only $2

So soft, so smooth, so natural-looking. You'll say your Toni is the loveliest permanent you've ever had. But, before giving yourself a Toni you will want to know—

Will TONI give me a loose or tight wave?

With Toni you can have just the amount of curl that suits you best—from a loose, natural-looking wave to a halo of soft ringlets. Just follow the simple directions for timing.

Will TONI work on my hair?

Yes, Toni waves any kind of hair that will take a permanent, including gray, dyed, bleached or baby-fine hair.

Is it easy to do?

Easy as rolling your hair up on curlers. No wonder Toni is used by more than a million women a month.

How long will it take me?

The actual waving time is only 2 to 3 hours. And during that time you are free to do whatever you want.

Why is TONI a Creme?

Because Toni Creme Waving Lotion waves the hair gently—leaves it soft as silk with no frizziness, no dried-out brittleness even on the first day.

How long will my TONI wave last?

Your Toni wave is guaranteed to last just as long as a $15 beauty shop permanent—or your money back.

How about having a TONI party?

Grand idea! Invite your friends next Saturday afternoon—and have each bring along a Toni kit. While your permanents are "taking" have fun—listen to the radio or enjoy your favorite records.

Which Twin has the TONI?

Lovely Alva Anderson, of Evanston, Illinois, the twin at the right, has the Toni. And her sister Alice says, "When I saw how beautifully Alva's Toni wave turned out, I wished I were the Toni Twin."

How much will I save with TONI?

The Toni Home Permanent Kit with reusable plastic curlers is just $2. The Toni Refill Kit costs only $1 . . . yet there's no finer wave at any price.

Trailer life—dream or headache?

If you are in the throes of wanderlust, if you have that urge to get away from it all, trailer travel may be the answer. Living in a home on wheels can be fun, but the increasing number of trailers presents new headaches. Read all about trailer life in PARADE next week.

Hy Gardner's Newsreel . . .

HEART & FLOWERS: Dr. Richard Hoffman tells about the patient whose heart was so weak that, when he took his cardiograph home and tucked it into the player-piano, it played "Nearer My God to Thee!"...

TOO FLATTERING: In Birmingham, Alabama, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pearce were visited by a burglar who didn't steal anything, just left a note saying he loved Mrs. Pearce's pies—they reminded him of the kind his mother used to make. No word yet whether the Pearces are going to buy a burglar alarm or leave a nightly piece of pie on the porch . . .

NATURE BOY NOTE: The week after Eden Ahbez (Nature Boy) visited New York and announced he planned to sleep in Central Park, police picked up half a dozen unshaved vagrants sleeping in the park, all claiming "I'm Nature Boy." P.S. All the while Nature Boy was sleeping in a Brooklyn house out of deference to Mrs. Nature Boy, soon to become a mother . . .

LEAVE IT TO THE GIRLS: A preview of fall fashions reveals the new theme is based on "Whistler and His Times." Seems to me what America needs more than long skirts inspired by Whistler's Mother, are short skirts that will inspire whistling by Father! . . .

AFTERMATH: Speaking of the "New Look," the trade journal "American Druggist" claims that the longer skirts have revived shoplifting on a broader scale. It has even brought about the return of an old-fashioned elastic gimmick which plagued department store detectives back in grandma's day. The elastic band, with hooks attached, is concealed above the knee by the shoplifter—and with a fast but furtive swish, the stolen items are swept under the long skirt and hung onto the hooks . . .

PUBLIC NOTICE (appearing in a literary magazine): "Sheepish young male, 31, interested in meeting female trainer capable of bringing out the beast in me."

"He's one of these guys always yapping about the housing shortage, and then when you get him something all he can raise is fourteen or fifteen thousand!"

JOHN K. M. McCAFFERY

EVERYONE," SAYS John K. M. McCaffery, whose new psychological quiz program "What Makes You Tick?" is broadcast Sundays at 5:30 P.M., E.D.S.T. by Mutual, "likes to show himself in the best possible light. When situations arise in the course of normal everyday living that tend to show us in a light less favorable than we would like, then we may improvise and invent." To test your inclinations to "invent," McCaffery has prepared a list of ten questions for PARADE. You can put your own truthfulness to the acid test by trying them now.

HOW TRUTHFUL ARE YOU?

CHECK YOUR ANSWERS	YES	NO
1. Do you ever fib?
2. Do you ever swear, either aloud or to yourself?
3. Have you ever laughed at a story which was "off-color?"
4. Have you ever admired yourself in a mirror?
5. Are your table manners better in company than at home?

ALL OF US, McCaffery believes, are guilty to a greater or lesser degree of the peccadillos listed above, and those of us who admit them give a good indication of basic truthfulness. If you answered nine or ten of these questions in the "Yes" column, says McCaffery, you are so truthful so as to be almost too good for this earth. Three to eight "Yes" answers mean that you're just average but if you answered fewer than three of the questions "Yes," you had better take stock of yourself. You, says McCaffery, who has been conducting radio quizzes for more than ten years, just aren't telling the truth.

Modern counterparts of Tom Sawyer and Becky Thatcher, Johnny Winn and Dianne Fisher, live in Twain's Hannibal, Mo.

Tom Sawyer, 1948

Boyhood has not changed in Mark Twain's home town

BY ERNEST LA FRANCE

A HUNDRED YEARS AGO, a 12-year-old boy named Sam Clemens wandered barefoot around the steamboat landing at Hannibal, Missouri, skylarked on the sumac-clad slopes of Cardiff Hill, swam "raw" in Bear Creek, fished and rafted in the muddy Mississippi, swapped ghost stories until he was bug-eyed with boys named Tom Blankenship and Johnny Briggs and showed off to pretty Laura Hawkins by balancing on picket fences.

Young Clemens grew up to be a steamboat pilot, eventually a salty, whip-smart writer known as Mark Twain. Nearing the age of 40, he wrote a nostalgic novel based on himself and Blankenship, Briggs, and Laura under the names of Tom Sawyer, Huckleberry Finn, Joe Harper, and Becky Thatcher.

The real boys and girls grew up, some of them finally resting in the cemetery across the town from Cardiff Hill, along with Sam's parents and brothers.

But under their literary names, Tom, Huck, Joe, and Becky never grew older. Their literary descendants—Booth Tarkington's Penrod and Sam among them—have sauntered through boyhood fiction ever since, up to and including the stories in the latest issue of "Boys' Life."

Because small-town boyhood is as unchanging as grass, catfish, the splash of stones scudded over water, or the rustle of leaves on Cardiff Hill, boys themselves have not changed much since the days of Tom and Huck.

In present-day Hannibal, grown from 2,000 to 20,000 population, counterparts of Sam Clemens still wander over the same hills, pick huckleberries, float downriver on rafts, scare themselves bug-eyed with some of the same ghost stories, explore in "Injun Joe's" same cave, dream the same dreams.

If Mark Twain came back to Hannibal in 1948, he might be puzzled about some of the things today's boys wear and talk about. But Mark would understand them.

RHEUMATISM YIELDS TO DRUGLESS METHOD OF TREATMENT

Excelsior Springs, Mo., July 6. —So successful has a comparatively new, drugless method proven for treating rheumatism and arthritis that an amazing new book will be sent free to any reader of this magazine who will write for it.

This book entitled, "Rheumatism," fully explains why drugs and medicines give only temporary relief and fail to remove the causes of the trouble.

The Ball Clinic, Excelsior Springs, Mo., has perfected a system of drugless treatment for rheumatism and arthritis combined with the world famous mineral waters and baths. This new system of treatment is fully described in the book and tells how it may be possible for you to find freedom from rheumatism.

You incur no obligation in sending for this instructive book. It may be the means of saving you years of untold misery. For writing promptly, the company will send a free copy of the book entitled "Rheumatism — Good Health, Life's Greatest Blessing." Address your letter to The Ball Clinic, Dept. 519, Excelsior Springs, Mo., but be sure to write today.

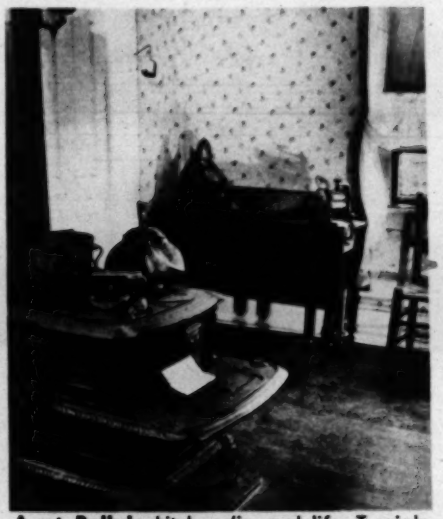
On Cardiff Hill, where Huck heard Injun Joe plot torture of Widow Douglas, 1948 youngsters play tag. Lighthouse is memorial to Twain.

McDougal's Cave, where Tom and Becky became lost, and Injun Joe died blood-curdling death, has initials dating back a century.



Aunt Polly's kitchen (in real life, Twain's mother's) is boyhood shrine. City owns home.

Today's Toms and Hucks act like

IN A HUNDRED YEARS, both Hannibal and its small fry have outwardly changed. But since both the Mississippi and Twain's insight into childhood are timeless, the changes are more apparent than they are real.

Hannibal (it hasn't grown too much in the last 50 years) has lost the steam-snorting ferry boat that Tom Sawyer knew, and gained a steel bridge. The gleaming river packets have been replaced by duller trains and buses. The isolated river town has lost its innocence to radios, juke boxes, and fan magazines.

Hannibal's Hucks, Toms, Beckys and Joe Harpers wear store-bought clothes, talk about the St. Louis Cardinals and movie stars, swap baseball gloves, toy airplanes, and watches, are urged to swim in the pool at the "Y" instead of in the muddy Mississippi that Mark Twain loved.

But the river still floods the downtown streets during the June high water; Jackson's and Turtle islands still beckon enticingly, and wind-swept Cardiff Hill still gives the best view up and down the river.

Youngsters Haven't Changed

The children are more like the children of a hundred years ago than like today's adults. Tom and Huck of 1848 played "hi-spy," "gulley keeper," "pirates," and "Robin Hood." Today they play tag, baseball, and G-Man. Mark Twain's Tom and Becky chewed gum and liked circuses. They still do. Huck believed you could cure warts by throwing a dead cat at the devil in the cemetery at midnight. Today's Hucks still haven't solved the problem. Last century's Tom thought the acme of Showing-off, modern Tom does bicycle tricks. House still has its white-washed fence.

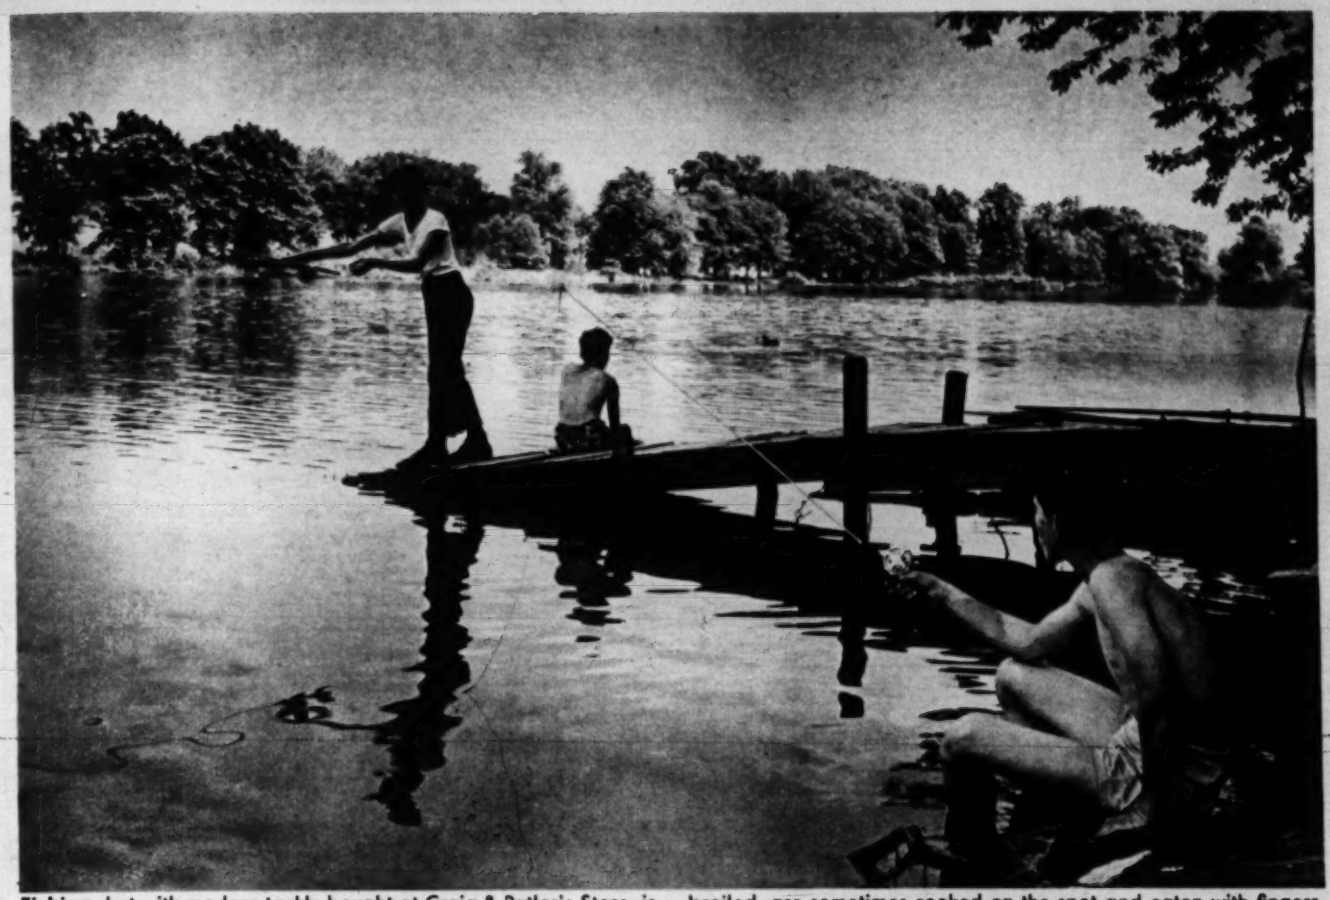
Statue of Huck and Tom, at end of Main St., is convenient meeting spot for 1948's kids.

Swimming in muddy Mississippi, frowned on by parents, is favorite hot weather sport.



Fishing, but with modern tackle bought at Craig & Butler's Store, is unchanged in essence and result. Catfish, delicious when fried or broiled, are sometimes cooked on the spot and eaten with fingers. Tom and Huck played being pirates on Jackson's Island, opposite.

Twain originals admiration was to say "It's a whiz!" So does today's, at the drop of a hat.

Young Clemens' secret heroine was Joan of Arc; Johnny Winn moons over Marlene Dietrich. Tom Sawyer explored Injun Joe's cave with candles and lengths of twine; Johnny Winn carries a flash light and a compass.

Sam Clemens wanted to be a river pilot. Johnny Winn wants to be the world champion fly caster. Donald Winn, his cousin, who looks something like Joe Harper, is undecided between becoming an airplane pilot or a river boat captain. Charlie Hall, whose unmanageable cowlick makes him reminiscent of Huckleberry Finn, wants to be a first baseman for the Cardinals, an ambition which would not have disturbed Mark Twain. In a sense, Hannibal covers the United States.

Marbles, familiar to Tom as "knucks" and "ring-taw" is still a favorite a century later.

Wienie roasts, counterparts of Huck, Tom, and Joe Harper's feasts of filched ham and corn pone, flicker along shores near Hannibal. Tom lacked matches. THE END.

BETTY HUTTON

Georgina is furious when literary critic Clark Redfield (Macdonald Carey) visits her bookshop, tells her that her writing is tripe. He says she is afraid to face reality.

Picture ends with Georgina's long-suffering parents (Walter Abel, Peggy Wood) getting call from their problem child. She's eloped with Clark, says it's "Like a dream."

Mental-wanderer Georgina sees self as opera star,

At sister's wedding, she dreams groom (Patric Knowles) confesses he loves only her.

Another daydream finds Georgina taking bravely the news that her mother has died.

Is good fun in "Dream Girl"

BY KAY SULLIVAN

THE OLD SONG, "I'm a dreamer, aren't we all?" would make appropriate theme music for Betty Hutton's latest starring vehicle, "Dream Girl." Few persons who see it will fail to identify themselves with the picture's heroine. Betty's flights of imagination may be a little more elaborate than those of the average day-dreamer, but they serve the same purpose: to escape the humdrum of daily life.

On Broadway, "Dream Girl" had a successful run for two years. It should meet with equal success on the movie circuit, first, because it closely follows author Elmer Rice's whimsical plot; second, because the talented and ubiquitous Miss Hutton is in all but one of the film's 100 or so scenes. Nevertheless, Hutton fans may miss the blaring voice and slam-bang ways that made her famous, for as book-shop proprietress Georgina Allerton she uses no make-up, wears her blonde hair in a subdued shade. She sings only one song, doesn't dance at all.

Adventures Are Numerous

But as a sort of female Walter Mitty, she does run a gamut of characterizations, from being the proud mother of twins to committing suicide in a South Seas cafe. Her new-found talent for dramatics does her credit, particularly since she is matched with such experts as Patric Knowles, Virginia Field, Peggy Wood and Walter Abel.

"Dream Girl" also puts handsome Macdonald Carey in his proper place as one of the screen's most personable and talented leading men. As the down-to-earth critic who finally talks some common sense into Georgina, Carey's masculine charm is dynamite.

Peggy Wood and George Abel, who play the Allertons, Ma and Pa, do a generous share of scene-stealing with some of the funniest lines in the film. If it's escape from reality you want, "Dream Girl" will do the trick nicely.

Far-away look in Betty Hutton's eyes is a danger signal for "Dream Girl" audiences. It means that Miss Hutton, as Georgina Allerton, heroine of Paramount's film, is about to let her imagination run, see herself as opera star or in other fabulous roles.

spending weekend in Mexico, being wooed by sister's groom . . .

Mexico interlude finds Georgina on holiday with suave suitor (Lowell Gilmore).

As entertainer in a South Sea dive, Georgina sings in authentic honky-tonk style.

At opera, she dreams she replaces star, wins plaudits in "Madame Butterfly."

Sister's divorce prompts dream of cabin where Georgina has twins. THE END.

They too were worried about life and the world—let them help you find understanding

HERE, in his own words, is the essence of what each one of these great men thought—to help you formulate your own philosophy of life. These are precious books for all thoughtful persons. They are to be read over a period of many months, even years. They are books to be dipped into only when you feel like it. There are hundreds of passages in them that you will want to read and re-read and ponder upon. They are to be read aloud sometimes, they are to be shared with those nearest to you. They are "desert-isle" books, which over the years will probably become prized more than anything in your library.

You buy many Club selections ANYWAY—why not get those you want from the Club, often PAY LESS, and share in the Club's book-dividends which totalled $16,000,000 last year.

YOU do not pay any fixed yearly sum, as you do in subscribing to a magazine. You simply pay for the particular books you decide to take, and you have a very wide choice among the important books published each year.

The Club's five judges, every month, choose an outstanding book (sometimes a double selection) as the Book-of-the-Month*; in addition, the Club makes available "special members' editions" of many widely-discussed books—making a total of fifty to sixty books each year from which you may choose.

If you buy as few as four of these books in any twelve-month period, you get the full privileges of Club membership. There are sure to be, among so many good books, at least four that you would buy anyway.

All you pay is the regular retail price—frequently less—for the Book-of-the-Month, whenever you decide to take it. (A small charge is added to cover postage and other mailing expenses.) Then, with every two books you buy (from among the monthly selections and "special members' editions" made available) you receive—free—one of the Club's book-dividends.

These are beautiful library volumes, like THE WORLD'S GREAT THINKERS, sometimes highly popular best-sellers. Why not get these books, without a penny's extra cost, and build up for yourself a full library of fine editions of great books? In the meantime, you are buying whatever good current new books you want for your library and paying less for many of them than you otherwise would.

Hundreds of thousands of book-reading families now use this sensible service. We suggest you try it for a short time, and see how it works.

JUST A LITTLE MORE OFF THE TOP, AS THE BARBERS SAY. THEN IT'LL DO

SEEMS LIKE I GET MORE OFF THIS END THAN THE OTHER. WELL, THAT'S EASY TO REMEDY

HOW DOES IT LOOK, ED?

FIRST RATE, JOE, ONLY YOU'VE TAKEN MORE OFF THE OTHER END THAN YOU HAVE THIS ONE

I'LL MAKE THIS BLIGHTED THING COME OUT EVEN IF IT IS THE LAST THING I DO

GETTING RID OF YOUR HEDGE, MR. GREEN? I ALWAYS THOUGHT IT LOOKED REAL NICE

WHAT HAVE YOU BEEN DOING TO THIS HEDGE? OH, OH, OH!

NOW, DON'T SAY IT! LOT OF DEAD WOOD HERE. HAD TO COME OUT. GROW BETTER NOW

JULY-11-'48

THE DEAD WOOD IS IN YOUR HEAD! I'LL PUT THIS MURDEROUS WEAPON BACK IN THE TOOL CHEST

OKAY. BUT IT STILL LOOKS SCRAGGY. I OUGHT TO FINISH IT

Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAROLD R. FOSTER

Registered U. S. Patent Office

Synopsis: PRINCE VALIANT'S FIRST QUEST SINCE HIS RETURN IS TO AVENGE AN INSULT TO HIS KING. THAT SEVERAL HARDY KNIGHTS HAVE FAILED TO RETURN ALIVE FROM THIS MISSION DAMPENS HIS ENTHUSIASM NOT A BIT. ALETA GAYLY PACKS HIS SADDLEBAGS.

CHATTERING MERRILY, SHE BUCKLES ON THE SINGING SWORD' AS IF HE WERE ONLY GOING HUNTING. AND WHY NOT? IS NOT VAL THE BRAVE, THE STRONG, THE UNCONQUERABLE?

THEN HE IS GONE. AND COLD FEAR CLUTCHES HER HEART. ALWAYS, AS LONG AS HE LIVES, THIS MAN OF HERS WILL GO LAUGHING INTO DANGER, EVERY PERIL A CHALLENGE, EVERY HAZARD A JOY.

VAL PICKS OSK, ONE OF THE YOUNG VIKINGS, AS HIS SQUIRE. OH! IT IS GOOD TO BE ALIVE, TO BE YOUNG, TO RIDE AT ADVENTURE ONCE AGAIN!

WELL INTO CORNWALL THEY MEET A SERF WITH LASH MARKS ON FACE AND ARMS. "WHERE IS THE CASTLE OF KING TOURIEN," ASKS VAL. "THREE MILES, AT THE END OF THIS ROAD . . . . AND IT IS INDEED THE END," HE MUTTERS.

A MILE FARTHER ON VAL HALTS. "A FOOTPRINT, MADE BUT A MOMENT AGO, FOR IT IS STILL FILLING WITH WATER, ITS EDGES STILL CRUMBLING. IT CAME TOWARD US, YET WE SAW NO ONE. HE MUST HAVE HIDDEN. WE ARE SPIED UPON!"

THEN FROM BEHIND THEM COMES A POOR IMITATION OF A BIRD CALL. "A SIGNAL! THERE WILL BE DANGER AHEAD!"

THE NEXT BEND IN THE ROAD BRINGS THEM SOME ADVERTISING SIGNS. "LOOKS LIKE BAIT FOR A TRAP," REMARKS VAL.

WE GO TO THE CONVENTION

I'M SIGNING YOUR NAME TO THIS CHECK, FREDDIE! YOU HAVEN'T SPENT TWO BUCKS ALL THE TIME WE'VE BEEN HERE!

COME ON, SLUG! YOU AND NUTTSIE GO OVER TO YOUR OWN ROOM! I'VE GOT A LONG-DISTANCE CALL IN ON THAT PHONE FOR SUSIE. MYRTLE WON'T GO TO BED UNTIL I TELL HER GOOD NIGHT!

THAT'S THE NUMBER SHE GAVE ME!

THAT'S THE NUMBER I'M CALLING, BUT THEY SAY IT'S SCHULTZ'S FISH MARKET!

I STILL THINK SOME OF US OUGHT TO GO DOWN TO THE MEETING, JUST IN CASE THE BOSS COUNTS NOSES!

DID ANY OF YOU FELLOWS SEE ARNOLD'S BATHROBE?

THAT'S GIN!!

IT WAS JUST THE SAME OLD BANQUET, ALICE. FILLET OF CATERPILLAR WITH FRENCH-FRIED GRUBS AND FROZEN BUTTERFLIES!

YOU'D BETTER GO ON UP TO BED, MYRTLE! PAPA IS PROBABLY TOO BUSY TO CALL US TONIGHT!

WHY WRITE TO BESSIE, NOW? YOU'LL BE HOME TOMORROW NIGHT!

I'LL DATE IT FRIDAY AND BLAME IT ON THE POST OFFICE!

I NEVER WORRY ABOUT SLUG WHEN HE'S ALONE, BUT NUTTSIE THINKS OF THE DARNDEST THINGS!

AND IF I DON'T GET A LETTER FROM MAC IN THE MORNING, I'M GOING TO FORGET ALL ABOUT MY DIET AND EAT CAKE AND EVERYTHING!

RELAX, MINNIE! I WORRIED ABOUT ARNOLD FOR FORTY YEARS AND NOTHING EVER HAPPENED.

I HOPE WALLACE DOESN'T TRY TO BUY ME ANYTHING. HE DOESN'T HAVE ANY IDEA OF COLOR

ROBERT ALWAYS GETS THE WRONG SIZE

LET'S BUY HATS!

GEORGE WILL PROBABLY COME HOME WITH A BRIGHT IDEA THAT I DRIVE OVER TO MOTHER'S FOR A FEW DAYS — BUT I WANT TO GO SOMEPLACE WHERE THEY'LL SEND MY BREAKFAST UP TO THE ROOM

LET'S FLY SOME-PLACE!
